SINGER & CO'S.
Letter "A" Sewing Machine.

WITH ALL HE IMPROVEMENTS.

Is the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful, substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist-thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality.

The balance of the purchase money is payable at any time within twenty years, at the option of the purchaser, if interest at seven per cent. per annum is annually paid in advance.

Interest to the first day of June, 1861, must be paid at the time of the purchase

Persons purchasing lands upon which other parties have made improvements, will be required to pay the owner of the same the appraised value of the improvements, one half to be paid at the time of the sale, and the balance within six months thereafter, with interest at seven per cent. per annum.

In case the person occupying or improving the land has damaged the same, the appraised amount of damage will be deducted from his improvements, and when the occupant is the purchaser, the damage will be added to the price of the land

No lands will be sold for less than the appraised value.

Purchase money payable in specie and legal tender notes.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do: will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever! ! !

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

Valuable Lands for Sale.

BY direction of the Hon Secretary of the Interior, the undersigned will receive sealed bids for the purchase of any or all of the lands hereinafter described, they being among the choicest and best farming land in Minnesota.

These lands comprise what are known as the Winnebago Trust Lands in the State of Minnesota, and will be sold to the highest and best bidder in tracts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres each, under the provisions of a treaty concluded with the Winnebago Indians, April 15th, 1859, and an act of Congress, approved February 21st 1863, entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their Reservation, in Minnesota, for their benefit."

No bid will be entertained at a rate less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

In case a bid is accepted, the party making the same will be notified as soon thereafter as practicable. If within thirty days after such notice the party shall fail to make payment to the undersigned, the land for which such bid was made will be subject to sale to any other person.

Patents will be issued and transmitted to purchasers as soon after payment as the same can be prepared. Payments may be made either in cash or in the certificates of indebtedness of the Winnebago Indians, issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for the debt of said Indians, and secured to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said lands by the third article of the treaty above mentioned. The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. All bids must be sealed and addressed to the undersigned, Washington City, D. C. and endorsed "Bid for Winnebago Tract Land."

HARPER'S

New Monthly Magazine.

Critical Notices of the Press.

The volumes Bound constitute of themselves a library of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston [illegible]

The most popular Monthly in the world.—N. Y. Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People; and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each Number contains fully 144 pages reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good woodcuts; and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature.—Trubner's Guide to American Literature London.

No Magazine in Europe or America is so well known, none has half as many readers; and, we may safely say, none has received so large a tribute of admiration from the cultivated class, that delighted in a healthy, diversified, elevating periodical literature. It is the foremost magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant(Baltimore.)

TERMS.

The papers of permanent value which have been published in almost every Number render a complete set of Harper's Magazine a desirable acquisition to public or private library. The Publishers can supply complete sets, or any number from the commencement. For Twenty five cents they will send any number, by mail, post-paid. Any Volume, containing six Numbers will be mailed post-paid, to any place in the United States within 1500 miles of New York, for two dollars and fifty cents. Complete sets, now comprising Twenty-five Volumes, will be sent by express, the freight at the expense of the purchaser, for one dollar and eighty-eight cents per Volume.

One copy, one year, $3.00; Two copies one year $5.00; Harper's Magazine and Harper's Weekly, one year, $5.00

An extra copy, gratis, for every club of Ten Subscribers, at $2,50 each, or, 11 copies for $25,00

Clergymen and teachers supplied at $2.50 a year. The Semi-Annual Volumes Bound in cloth, $2,50 per Volume. Muslin covers, 25 cents each. Nett. When ordered sent by mail, eight cents additional must be remitted or postage. The Postage upon Harper's Magazine must be paid at the office where it is received. The postage is thirty-six cents a year, or nine Cents for three months.

THE MAIDEN'S PRAYER.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

She arose from her delicious sleep,
And put away her soft brown hair,
And in a tone as low and deep
As love's first whisper, breathed a prayer,
Her snow-white hands together pressed,
Her blue eye sheltered in the lid,
The folded linen on her breast
Just swelling with the charms it hid.

And from her long and flowing dress
Escaped a bare and snowy foot,
Whose step upon the earth did press
Like a sweet snow-flake, soft and mute,
And then from slumbers soft and warm,
Like a young spirit fresh from heaven,
She bowed that young and matchless form
And humbly prayed to be forgiven.

Oh God! if souls as pure as these Need daily mercy from thy throne—
If she upon her bended knees,
Our holiest and purest one:
She with a face so clear and bright,
We deem her some stray child of light;
If she, with these soft eyes and tears,
Day after day, in her young years,
Must kneel and pray for grace from thee,
How hardly if she win not heaven,
Will our wild errors be forgiven.

THE EASTFORD SCHOOL.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

Marian Westbury sat alone in her little chamber in the fourth story of the great boarding-house on Hanover street. She was deeply engaged in thinking over her past life, and perhaps looking out to the future with something of fearful apprehension.

Only nineteen years had passed over her head, but in that short space she had seen much of what the world calls trouble; and to death and sorrow she was no stranger. Her beloved parents, and two lovely sisters had she gazed upon in their coffins; and recently, her heart had been again torn by the loss of her only remaining relative, her brother William.

Now, she was alone in the world—no kindly arm between her tender form and the rude tumult of business strife—no gentle hand to smooth the asperity of her pathway, and support her weak steps over the thorny roads appointed to the feet of all the earthly born

She was thrown upon her own energies; she must toil for the very bread that was requisite to sustain life. Henceforth, she must decide for herself, be her own counsellor, and look to her own resources for all the good that was to comfort her desolate lot.

No wonder, then, that her fair brow was often shadowed, and her soft eyes often moistened with tears; no wonder that, delicately nurtured as she had been, she shrank from the sternness of life, and looked wistfully to the quiet grave-rest of her beloved ones.

If you had seen Marian Westbury, you would have called her very fair, if not beautiful. Her complexion was clear and pale, her features regular, her eyes deep, liquid brown, and her hair the shade of a ripe chesnut husk. That hair, so beautiful in its lights and shadows, should have fallen over her shoulders in its own natural ringlets, but now she had knotted it away and confined it at the back of her head by a simple ribbon of sable crape.

Five days before, she had engaged herself to the school committee of Eastford to take the charge of their district school, and now she was waiting the arrival of Dr. Selwyn, the chairman of the board, who had offered to take her over to Eastford in his chaise.

The doctor was a punctual man, and the face of the young teacher had interested him greatly, so she had not long to wait.

It was a beautiful day towards the close of November; the trees sparkled with frost; the light wind tossed the leaves hither and thither like great flocks of ground birds, and the sky was as blue as the heart of the ocean.

The ride over the smooth, hard turnpike, behind the spirited black horse, was charming, and the fresh air imparted color to Marian's cheeks, and lustre to her eyes. The Doctor kept up a sort of desultory conversation with her as an excuse for frequently turning his eyes toward her; but, as they neared Eastford he saw that the girl's face lost its animated expression and grew sad again. The trouble came out in words:

"Is the school a difficult one, Dr. Selwyn?"

"Hardly that," replied the Doctor cheerfully, "though I will not deceive you about it. It is not the easiest school in the world; but, then you would want a little difficulty to triumph over, would you not?"

"Perhaps so; I hardly know. In what does the promised trouble consist?"

"In one scholar, my dear Miss Westbury, Willis Thorncliff. He is considered rather refractory I believe."

Willis Thorncliff? How large is he?"

The doctor laughed: "Full six feet high, and completely made. One of the bone and sinew of the country. But the spirit of resistance is in him, and, come what will, he never yields to a positive command. He has been through Bowdoin, and still persists in honoring our district school with his attendance. His father is the golden nabob of Eastford, and that excuses Willis' eccentricities. But see, here we are at Squire Mason's and this is your boarding place.

The Doctor sprung out and assisted Marian to alight.

She was cordially received by the Squire's wife, and made at home in a warm corner of the great kitchen, whose walls gleamed blood red in the radiance of a huge maple-wood fire.

Mrs. Mason answered her inquiries touching the school, much after Dr. Selwyn manner; in fact, her account of Willis Thorncliff was rather more disheartening than that of the Doctor. He was a "haughty, big-feeling, high-spirited fellow, and had driven away every teacher that had undertaken the Eastford school for the last ten years!"

Depressed and sad, Marian retired to her chamber, and revolved in her mind the difficulties of her new position. But, rack her brain as she would, she could decide on no definite course of action. she could only offer up a petition to Heaven for aid, and rest her case there.

"Lord bless you, Squire!" said Mrs. Mason to her husband, after Marian had retired, "she'll never keep that school a single day! He'll scare her out of her senses before the first forenoon's over!"

"I dunno, mother," said the squire scratching his head philosophically, "these little peaked women has got a powerful sight of grit in 'em sometimes! There's no knowing how things will turn!"

Monday morning came, and Marian set out for the school-house. Her heart was filled with apprehension, but she determined to do her duty without flinching; and trust the issue to divine Providence.

It was no trifling ordeal for that timid, sensitive girl to walk up the long school-room to the desk, exposed to the scrutiny of the fifty pairs of eyes that sought her face with critical pertinacity. Controling her emotion, she stood still, and ran her eyes over the entire flock, from bench to bench, searching for Willis Thorncliff. There was but one scholar in the room that answered Dr. Selwyn's "six feet" description, and he looked tractable enough, with his sleepy, blue eyes, flaxen hair, and almost stupid grin.

She called the school to order, and proceeded to take the names. The flaxen-haired fellow gave his, James Grant. Willis Thorncliff was not present.

Just as she had finished the registration, the door opened gently, and a young man in a heavy fur coat, entered the room; and, hat in hand, advanced to the stove. He returned Marian's gaze with a polite inclination of the head, and having warmed himself, he threw off his wrappings, quietly took a seat and was soon apparently absorbed in the work before him.

Marian observed him closely, surprised to find him so different from the coarse, brutal youth she had expected to see. He was tall and finely formed; with a handsome, haughty face, perfectly Grecian features, intensely brillant eyes, and masses of close-cut, curling brown hair.

The young teacher resumed her pencil and paper, and went up to the new comer's seat.

"Your name, if you please?" she said,

"Willis Thorncliff, madam," his voice was clear and fine, and had a tone of respect. She wrote out the name.

"What studies will you pursue?"

He held up Sophocles, and a volume of Tacitus.

"I will commence with these; the last of the term I shall probably take the rhetorical works of Cicero,"

Marian laid down the books, and replied quietly though with decision.

"Neither Latin nor Greek is taught in the district schools of this State. The law does not require it. You will select something else."

He glanced at her face with a quizzical smile: but there was something in the steady light of her eye, and the firm grasp of her small hand on the register she held.

"Very well, then. I will read in Webster's Spelling Book."

"At your pleasure. I shall always recommend my pupils to attempt nothing beyond their depth!" She drew out her watch. "Your lesson will come at ten o'clock. Commence at the twentieth page, if you please."

She turned down the aisle. Thorncliff gazed after her with a flushed face, and flashing eye. All present expected an outburst; but nothing of the kind occurred. He took the spelling book, and commenced patiently conning his task. At the appointed hour, he read and spelled, with the utmost gravity, and returned to his seat.

This course of things continued for a week, during which the whole school was in a state of profound surprise. Eastford school had never been kept three days before Willis Thorncliff had mastered the teacher, and dismissed him from further attendance! It was passing strange! The old folks talked about it by their warm firesides; and the young folks discussed it at the weekly sewing meetings. Thorncliff, himself, kept silence. No one ever heard him mention Miss Westbury's name, either in terms of praise or detraction. And at the school-house all went on quietly.

Christmas was close at hand. Everybody in Eastford was in a flutter of preparation. There was to be a grand musical entertainment at the City Hall, in B——. A celebrated vocalist from beyond the sea, whose fame had preceded her to America, was to give one of her choice concerts, and all lovers of music were on tiptoe to attend.

Marian read the programme for the evening, and laid it aside with a sigh. There was once a time when her face was a familiar one at such gatherings; when affectionate kindred hastened to offer everything that could contribute to her pleasure, and with fond care sought ever for opportunities of increasing her happiness. Now, she was an exile from the halls of festivity, a day laborer for bread, alone and uncared for! Something of this gloomy reflection it was that saddened her brow, and made her step slow and listless as she went to her school the next morning. She scarcely looked up at the sound of footsteps beside her, and replied indifferently to Willis Thorncliff's courteous good morning.

He walked by her side, remarking on the beauty of the morning; and the crystalline appearance of the trees, every twig and bough of which were enamelled, with ice. His cheerfulness only made her more gloomy.

The contrast between their two lives made her very thoughtful perhaps rebellious. He, handsome, talented, and wealthy, at the topmost round of the ladder of society, an idler in the world's busy hive of toilers; treading on velvet carpets, drinking from silver goblets, and licensed to spend his time as his eccentric will dictated. She, poor, desolate, alone, must make her own way, and hoard each hard-earned dollar with jealous care, lest with all her labor she should suffer for life's necessaries!

As they neared the school house, Thorncliff said, abruptly:

"To-morrow is Christmas."

"I believe so."

"There will be no school, I suppose?"

"No; it is not customary."

"There is to be a concert at B——, Christmas eve; will you attend?"

"No."

"Indeed! May I ask why not?"

"Mr, Thorncliff," she said, impatiently, "you are in an inquiring mood this morning, and I will do my best to satisfy your curiosity. I I do not go to the concert because I have no taste for walking ten miles on foot, and alone!"

"If you will only let me take you over! Sister Isabel is going with Uncle Mark, and I shall be alone. Will you not go with me?"

His manner was somewhat embarrassed, and quite different from his usual self-possessed bearing. Marian blushed beneathed the gaze he fixed on her face, and replied:

"It would give me great pleasure to go, but—"

"I am answered!" he said gayly; "to-morrow afternoon, at four I shall come for you. Remember!"

They had by this time arrived at the school-house door, their interview was necessarily ended.

The forenoon session commenced. There was one rule to which Marian strictly adhered, one thing which the students were specially prohibited from doing. The school-house had been newly painted and varnished, and the committee had enjoined it on the teacher to prohibit any marking or whittling of the desks. And in turn, Marian had imposed this command on her pupils, promising to ferule the first one who was found guilty of the forbidden misdemeanor.

Judge then, of her distress, when glancing up from her book, she saw Willis Thorncliff industriously cutting away at his desk with his gold-mounted knife, apparently unconscious of the observance of any person She hesitated but a moment, then stepping lightly up the aisle, she stood by his side.

He had cut the single letter M, clearly and distinctly in the wood of the desk. She spoke his name—

"Mr. Thorncliff!"

He started up, his face flushed burning hot, and his eyes fell before the silent reproach of hers.

"Mr. Thorncliff," she resumed, "you have trangressed a law of the school. You know the penalty?"

"I do, and am ready to receive it."

"Come out on the floor."

He obeyed, and followed her to the platform in front of the desk. She took up her ferule, and stood beside him, her slight figure hardly reaching to his shoulder.

"Scholars," she said, "Mr. Thorncliff has disobeyed me, and I must punish him. I trust I shall have no occasion for doing a like thing again, while the term continues."

He held out his hand white and delicate as her own. She struck it a sharp, quick blow, then another; the skin was broken, and the blood trickled down his fingers in a crimson stream. Not a muscle of his face changed; she struck him thrice; her face pale as death, her own hand trembling like fragile leave in a rough gale, she dropped the ferule—looked up at his immovable countenance, and said.

'You can go to your seat.'

He obeyed, tying his handkerchief negligently around the ill-used hand. The day dragged slowly and miserably away to Marian, and half that night she spent in tears—tears for the shedding of which she could give no reason.

Christmas dawned cold and clear. Squire Mason took Marian to church in the great double sleigh, snugly ensconced beside Mrs. Mason, and then, after the services, the worthy couple set the teacher down at their house, and themselves went to pass the day and evening with a married daughter, living some nine miles away.

Marian established herself on the roomy settee before the kitchen fire, and tried to read but the letters swam before her eyes, and she closed the book in despair.

She made no preparation for the concert; after what occured yesterday, how could she think Thorncliff would fulfil his engagement?

Four o'clock struck. The sharp ring of bells smote on the frosty air, and directly the kitchen door opened and Willis Thorncliff appeared.

'Come, Miss Westbury; I am ready for our journey. Wrap your self up well, for it is a keen air!'

Marian's hood and cloak lay on the table, where she had put them on her return from church. He took them up, and assisted her in tying them on. He handed her into the sleigh, tucked up the bear-skin with thoughtful care, lifted the reins over the back of the fine span of grays, and they were off.

Scarcely a word of conversation passed between them during the ride to B——. The concert hall was crowded, 'the world' was out; the light was cheering, the singing superb, the applause perfectly au fait. So said the report in the next morning's Herald.

To Marian, that concert was a treat; a cheering episode in a momentous life, which hitherto had contained more of suffering than enjoyment.

It was over at last, and they were out beneath the stars once more. The night was moonless; but the white snow and the twinkle of the stars made a glaring twilight; and the ride over the smooth-beaten path, in the fresh bracing air, should have been an inspiration in itself.

But Marian's heart was reverting to the gay scene which she had just left; and from that merry contemplation, her thoughts went out to that lonely grave where, but a few months before they had laid her tender mother. The tears coursed violently down her cheeks; she could not repress them. Her companion leaned over, and looked in her face, but made no remark. He drew up the robes, however, and held them over her with his unoccupied hand, and at the door of her boarding-place, they parted with a simple good night, neither having alluded to the affair of the previous afternoon.

The next day Thorncliff's seat was empty. Marian asked no one why he was absent, but two or three days afterwards she causally learned that he had, with his sister Isabel, gone to Concord to spend the holidays.

The school went on now without hindrance. Mrs. Mason kept a day of rejoicing over the departure of the refractory Thorncliff; and Marian was congratulated by more than one well meaning person, on the easy way in which she had got rid of him.

But somehow, the little school-house looked strangely lonesome and desolate to the young teacher. There was an indefinite sense of his following her everywhere; and though Dr. Selwyn paid her frequent visits, and gave her almost daily sleigh-rides, there was the same feeling at her heart.

The holidays were eight weeks long. At least that period passed before the Thorncliffs returned to Eastford. And Marian's school was only one week longer.

She could not help looking for Willis in his old accustomed seat, the morning after his arrival at home; but he did not come that day, nor the next.

As her school was nearly ended, she desired to present each pupil with some slight token of her regard, and late one afternoon in March, she set forth on foot to the village, to purchase some little books and rewards of merit. It was some time before she concluded her business, for her purse was scantily supplied, and she was obliged to consult the condition of that, rather than her own inclination.

Night had nearly set in when she was ready to start for home. It had been an unusally mild day for the season—the last of a week of warm days—and the roads were half impassible from the mud and water. By taking a by-path, and crossing the river on the ice, just above the mill-dam, Marian could shorten her walk full three-quarters of a mile, and as she was late, she decided on that course.

The heat of the past few days had weakened the ice, and brought up some water on its surface, but she had not a doubt of its security so hurrying past the old mill, she struck into the path, and, after a few minutes' brisk walk, reached the ice. The treacherous winding-sheet of the river looked ominously black and forbidding in places; but the girl gave its appearance little heed, and hurried on. Suddenly, when about half way across, she felt the slippery mass tremble and settle beneath her feet. There was a dull, heavy crash—a bubbling roar—the whole flimsy fabric plunged, broken and rent, into the embracing waters, and Marian, uttering one smothered, shuddering cry for help, went down!

The catastrophe was witnessed by half a score of persons from the shore, but they all stood still—every man of them! Each one afraid to risk his life for the vange and uncertain chance of saving that of a fellow-creature.

Aye, all sood still—save one; and that one, throwing off his coat as he went, sprung down the steep bank with a bound, and plunged fearlessly in amid the crashing of ice, and the surging rush of the waters.

Right gallantly he put back the opposing obstacles which cut through his garments at every stroke—right nobly and bravely he pushed on until he reached the spot where the helpless girl had gone down. She rose to the surface far below—a little more, and she would be swept over the dam, and dashed upon the fearful jagged rocks below! Already the strong fingers of the under-current had lain hold on her! A cry of horror rang through the assembled crowd followed by a shout of triumph.

The bold swimmer had reached her, and while one arm encircled her slender waist, the other struck out for the shore. It was a long and weary battle, but it was well and valiantly fought, for the daring rescuer knew that on the strength of that unaided arm hung the chances of life and death! In spite of all that fierce avalanche of ice, in spite of that flood of opposing waters, he reached the shore, and with his remaining strength bore his senseless burden into the nearest house.

And people crowed around Willis Thorncliff, calling him a hero, and lauding his bravery in no measured terms.

A neighboring physician was called in, and after a little while Marian was restored to consciousness. And the first word she spoke was the name of Thorncliff.

He had changed his drenched clothes for a suit of his host's garments, and at the sound of her voice he came and stood by her side.

'I must thank you for my life,' she said; 'how can I prove my gratitude? What shall I say?'

'That you will punish me no more, Marian, come what may,' he replied.

She sobbed deeply.

'And it was that same right hand which saved me from death!' She pressed her lips to it as it rested on the arm of the sofa.

'Mr. Thorncliff,' she said, after a little pause, 'you have laid me under a great obligation. How can I repay you?'

'Some time I will tell you,' he said, stooping over and looking into her downcast eyes.

As soon as the physician deemed it prudent, Mr. Thorncliff's sleigh was brought round, and Marian, closely enveloped in blankets was placed within it. Thorncliff took the seat beside her, and supported her in his arms, while the docile horse had things pretty much his own way.

'Marian,' said Thorncliff, at last, 'you asked me how you could prove your gratitude. There is but one way. Give me the right to love you, wholly and entirely; give me the right to call you mine, now and forever!

Her hand slid into his; there was no other answer. He bent his face to hers.

"Is Marian mine?"

"She is yours."

And this was their betrothal ;not another word.

Perfect happiness is mute; she expressing her feelings by silence rather than by words.

They went past Squire Mason's—the horse turned up the broad avenue leading to Thorncliff Hall.

"Where are you taking me?" asked Marian.

"I am taking you hmoe—to my home—our home, Marian,"

"But your parents?—your sister, Isabel?"

"Know all about it darling, and have long known it. I have their sanction and blessing!

He lifted her from the sleigh and bore her into the family sitting-room, where he placed her in an arm-chair by the fire, and then said, with manly frankness:

"Father, mother, this is Marian Westbury, who has this night promised to redeem my life from its present worthlessness."

Mrs. Thorncliff received the orphan in a warm embrace, and Judge Thorncliff kissed her forehead, and gave her his blessing. Isabel met her with all the joyousness of a happy child—and then the two ladies carried her off to a warm chamber, where in consideration of her cold bath, she was placed in bed, with Isabel for a companion. And twice during the night, Mrs. Thorncliff stole in from her own room, to look at the sleepers locked in each other's arms, and felt very thankful that Willis had, at last, an object in life.

In the morning, the lovers had a long private interview, during which, probably, many interesting details were discussed and settled. But with these things, readers, you and I have but little to do. Willis Thorncliff's confession of a mis-spent life has something to do with our story, however.

"Marian," he said, "I loved you from the first, and for that reason the refractory scholar gave you little trouble. The day you punished me, I was trying to cut your name on the desk, and you may well imagine that I felt particularly abashed on being discovered, That feruling made a man of me! Since leaving college, I have occasionally attended school here, because I liked to puzzle and conquer the self-important school-masters, and because I was idle. This aimless life is ended. To-morrow I commence the study of law with my father. Yesterday I saw you set out for the village, and I followed, with the intention of driving you home. You managed to get the start of me, but I was in season to save my existence from that shipwreck! Thank God for it!"

Marian Westbury finished her school, and so well satisfied was Dr. Selwyn with the appearance of the pupils on examination day, that he offered the teacher his heart and hand, and a life-interest in his business; but punctual in most things, the Doctor was a little too late for once in his life.

Willis Thorncliff is now a rising young lawyer. Isabel is the wife of the Hon. Robert Singleton and in the quiet splendor of Thorncliff Hall, Marian Thorncliff lives in a world of love—the cherished daughter of her parents, and the idol of her husband.

A GOOD CAMP STORY.—A correspondent of a Philadelphia paper attached to the army of the Potomac, writes the following:

"To show you how rumors will spread in the army I will illustrate an incident. The lady friends of our fifth Corporal sent him a box; among the many good things in the said box was a life size doll, dressed in Zouave uniform which they won at a soldier's fair in your city. The Corporal after getting the box, was taken sick; the boys started the rumor that the Corporal was a women and give birth to a boy. The rumor spread like wild-fire; hundreds flocked to our quarters to see the wonderful phenomenon—a new born babe—but we guarded the tent with zealous care, only allowing the pryers to catch a passing glimpse of the supposed mother and babe. We could find a number of men to swear they had seen both. But the cream of the joke was to come off; the Corporal received a ten days' furlough; although it was the mother going home with her babe; some had it, that she was a rich heiress escaping from a tyrant father; but hundreds believed in the mother Corporal and young recruit of Co. I, of the Zouave d'Afrique."

THE RULES.—A lady who has just opened a boarding house somewhere up town has posted up the following "Rules and Regulations:"

"The gentlemen must not put their feet on the mantel in the winter nor out of the window in summer; and the lady must not write her name on the glass with a quartz pin. If she uses an air tight, she must regulate the damper herself, and not ring every ten minutes for the chambermaid. The single gentlemen must not play the trombone nor make love to the servants, nor comb his whiskers at the table. If he does he wont answer. The lady must not turn up her nose at anything upon the table, unless she has a natural pug; and none of the party must drink with a mouthful of victuals, nor must they fight for the top buckwheat cake. Terms liberal and paid in advance."

A poor Yankee being asked the nature of his distress, replied, "that he had five outs and one in," to wit, out of money, and out of clothes; out at the toes; out of credit, and in debt

Mankato, Friday, Nov. 6 1863.

NICOLLET COUNTY

Our information from St. Peter is to the effect that the people in this county both Democrats and Republicans have generally given Mr. Swift their support for State Senator. In this the people of that county have acted wisely. They have not been regardless of their own national interests. The people of St. Peter, overcoming all political and personal differences, have always been united when the interests of their town were involved. Had the people of Mankato acted with one half the wisdom and good sense that the voters of St. Peter have always shown, this town to-day would have had more than double its present population. But we must not give it up, the people here will one day find out what is for their interests. We hope they may discover this before it is too late. In the mean time would it not be wisdom, as the session of Congress approaches, for the citizens here to make an effort to secure the Transit Railroad at this point. We assure our readers that this cannot be done unless a better and more harmonious feeling exists in our town. We know what we say. Railroad men will not encounter the opposition which from present indications they would meet with in this community. Let us become united for once on this vital business. Set about the work in earnest, and we will yet succeed, in getting a Railroad, and in promoting the prosperity of our town.

ELECTION RETURNS.

Minnesota like the other loyal States of the Northwest has spoken in thunder tones in favor of crushing out the rebellion. The Union majority in the State will not be less than 10,000.

The Copperheads have received a death-stroke, and have found out that there is still a God in Israel.

BLUE EARTH COUNTY.

The returns from the county have not all come in, but the Union State ticket will have about 300 majority.

For Senator, Mr. Coffin will go out of the County with 105 majority. As far as heard from his majority is 72, with 2 towns yet to hear from.

On the Representatives ticket, as far as heard from, Russell has 128 majority, Phelps 201, Talbot 196.

The Republican County ticket is elected by heavy majorities, with the exception of Treasurer who will have from 10 to 15 majority.

LE SUEUR COUNTY,

The returns come in slow. The vote on the State ticket will show a Republican majority.

The following table shows the vote by towns as far as received. Porter has a majority of 61. In the towns yet to hear from he received heavy majorities last year, and will probably get sufficient this year to overcome the majority in Blue Earth County. We concede the election of Mr. Porter.

	Porter.	Coffin.	Wiswell	Meagher	Butters	Talbot	Phelps	Russell
Le Sueur,	59	22	51	59	52	10	21	21
Wash'tn	39	1	39	49	40
Ottawa,	21	67	20	15	27	58	73	67
Lyrone,	88	20
Sharon,	43	54
Kasota,	44	52
Clevel'd,	59	65
Cordova,	26	15

SIBLEY COUNTY.

Will give Mr. Donahue about 350 majority.

NICOLLET COUNTY.

The Unionists of this County stood together and gave Mr. Swift over 300 majority. St. Peter gave him 158. "United we stand."

WATONWAN COUNTY

Polled 25 votes, two of which were for the copperhead ticket.

FARIBAULT COUNTY

Has gone Republican. There was only one ticket here. Mr. Latimer, for Representative is elected.

HENNEPIN COUNTY.

In St. Anthony the Republican State ticket has 19 majority.

Pillsbury, Union, for Senator has 115 majority.

The balance of the County ticket is Republican by about 20 majority.

DAKOTA COUNTY.

The State Ticket has about 115 majority.

The County ticket is elected by a large majority.

RAMSEY COUNTY.

Ramsey County has redeemed herself.

It gives 500 for the Union—a gain of 1,000 since last year.

The issue of this county was Union against Jeff. Davis, and the Union has triumphed.

WINONA COUNTY.

The Republican State Ticket has 90 majority. Norton's majority over Simpson is 250.

GOODHUE COUNTY.

Miller's majority in Red Wing is 138. The whole Republican ticket is about the same.

WABASHAW COUNTY.

Miller 148, Welles 52. Balance of the State ticket the same. Republican County ticket all elected.

SCOTT COUNTY.

With three towns yet to hear from. 265 majority for Wells is a fair estimate of the total for Scott county.

CARVER COUNTY

As far as heard from gives Wells a small majority.

Anoka and Wright counties give an average majority of 130, on the Union State ticket.

Stearns county gives Wells 112 majority as far as heard from.

Wisconsin, New York and Massachusetts, have declared in favor of the Union, and elected their entire Union ticket.

NEW SOUTHERN RAILROAD.—Gen. Grant has for some time had in contemplation the rebuilding of the railroad from Vicksburg to Jackson, Miss. It is now almost decided upon. Should it be done, we shall immediately enter upon the possession of Southern Mississippi and nearly all of the State of Alabama. And it is truly to be hoped the road may again be put in perfect repair. If the intention be, as it seems to be, to crush out Bragg and Johnston, no better arrangements could be entered into, provided it can be done quickly enough to accomplish the object.

GEN. OLIVER OTIS HOWARD, of the 11th Army Corps, is about 33 years of age, and a graduate of West Point in 1854. He was acting as assistant Professor of Mathematics in that institution from 1857 until the rebellion broke out, when he accepted the Colonelcy of a Maine regiment of volunteers. His gallantry at the first battle of Bull Run secured his promotion, and his valuable services in the Army of the Potomac are well known. No blame attaches to him for the rout at Chancellorsville. His commission as Major General of Volunteers bears date November 29th, 1862.

Mr. Fred Smithson, of this place, added last week to his fine flock of sheep, two thorough-bred bucks received by express from Illinois, Mr. Cross, who sheared them, tells us that one of the bucks—a yearling—at the last clipping yielded twelve and a half pounds of fleece, the wool measuring five inches in length.

Letter from the Seventh Regiment.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 24 '63.

To the Editor of the Union :

On the 7th inst six companies of our Regiment broke camp at Fort Snelling and on the afternoon of the same day embarked on board the Hudson for La Crosse. At Red Wing we were joined by Company G, Capt Williston, and at the head of the Lake we were transferred to the Northern Belle to continue our journey, while the Hudson returned to Prescott after our regimental transportation.

After paying tribute at "Beef Slough," and some other ports, we arrived at Winona, where Companies B. D. and E., were in waiting to join us "on our way to Dixie." Here we were called to take a solemn parting with our faithful Commander, Col. Miller. The Col. had prepared and had printed, a short Farewell Address, which he distributed among the men, assuring them of his regret at parting and of his confidence and esteem in them as soldiers who would serve their country faithfully ; also a promise that he would visit them annually, &c, &c.

In parting with Col. Miller, the Regiment feel that they are losing a good officer, and a brave man, and hope that in the future he may enjoy the high position in the esteem of every loyal Minnesotian—which his patriotism and untarnished loyalty have so well earned. May God bless our Colonel who has thus found it necessary to resign the command of our Regiment.

From Winona we started about five o'clock P. M. of the 8th, and after various detentions on sand bars &c., we arrived at La Crosse, where we were informed that we must lie over till next day at eleven o'clock A.M. for transportation,

Friday at about a quarter to one P. M. the bell rung, and we were all aboard for Chicago. At Portage City one of those little incidents occurred which forms an oasis in the otherwise dreary pathway of the soldier. The ladies of the city hearing of our coming had prepared an abundance of hot coffee, pies and cakes, upon which to feast their Minnesota brothers and defenders. The various refreshments presented were accepted by our boys with a relish which did credit to their stomachs, at least; and when the bell announced the starting of the train, three hearty cheers for the Ladies of Portage City given with a will, showed that their hearts were in the right place as well. This is the second compliment of the kind the ladies of Portage City have paid to our soldier boys— the gallant Third having been used after the same manner on a former occasion.

I do not know that any of our boys have been moved to resentment for such treatment, for after the war is over, more ties may be added to unite these two northern states of our Republic with bonds indissoluble.

Our train arrived in Chicago about 9 o'clock A. M. on Saturday, where we changed cars and started on for St. Louis our place of destination. Nothing very special transpired as we made our transit across the Sucker State except at Carlinville, the Secesh devil showed his teeth pretty plainly. It was Sabbath morning and our men were hungry after a long, tedious nights ride ; but, though the train halted for some time, it appeared that nothing could be obtained for the satisfaction of the "inner man."

Our men, and officers though, after ransacking the place from one end to the other, succeeded in obtaining, in fragments &c., enough to satisfy their immediate necessities until we could get away from there. On inquiry it was found that Copperheadism had laid its blighting hand upon the place, and farther that the chivalrous Third Minnesota had passed that way less than a year ago and had indulged in a cleaning out process, which had impressed the natives with a wholesome dread of their more northern allies.

Sunday evening about six o'clock we arrived at St. Louis, in a drenching rain, which by no means prepared us for enjoying a nights rest on bare floors and bedless bunks, and we were turned like a lot of hogs, into Schofield's Barracks No. 1. These Barracks have been used as prisons, and more lately as headquarters for straggling men who report themselves, or are sent there by Provost Marshal's for transportation to more southern regiment.

The Barracks were close, damp and dirty and the 7th Minn. Vols., can emphatically say that that their first night in the "Sunny South" was spent in prison.

On Monday morning our regiment was put on duty as Provost Guard, which duty they still continue to perform.

The 9th and 10th Regiments arrived in this city the next day after we came, but the 9th was immediately ordered to Jefferson City, and is now stationed at Lamine Bridge about fifty miles beyond. The 10th was placed in Benton Barracks, then a part of them were put on duty with the 7th, then the whole was ordered to hold themselves in readiness to go to Louisville, Ky., at a moment notice.

Since, that order has been countermanded, and now the whole of the 10th has come out of the Barracks, and taken quarters in the city, and is placed on Provost Guard duty.

Prospects are indicative of our remaining here for some time to come as the secesh have their agents all through the city who are ready to destroy in any way they can, whatever of Government property they can lay hands upon.

Since we have been here one detachment of our men, under Capt. Stephens, Co. B. has visited Washington, Franklin County. A Guard of 30 men under command of Capt. Burt, of Co. C, has gone to Vicksburg with Federal prisoners,—deserters &c., &c. One guard of 9 men and a Corporal went with a paymaster to Leavenworth City, Kansas.

At one time our entire regiment was on guard three days in succession, or at least so many of the men that not near enough remained to relieve the others.

Capt. Hall Co. E, and Lieuts Pratt Co. C, Miller Co. F, Betcher Co. G, Mahew Co. I, and Borer Co. K, have been detached from their respective companies and sent home on recruiting service, Lieut. Rice Co. B, has been detailed to duty in the Provost Marshal's office, and Lieut. Davis of Co. A, has been appointed and detailed as Aid de Camp on Gen. Sanborn's staff. Capt. Williston Co. G, has been detailed to assist Capt. Stewart in the Transportation Office, and Lieut. Buck Co. D, has been detailed to command Company G. Lieut. Densmore being at home sick.

The health of the Regt. is very good at present; there are only 3 sick in Hospital, but from the number complaining, I fear that number may be largely increased.

One man has died since we arrived here. Thompson, a private of Co. E, died day before yesterday of typhoid fever. He had not been well since last winter, when he had the measles, though he had been on duty all summer.

Religiously our Regiment has done but little since our arrival here, owing to our duties being so heavy otherways. We hope however for more privileges in this direction as our duties are better systematized. The Company Barracks for the present must be our chapel and consequently our facilities for religious or moral advancement are not as good as is desirable. Yet we would not have our friends conclude that we are doing nothing in this matter. In God is our, and our Country's hope, and we will not desert him in this our day of trial. We need the aid of all those of our friends who love our Lord Jesus Christ. Brethren pray for us.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 27. 1863. }

To the Editor of the Union :

The shades of nights are fast falling over the city ; closing up one of the most dismal, disagreeable days we have experienced since our advent in St. Louis. The snow has fallen heavily all day, melting as it fell, drenching us to the skin and engendering no very good feelings towards the Butternut colored individuals over which we have to exercise the strictest surveillance both in sunshine and in storm. But the Seventh always reduce their griefs to a philosophic form ; and casing ourselves like Diogenes in his tub—by drawing our heavy sky-blues closely together, we paced our beats through the driving storm with all the stoicism of the ancient philosopher himself. Our guard duties here are arduous and severe.

There are about 18,000 prisoners confined in the different government prisons in St. Louis: 1,000 of these are confined in the Gratiot street prison, once the farmer's Medical College owned by the notorious Dr. McDowell, one of the rankest and dirtiest, of the nigger stealing aristocracy to be found in the state of Missouri. He entered the rebel service at an early stage of the rebellion, whereupon government confiscated his palatial buildings and converted them into strongholds for the safe keeping of cut-throat and rebels

Most of the prisoners confined here are guerillas and Bushwhackers captured in small squads at different points on the rebel frontier. They are treacherous and vindictive, lost to all principles of honor, justice, or right. You cannot trust them outside the range of a revolver. Many of them were caught under arms, with their paroles in their pocket and defiantly boast of the lives they have taken and their great thirst for Yankee blood. They all express the same opinion in regard to the issue of the war : that they are a ruined people, fighting in a hopeless cause, but will fight to the very grave of their country and institutions, and declare their last prayer shall be a curse upon northern institutions and Yankee-heads. These are the openly expressed sentiments of many of the prisoners who are receiving, at our hands, the most uniform good treatment, and all the privileges and immunities for which a prisoner of war could ask. And after a careful consideration of the matter I firmly believe like Parson Brownlow, that they have but one place and one right, that is to hold and occupy for their sole convenience and comfort, the place solely designated for northern Copperheads and southern rebels, ie the lowest pit in Hell. But I must not forget to relate a little incident connected with the prisoners. A squad from one of the negro companies stationed here, were ordered out on fatigue duty near the Myrtle street prison. They were silently attending to their duties, when a big burly negro of Aldermanic proportions rode up on horseback, stopped and entered in conversation with one of the gang. One of the prisoners confined within, thinking to be witty at the expense of the negro, poked his nose through the grates, and halloed out ; "Halloo, there, nigger, is that your Colonel ?" Coffee turned quickly around and displaying his ivory clear back to his palate, replied. "Spees he is our Kurnel, and an cordin to de looks ob you fellers hes got heap moah sense dan sum ob youre Kurnels down souf." The discomfited secesh took his hole amid the loud laughter of the bystanders and the hearty Yah, Yahs of the early heads.

But I must hasten to a close. I wrote you that the 9th and 10th Regiments were ordered to Jefferson City. The order in regard to the 10th was countermanded and they are now here doing Provost duty. The health of the troops is comparatively good, although many are suffering from diarrhoea caused by the change of climate and water. Up to date I have received two copies of the Union and never was an old and valued friend more heartily received. I was much pleased with the issue of the 16th containing the report of the Copperhead mass meeting, and the general outlines of the great speech of little "Bris." "whose eloquence is an honor to his party." Good evening eloquence.

I also learned that a new poetical star has made its appearance in the western heavens in no less a person than our quondam friend Torry.—Torry a poet? Shade of Byron forgive us. For very shame, Oh Republican, that it should remain for the glory of the Democratic party, to discover—dig out, and rouse to action the latent slumbering genius of Torry, our second Byron. And yet a pity that thou, essence of poetry, for surely thou hast joined a bad company, where thy rations will be small, and villainous in quality. Poor Torry—deluded Torry, thou hast surely made a bad trade in swopping thy Republican birthright for a mess of Democratic pottage.

I'll say no more, for fear of calling down the vengeance of the child of song on my devoted head, and will close my letter by congratulating the editor of 'ye winding sheet' on securing the services of so valuable a poet who never more should be allowed to waste his fragrance on the desert air.

M. N. S.,

THE LAST RESORT.—As a party of gentlemen were taking supper at a country inn, one of the guests found the poultry tough. After exercising his ingenuity to no effect in trying to dissect the old fowl, he turned round to the waiter and asked ; "Have you such a thing as a powder flask?" "No sir, we have not ; do you want one?"

"Why yes, I think the shortest way would be to blow the old fellow up."

COPPERHEAD HOGS.—The Howard (Ind.) Tribune tells a good story of an old lady named Woods, living near Greentown, who, having lost two sons in the Union army, is rather less inclined than she might otherwise be to tolerate disloyal demonstrations in her presence. As a wagon load of Copperheads were returning from the Convention at Kokomo last Friday, they passed Mrs. Wood's house just as she was carrying out a pail of 'slop' to her hogs. The Copperheads, looking straight at her, to show that they meant the demonstration for her, hurrahed for Vallandigham. She considering that the shout thrown at her was quite as filthy and a good deal more disgraceful than the slop in her bucket, concluded that she couldn't make a more equal return than to give them the slop, and she did, throwing the whole bucket full over them. The right hogs got it, if those in the pen did lose their supper. Any set of men who will insult a woman, and especially one who has put her heart's blood into the cause of her country, by shouting for a traitor purposely to annoy her, deserves a worse dose than hog slop.

CARVER COUNTY APPLES.—We are indebted to Mr. F. A. Renz of this county for a choice specimen of fall and winter apples which were grown upon his place this season.

They were of more than average size and perfect in shape with a small core, and were of as fine flavor as any imported fruit we have seen. Mr. Renz lives two miles from Chaska, and is a farmer of enterprise and progression, and with such men to direct, Carver county in five years can be made an apple orchard. Knowing that fruit can be raised, a degree of care and patience is all that is necessary to insure every farmer an abundance of fruit. We hope to see the day when we can have an order of 400 bbls filled by taking a half-hour's drive out of town among our neighbors instead of being obliged to send a thousand miles in order to supply our wants.—Herald.

A drafted man in Ct. advertises for a substitute for which he offers to pay $500. But he is a little particular and wants "the right man in the place." He says the substitute must bring sufficient proof that he is the blackest abolitionist in the town where he resides, and he says, 'I want one of the John Brown style,' or one of 'Beecher's' fighting Christians. None other need apply.

GENEROUS OFFER.—Among those who were drafted last week was John Morrissey of pugilistic fame. Upon learning of it, he being at Saratoga, wrote to his banker to furnish a substitute for him who must be 5 feet, 11 inches high, weigh 183 pounds, and be a courageous man in every sense of the word. To such an one he would Pay $5000.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—On Thursday night as an express train of the Racine & Mississippi Railroad was coming in from Savanna, and while running under a bridge between the stations of Davis and Rock Run, a baggage master named James Lee, upon the top of train, was struck on the head by a bridge, from the effects of which he died on Friday morning at Davis Station. We learn from those who were upon the train at the time, that the night was extremely dark, and that Lee was probably taken unawares, as no bridge could be seen in the prevailing gloom. The accident occurred about eleven o'clock P. M The blow inflicted upon the deceased broke the skull across the forehead, making a hideous gash, through which the brain oozed. Notwithstanding the severity of the injury, the unfortunate man lingered, though insensible, until Friday morning. We understand that the deceased was young and unmarried, and greatly respected by his fellow-workers upon the road. His relatives resides in the State of New York.—Racine Journal.

A BADGE OF FEMALE DISLOYALTY.—Not to wear crinoline has become a badge of secesh principle in the Southwest. Although hooped skirts are plentiful at Memphis, the rebel women have agreed among themselves not to wear them. It is their secret sign—their badge—their rebel flag. No longer allowed to flaunt past our brave fellows with their emblems of treason pinned to their dresses and bonnets, they have hit upon this plan. They will wear no more hoops. That is their rebel mark now : and one, the other day, when asked if such was the reason, tossed up her head and said , "Yes it is, and you Yankees can't make us wear hoops, neither."

Soldiers having only a year to serve, are allowed to re-enlist now, and get $402 bounty, by so doing.

A man in Ludlow, while peddling yeast, was struck by lightning, and found himself on the ground, covered with yeast but hardly able to rise.

Gen. Granger and a Negro Sentinel

There is a negro recruiting office on Cedar street, Nashville, at the door of which stands a negro sentinel with his musket. A number of persons standing around, on the 3d inst., took a considerable interest in noting the conduct of officers who passed by. The sentinel saluted every officer who came along, and received the usual recognition. At last Gen. Granger was espied riding up the street, accompanied by a lady, and he immediately became the focus of all eyes. What would he do? Would he return the salutation of the sentinel of African lineage? He did. Returning shortly after, by himself the sentinel saluted him the second time. The General paused, put him through a brief lesson in the manual, and when he brought him to "present arms," saluted him and departed. We hope this example of the worthy General will not be lost on the lesser lights, who appeared to be afraid that the negro will get upon an equality with them, or they with the negro, we don't exactly know which, and who are shocked at the propriety of putting arms in the hands of men of color.—Nashville Union.

GEN. ROSECRANS, SUCCESSOR.—Major Gen. George H. Thomas, the successor of Gen. Rosecrans to the command of the Army of the Cumberland, is spoken of as a splendid officer, and, indeed, the noble manner in which he acquitted himself at Mill Springs, Stone River, and recently at Chickamauga, where his single division toiled the maneuvers of Bragg's entire army, must entitle him to the highest credit. The National Intelligencer, several weeks ago said of him : "He was in the regular army for twelve years without being absent a single day from his post. Just before the breaking out of the war he obtained twelve months leave of absence, but before the expiration of three months of the time Fort Sumter was fired upon when he returned to duty, where he has been ever since, without being absent a single day." This is high praise, but assuredly not undeserved. An officer of the regular service, who has long enjoyed the acquaintance of Gen. Thomas, states that he was eighteen years in the army without being absent from his post. The following anecdote, as serving to show his rare fidelity to the claims of duty is eminently characteristic of the man : While our army was lying at Murfreesboro, Gen. Thomas was asked when he intended to visit Nashville, thirty miles distant. "Why" he replied, "I have been trying for some time to find an excuse to go up there, but cannot do it I am not sick ; have duties here, and really don't know what excuse I could offer for going away." So it would seem that fidelity and courage are qualities not lacking in the composition of Gen. Thomas ; and though he should possess but a tithe of the dash and energy that have distinguished Major Gen. Grant, now his superior, he must win for himself a still prouder name in the annals of the Western army, and exercise a controlling influence in moulding the issues of the Tennessee campaign.

The County Treasurer's Office has been removed to the Office occupied by Judge of Probate and Clerk of Court.

Election day was fair and pleasant, something unusual for this country.

SOME of our most worthy citizens are going to be presented with a full suit of blue clothes next week by their Uncle. Some are having "fits" over the prospect.

WANTED.—We have lost the first number of the UNION, dated July 17th, and will give twenty-five cents for a copy of it.

Our hotels have been doing a rushing business for the last two weeks. Both of them are filled to overflowing.

BY reference to our advertising columns, our readers will see that the boot and shoe makers of Mankato have entered into an agreement, not to mend any sale work, that has been or may be bought at the stores in town. It will prove a bad move for them.

The receipt at the Internal Revenue Bureau in October are 50 per cent. in excess of those for September. They include about $1,000,000 as the tax on deposits and circulation of banks. The entire receipts since the Bureau went into operation are nearly 63,000,000, and nearly 10,000,000 for the last month.

NOTICE.—The first quarterly Conference for the present Conference year of the M. E. Church in Mankato will take place at City Hall, Saturday the 14th inst. Preaching by the P. E., Rev. J. O. Rich, at 2 o'clock P. M., At the close of the sermon the the members of the Conference will meet in the Hall to transact the business of the Conference. It is particularly requested that all the members viz: the class leaders, stewards, local preachers, and exhorters within the stationed will be present as it is of great importance to the Church.

Services on Sabbath—Love-feast at 9 A. M. preaching by the P. E. at 10½ A. M. After the sermon the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered.

THE WINNEBAGO SUPPLY TRAIN.—The train carrying supplies to the agencies on the Missouri river is on the move. The escort, commanded by Capt. J. C. Whitney, of Co. D, 6th Regiment, left yesterday afternoon. The escort consists of Co. D, commanded by Lieut. Albaugh, 60 men, Co. E Capt. Schunerman, 65 men; Co. H, Capt. Tattersall, 50 men, and a detatchment of nine men, in charge of a small howitzer. 1st Lieut. S. H. King. of Co. D. is Acting Adjutant, 1st Lieut. Geisinger. Co, H, Acting Commissary and Quartermaster of Subsistence, and Assistant Surgeon Porter of the 6th will accompany the escort as Surgeon.

The train for the escort, independent of the supply train, consists of twenty-five wagons and three ambulances, carrying thirty-four tons of supplies for the soldiers, which is considered sufficient to take them there and back, and Capt. Whitney says he is coming back. The men have everything to make them comfortable, good Sibley tents, stoves, blankets, moccasins packs for the feet, and Buffalo overshoes.

Col. Merriam, of the firm of Burbank & Co. one of the contractors for taking the supplies through, has been here during the week, and has worked very efficiently in getting the train off.

Col. Thompson, who is now here, has had the general management of affairs, and will accompany the train through to the Agencies.

The press of work incident to election has prevented us from giving our usual amount of local items. Now that the campaign has closed, we shall have more time to devote to County news.

THE DRAFT.—There are but one or two more days in which to recruit for the Second Cavalry Regiment, and we urge our people to take right hold and help on the course. Mr. Howard we understand has over sixty names on his list, and if our citizens wish to avoid the draft in this county, they have no time in which to talk about getting recruits, but will have to go to work and get them.

USE CAUTION.—In calling for that excellent Saleratus, DeLand & Co.'s Chemical, be sure you get what you call for, as in consequence of its success there are many imitations in the market. It is better than Soda.

Miss Carrie Pease and Miss Delia Flower will open a select school in the City Hall, on Monday Nov, 9th. Tuition. term of sixteen weeks, for primary scholars $3,00 higher branches $4,00 one half to be paid at the middle of the term, the remainder at the close.

We have received the first number of the Whig, published at Winnebago City. It is a six column paper, well "made up," with good editorials and devoted to County matters. Success, say we, to Brother Huntington.

WELL DONE.—We give Garden City credit for the noble manner in which she did her work on Tuesday. It had been reported that a majority would be given against Mr. Coffin, but the result has shown that they believe him too worthy a man to be thus sacrificed.

MESSRS. Willard & Barney are moving one of their buildings up from Lower town, and are going to place it just below our office. It will be occupied by Mr Kilgore as a drug-store.

THE American Express Company, are going to put a messenger on the Winona route as soon as navigation closes.

THE GRAVEST OBJECTION.—The gravest objection ever raised against the extension of the suffrage to free blacks was lately urged by a loyal Texan, conversation with some of his fellow southern Unionists. Said he earnestly, "in six months after you give the negroes the right to vote, half the democratic politicians in the country will go about swearing that they have no negro blood in their veins."

PRINTER'S TALK.—Every profession has its technical terms, and of course the printers have a smattering, which is only intelligible to the craft. The following is a specimen. It don't mean, however, so much as it would seem to the uninitiated: "Jim put General Beauregard on the galley, and then finish the murder of the negro you commenced yesterday. Set up the ruins of Guyandott; distribute the small-pox; you need not finish that mutiny; put that pi into hell, and then go to the devil and he will tell you how to dispose of the dead matter."

CHAPLIN CRESSEY.—Rev. T. R. Cressey, Chaplin of the Second Minnesota, called on us yesterday, while en route for his home in Minneapolis, having arrived on the Northern Belle. He has secured a short furlough, after two and a half years' faithful service at his post. Farher Cressey says it is the opinion among the officers in the army at Chatanoga that our battles at that point and at Chickamanga were both successes. He reports the gallant Second in good health and spirits, recovering from the fatigues and wear and tear of the recent battles.

TRAPPING, FURS, &c.—As the season for hunting and trapping approaches we begin to observe activity amongst the trappers and fur-dealers. Many of our people in the country are begining to turn their attention to this subject, and are laying their plans for a profitable winter's trapping. Steel traps—for muskrat, mink, &c., are very scarce, our merchants, all having sold all they had on hand and it would not now be possible for a trapper to get an outfit in our market.

The coarser kinds of furs are begining to come to this market, and are readily sold at better rates than are usually obtained so early in the season. Furs—mink especially—are said to be very plenty this season, and from present indication we think the fur business for the coming year will be heavier than it has been for five years. Our merchants are taking more than ordinary interest in the matter, and those having furs to sell may expect to realize a good price,

On election day in Ohio, the Confederate prisoners in camp Chase prison at Columbus, held, on their own motion, an election for Governor, which resulted—Vallandigham, 1,081, Brough, two.

The balance of the purchase money is payable at any time within twenty years, at the option of the purchaser, if interest at seven per cent. per annum is annually paid in advance.

Interest to the first day of June, 1861, must be paid at the time of the purchase

Persons purchasing lands upon which other parties have made improvements, will be required to pay the owner of the same the appraised value of the improvements, one half to be paid at the time of the sale, and the balance within six months thereafter, with interest at seven per cent. per annum.

In case the person occupying or improving the land has damaged the same, the appraised amount of damage will be deducted from his improvements and when the occupant is the purchaser, the damage will be added to the price of the land

No lands will be sold for less than the appraised value.

Purchase money payable in specie and legal tender notes.

CHAS. McILRATH,
Com. of State Land Office.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do: will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood: and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

SINGER & CO'S.

Letter "A" Sewing Machine.

WITH ALL THE IMPROVEMENTS.

IS the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful, substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist-thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality.

Brandreth's Pills.—While Brandreth's Pills are so potent for good to diseased bodies, they are harmless as tread. The babe at the breast or the man f ripest years, and delicate females, are certain to receive an increase of health from the use of these pills blessed of Heaven.

It has been said by an able physician, that "this medicine always benefits and never injures." Wherein is the superlative quality. The Brandreth Pills have no power or action but upon impure humors in the blood. They seize only the impurities in and around the parts affected by disease; all parts involved in diseased actions are operated upon, and cleansed from all foulness, and reinfused with ' Life" by the wonderful curative powers contained and inherent of the most justly famed Brandreth's Pills

Millions of people, whose lives appeared to be at the last ebb, worn out by fever's consuming fires, by consumption's insidious advances, by sacking torments of inflammatory rheumatism, have been cured by the use of these pills. The persons are living witnesses, and thousands are residents in every city in America, Principal office, No. 294, Canal St., N. Y.

The balance of the purchase money is payable at any time within twenty years, at the option of the purchaser, if interest at seven per cent, per annum is annually paid in advance.

Interest to the first day of June, 1861, must be paid at the time of the purchase

Persons purchasing lands upon which other parties have made improvements, will be required to pay the owner of the same the appraised value of the improvements, one half to be paid at the time of the sale, and the balance within six months thereafter, with interest at seven per cent. per annum,

In case the person occupying or improving the land has damaged the same, the appraised amount of damage will be deducted from his improvements and when the occupant is the purchaser, the damage will be added to the price of the land

No lands will be sold for less than the appraised value.

Purchase money payable in specie and legal tender notes.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

These Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do: will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood: and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

Please call and examine, or send for Circular.

Valuable Lands for Sale.

BY direction of the Hon. Secretary of the Interior, the undersigned will receive sealed bids for the purchase of any or all of the lands hereinafter described, they being among the choicest and best farming land in Minnesota.

These lands comprise what are known as the Winnebago Trust Lands in the State of Minnesota, and will be sold to the highest and best bidder in tracts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres each, under the provisions of a treaty concluded with the Winnebago Indians, April 15th, 1859, and an act of Congress, approved February 21st 1863, entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their Reservation, in Minnesota, for their benefit."

No bid will be entertained at a rate less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

In case a bid is accepted, the party making the same will be notified as soon thereafter as practicable. If within thirty days after such notice the party shall fail to make payment to the undersigned, the land for which such bid was made will be subject to sale to any other person.

Patents will be issued and transmitted to purchasers as soon after payment as the same can be prepared. Payments may be made either in cash or in the certificates of indebtedness of the Winnebago Indians, issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for the debt of said Indians, and secured to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said lands by the third article of the treaty above mentioned. The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. All bids must be sealed and addressed to the undersigned, Washington City, D. C, and endorsed "Bid for Winnebago Tract Land."

HARPER'S

New Monthly Magazine.

Critical Notices of the Press.

The volumns Bound constitute of themselves a liberary of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.

The most popular Monthly in the world. —N. Y. Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People: and the popularity it has acequired is merited. Each Number contatns fully 144 pages reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good woodcuts: and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature. —Trubner's Guide to American Literature London.

No Magazine in Europe or America is so well known, none has half as many readers; and, we may safely say, none has received so large a tribute of admiration from the cultivated class, that delighted in a healthy, diversified, elevating periodical literature. It is the foremost magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

Poetry.

BARBABRA FRIETCHIE.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Up from the meadow rich with corn,
Clear in the cool September morn.

The clustered spires of Frederick stand,
Green walled by the hills of Maryland,

Round about them orchards sweep,
Apple and peach tree fruited deep,

Fair as a garden of the Lord.
To the eyes of the famished rebel horde

On that pleasant morn of early fall.
When Lee marched over the mountain [wall.

Over the mountain winding down,
Horse and foot into Fredericktown.

Forty flag with their silver stars,
Forty flags with their crimson bars.

Flapped in the morning wind; the sun
Of noon looked down and saw not one.

Up rose old Barbara Frietche then,
Bowed with her fourscore years and ten

Bravest of all in Frederick town,
She took up the flag the men hauled down

In her attic window the staff she set.
To show that one heart was loyal yet.

Up the street came the rebel tread,
Stonewall Jackson riding ahead.

He glanced: the old flag met his sight.

"Halt!"—the dust brown ranks stood fast
"Fire!"—out blazed the rifle blast.

It shivered the window, pane and sash;
It rent the banner with seam and gash.

Quick, as it fell, from the broken staff
Dame Barbara snatched the silken scarf;

She leaned far out on the window sill,
And shook it forth with a royal will.

"Shoot, if you must, this old gray head
But spare your country's flag," she said.

A shade of sadness, a blush of shame,
Over the face of the leader came;

The nobler nature within him stirred
To life at that woman's deed and word.

"Who touches a hair of yon gray head
Dies like a dog! March on!" he said.

All day long through Frederick street
Sounded the tread of marching feet;

All day long that free flag tossed
Over the heads of the rebel host

Ever its torn folds rose and fell
On the royal winds that loved it well;

And through the hill-gaps sunset light
Shone over it with a warm good-night.

Barbara Frietchie's work is o'er,
And the Rebel rides on his raids no more

Honor to her! and let a tear
Fall for her sake on Stonewall's bier.

Over Barbara Frietchie's grave
Flag of Freedom and Union, wave!

Peace and order and beauty draw
Round thy symbol of light and law;

And ever the stars above look down
On thy stars below in Frederick town!

The Philosophy of Happiness.

BY REV. F. S. CASSADY.

"If solid happiness we prize,
Within our breast this jewel lies:
And they are fools who roam."

The secret of all true happiness is the right condition of the moral affections. Its whole philosophy is laid in the spiritual nature, the inner life of man. It is utterly impossible that real happiness should have any other basis than that of virtue and moral excellence. Let us reason a few moments on this subject, and see whether this is not so—

Happiness is a moral result. If not, then it might, for example, exist compatibly with a guilty conscience, the very idea of which is preposterous. It must, therefore, have a moral basis: this being true, how unphilosophical in men to seek it in wealth, or learning, or fame, or power, or any other worldly object, of which in themselves considered, we may predicate no moral quality whatsoever? Men have had all these, and have thus exhausted all the resources of this life to confer happiness; and yet they have lived and died without securing life's chief good. The WISE man, whose experience tested all the capability of enjoyment there was in the varied objects which men pursue in this world, as proposed sources of happiness, has written the true epitaph of this world in these words:—'Vanity of vanities; all is vanity and vexation of spirit.' With no little tenderness and beauty does BURNS say—

"If happiness has not her seat
And centre in the breast,
We may be wise, or rich, or great,
But never can be blest."

Every man is the architect of his own happiness. In this respect, as in every other, he makes his own fortune. 'Virtue is happiness below,' says POPE; while the old proverb still holds, that 'to be good is to be happy." Now as every man determines his own personal relation to goodness and virtue; so he determines the question of his own happiness. If happy, he must be so through and in himself; if not, he has not paid the price of happiness by accepting its conditions. Dr. Young unfolds the true philosophy of it in the negative view prescribed in the following lines :—

"What makes man wretched? Happiness denied!
No: 'Tis happiness disdained.
She comes too meanly drest to win our smile;
And calls her name content, a homely name!
Our flame is transport, and content our scorn.
Ambition turns us, and shuts the door against her,
And weds a toil and tempest in her stead."

The idea of PALEY on this subject is very beautiful and true: He says, 'If happiness were an attainment of the mind, to be acquired as a science or an art is learned from the master, the teacher might be justly considered as the vicegerent of God, and no place could contain the numbers that would flock to his school; but in this the Almighty has delegated his power to every person only respecting himself." Self-conquest, by means of self-knowledge, self-renouncement, and self-action, is the condition of every man's happiness; and to the accomplishment of this result the delegated power from the Almighty is at once equal.

And how wise and rational is this method of making men happy! How impartial and worthy of the Infinite Creator! If certain extrinsic circumstances, which in given instances no human effort could create, were necessary to the condition of happiness, how few could be happy? If contingent on wealth, how many must never know anything of it? and what of merit could attach to it? The same is true of worldly fame, or power, or of anything external to men; they cannot be the source of human happiness, because they are not and cannot be universal on the one hand; nor are they, even granting they might be realized by all, worthy or permanent on the other. An adequate philosophy must underlie all rational, substantial happiness—such a philosophy as suits the genius and corresponds with the dignity of our mental and moral being. If, then, we are reasoning correctly, no one can be unhappy by reason of that which he cannot help, nor can he be happy, in reason, unless he has the record of worthy personal action from which this condition is legitimately evolved. Our conclusion then is, that happiness cannot lie in any combination of fortuitous circumstances; for then the great mass would be excluded from it; but that all may be happy by accepting its necessary conditions, and thus this happiness, on the basis of virtue, may be universal.

'Within our breast this jewel lies,' says Cotton. The heart is the seat and centre of it. And it is wisely so; for our happiness is thus placed beyond the reach and influence of all disturbing outside circumstances. External power seeks in vain to reach its citadel: for it has the impregnable defense of a good conscience. After all, the whole philosophy of happiness lies in one secret of a good conscience; and this every man owes it to himself and his fellow man to have He that has this, has what no human power can ever disturb. Man's puny arm could as easily play havoc with the stars, as touch the foundation on which such an one's happiness rests. The heart at once accords the sentiment of the poet :—

"Knowledge and wealth to few are given,
But mark how just the ways of heaven;
True joy to all is free:
Nor wealth nor knowledge grant the boon,
'Tis thine, O conscience! thine alone—
It all belongs to thee."

"Our Loss is Trifling."

Such is the statement made by newspaper correspondents almost every day, when announcing small battles in which but very few of the union soldiers are killed. The public mind has become so familiarized with war and its attendant horrors that now we are disposed to consider an engagement in which the killed and wounded are not numbered by hundreds, as a matter of small moment, hardly entitled to more than a passing thought. In all such instances reports state that "Our loss is trifling." But we should remember that there are those to whom these losses do not seem "trifling." If the killed be but one, it is no trifling matter. That man was somebody's son, parent, husband or friend; and way off in some spot remote from the battle field, perhaps there will be one family made desolate for all coming years. The brave true-hearted soldier, who has yielded up his life in his country's service, occupied a place in the affections and sympathies of some one. Perhaps a whole household have been desolated by his untimely death, and are now mourning his loss with that heartfelt sorrow which such bereavements commonly bring. To them that battle does not seem like a small event nor was the loss "trifling." In speaking of these things we hardly consider what is implied by the term "tifling loss," or how hollow mockery it sounds to those whose hearts are wrung with anguish by the fall of some brave soldier whose existence was bound up in theirs.

A MAN very fond of smoking died, and as his disconsolate widow put a filled pipe in his coffin she bid him farewell: 'Dear husband here you have pipe and tobacco. I suppose you will be supplied with fire when you reach your destination.'

Mr. Chase and the National Currency.

The following is an extract of Secretary Chase's speech at Indianapolis on the 14th instant. No man deserves higher regard from the people than Mr. Chase for what he has done in his Department :

At the outset of this struggle, the great leader (or follower, whichever you please,) of public opinion in Europe—The London Times— said that Mr. Chase would very soon find himself in want of money, and would go to England to borrow, and then England would not let him have any, and then we would see what would become of our vaunted Republic. What would you have had me do under these circumstances? You would have done precisely what I did. I said : "I will not go to England for money, but she shall come to us ; and if The Times waits for Mr. Chase to come to England to borrow money, she will wait till the green isle of England is sunk into the depths of the sea." [Cheers :] That is just what you would have said. Well, what was next to be done? I borrowed all the gold there was in the country. In this way I obtained about $175,000,000, in gold, and it did not come back quite as fast as it went and so the banks and capitalists who had furnished the gold began to say to me. "We cannot supply you with specie any longer unless you will agree to pay us such prices for it as will enable us to buy in Europe to replace it." This would not do, and the next question they asked me was, "Will you take the paper of our banks and pay us six per cent, interest on it, and then pay it to the soldiers in place of gold? And by and by perhaps something will happen—we do not know what." This was the question that met me. Now what would you have had me do? You would have said to me. "Here am I, Mr. Smith, a farmer ;" and "here am I, Mr. Jones, a mechanic ;" and "here am I, Mr. Robinson, a merchant—take us instead of stocks, and base the currency of the country on us—go to work and make 'greenbacks.'" I know that was what you would have advised me to do ; and therefore, as my business was only to interpret your will, I went to work and made "greenbacks," and a good many of them at that. I had some handsome pictures put upon them, too; and as I like to get near the people, and as the engravers thought me rather good looking, I told them they might put me on the end of the $1 bills, [Laughter.] Well, at first a great many people thought this was a bold and hazardous experiment, and a good many of the banks said it was sure to fail ; on the other hand a number of the banks, to their honor be it recorded, said "you are right, go ahead." A good many disloyal men thought they would be able to break us down. Some banks and some persons refused to take the currency. What was to be done? You would have told me in this case to do exactly what I did do, you would have said if any bank is not willing to receive this money it shall take it or get nothing at all. So we made it a legal tender, not quite so tender as they desired, but legally so. [Laughter.] So the thing went on, and after a while we agreed that we should issue bonds, and if the people desired to invest in them they could do it and we would pay the interest in gold. That makes this currency sound. It is simply the love and gratitude of the people toward their Government put into the form of money. But here another step was necessary. It was necessary to have some means by which the national currency could be perpetuated, and so we devised and carried out the banking system. This is a brief account of what we have done. It is a very simple thing. It does not require any great wit to work it out. It requires this—an honest purpose to know what is best and right to be done; and whenever you seek to do that without fear or favor, you will almost always find the right path, and then having found it, you have only to ask God to give you the courage, that is all. It is the correct interpretation of the popular will and then doing that will. Now, I have given you just about as much of a report upon the finances as I expect to give to Congress.

THERE is a story told of an Irishman who, landing in New York harbor, was met and welcomed by a countryman who had been longer here. 'Welcome, Pat,' said the latter,' I'm glad to see ye ; ye've come just in time, for to-morrow's election day.' Pat and his friend took some refreshments together, and presently the newly arrived began to make some inquiries about voting, 'Ye'll vote for who ye plaize,' said his friend, 'sure it's a free counthry.' 'Well, thin, begorra,' rejoined Pat, 'I go agin the Government—that's what I always did at home.'

Fervent love utters loving words in the desolation of the body, as the melting bell in the burning steeple continues to sound out the hours.

Where Stand Conquered Rebels?

As the suppression of the wicked rebellion of the South becomes more and more certain, the sympathisers with it become intensely solicitous about the future status of the people in the rebel States. They no longer affirm, as erst they were wont to do, that all idea of bringing the insurgents to submission is preposterous, because they well know that, could a vote of the people be now taken in the revolted States, the large majority would vote for the abandonment of their hopeless project and a return to the protection and rule of the Federal Government. The wail of sorrow and suffering and hopelessness that has come up from various parts of the revolted section of the country; the penury and want and starvation of families, whose husbands and sons and brothers have been the victims of the remorseless rebel conscriptions; the wasted fields and abandoned plantations, and their sacrificed products; the mutiny of whole regiments of rebel soldiers, and the ever blighted anticipations of those who still adhere to the rebel standard: the growing complaints of the rebel press that no benefit occurs to the South from the battles that are fought and claimed by the generals as victories; the incentives to riot which the press unblushingly put forth in their columns; the gradual withdrawal of that foreign sympathy which at the earlier stages of the revolt was so unjustly extended to the rebels; the capture of their strongholds on the Mississippi and the restoration to the Federal authority over that great artery of commerce; the severing of the rebellious territory in twain and the cutting one-half of it from the other half that furnished its supplies; the re-occupation of Texas by the Federal arms; the destruction of Fort Sumter and the impending capture of Charleston; the utter hopelessness of the recovery by the insurgents of any of the territory which has been wrested from them—these all point to one consummation of this civil war, the subjection of the rebellious States and the restoration of the Federal authority over the whole of rebeldom. The rebels and their sympathizers are not blind to this state of things. The ridiculous fanfaronade about "dying in the last ditch," about being 'exterminated' rather than 'subdued,' about the capacity of 'one Southerner to fight and conquer five Yankees,' has given place to the more serious question of how to get out of the war they commenced with such ignorance and wickedness, without total annihilation to themselves.

Of course all their friends at the North, from Vallandigham upwards, come to their rescue in this changed phase of affairs as promptly as they did when Mr. Fernando Wood telegraphed his regret to the Governor of Georgia that he could not prevent the seizure of arms designed to aid them in their rebellion. Now that the rebels themselves no longer indulge in 'tall talking,' save in the case of one or two Richmond journals, whose motive in keeping up a show of hardihood is transparent enough, their sympathizers at home alter their tactics also, and plead that the rebels should not be severely punished for their crimes. Nay, crime they never attribute to them, but only 'irregularity' and 'mistake.' They demand, that their blunder be overlooked, and that they be reinstated just where they were before they took up arms against the Union; that the past be wholly forgotten and charitably forgiven, and that the 'weeping, and lamentation, and woe,' which they have spread throughout the free and loyal States shall be overborne by the loud hosannas over the rebels' retirement from a contest which they provoked and commenced. Now we believe that all such propositions come emphatically 'too late.' The rebellious States have persisted in their "irregularity" too long, have manifested too plainly a determination to destroy this Republic, (and to subjugate the Free States for that was avowedly part of their original purpose) and have so clearly failed only for lack of ability to carry out their fell and diabolical purpose, that the twenty millions of freemen, who love the Union as they love their own homesteads, can no longer look upon the rebels as merely misguided men, who, in an hour of mortified ambition, yielded to phrenzy, and riotously rebelled against the Federal laws and Government. We, of the North, who always submitted to the constituted authorities when the elections almost uniformly went against us, could not have connived even at such a demonstration. But, had it been only a temporary ebullition of anger, to be soon abandoned and disavowed, the North could, and from its aversion to disturb the harmony and peril the existence of the Union probably would, have dealt generously with the rioters. But the case is widely different now and not only the voice of self-respect, but the sterner demands of self-preservation—the life of the Union, and the prevention of the second attempt to accomplish its destruction—compel us to another course. A generation of loyalty can scarcely obliterate the remembrance or the elements of the crime against the Union of which the people of the rebel States have been guilty ; and the insurgents cannot, with a due regard to the safety of the Republic, be restored to their ante-bellum status until they have been thoroughly purged of the material that prompted them to rebellion This is no longer a matter of feeling and sentiment alone. It takes the higher ground of justice to ourselves and to our posterity. We must—for it is the stern requisition of patriotic duty—we must provide against repetition of events of the past two years. The Republic cannot survive more of such assaults, and to save the Republic we must eliminate the leaven which has put the whole South into rebellious ferment. Unless this is done people of the North will have given their hecatombs of men to be slaughtered for only a temporary rescue of the Union, from destruction. For ourselves we can honestly say that we are wedded to no special plan of "security for the future," but security we must have, and so long as we can wield a pen, or utter a thought, we shall battle earnestly for such a mode of treating the conquered rebellious States as shall effectualy deprive them of all chances of a repetition of their foul crime.

Mistakes will Happen.

There is a well-known gentleman of this city, of a musical turn of mind, whose business takes him away from home most of the time, travelling about the country. His family resided in the north part of the city. During his absence his wife wrote to him that she had a good opportunity to sell their place, and go and reside with her father at the south end of the city, as they had previously talked of. He replied, advising her to sell, and wrote again and again, but failed to receive any more letters from his wife.

After awhile he returned home, arriving unexpectedly on the midnight train. Laboriously he wended his way to his residence at the North-end, carrying a valise in each hand. Having his latch-key in his pocket, he walked in without disturbing any one, left his baggage in the hall, and groped his way up to his wife's room. A kerosene lamp was burning low, casting a dim light over the room. The gentleman was tired, and glad to get home to his familiar room again. He turned up the light a little brighter, and leisurely began to undress himself, when he was startled by a rustling of the bed-clothes, and a feminine expression of alarm, in a voice not at all familiar. He glanced toward the the bed. There were two night-capped heads, instead of one, and neither of them his wife. Two feminine voices partially muffled by the bed-clothes tightly drawn up to their chins, in accents of indignation and terror, asked him who he was, what he was doing in a young lady's bed-room, would he go away immediately, or would they scream for the police, cry murder, robbers, and alarm the house? while the bewildered and astonished gentleman hastily gathered his clothing about him, assured them that there must be some mistake, he thought he was in his own room, made the most profuse apologies, and backed out in the darkness, with a dim comprehension of the truth. His wife had sold the place, and his former residence was occupied as a young ladies' boarding-house.

Confused and bewildered, he groped his way out, only to stumble headlong over his forgotten baggage in the hall, with a noise that brought the whole female household about his ears, with screams of robbers, murder, fire, police! Jumping up, without waiting for apologies, he vamosed in haste, leaving his baggage behind him. Then, at 1 o'clock A. M., he had a mile to walk; thumped a half-an-hour to awaken the family; his own father-in-law did not recognise him, and he was on the point of being turned over to the police, when, fortunately, his wife came to the rescue. Next day he recovered his baggage, and made ample explanations to the females he had unintentionally alarmed.—Hartford Press.

An Out-Door Cellar.

It is very unwise to store a large quantity of vegetables in the cellar of a farmhouse, even if it is of sufficient capacity. In the latter part of the winter there will be some decay, and nothing can be more detrimental to health than living over a mass of decaying vegetable matter. But few cellars are large enough to hold the products of the farm that requires winter storage, As we devote more attention to the economical feeding of stock, the necessity of good root cellars will be more seriously felt. Carrots, beets, parsnips, cabbage and the like, require cellar room. A sandy hillside is the best place for making a cellar, as in this situation good drainage is secured as well as easy access. A good cellar, however, can be made in any place where water will not stand within three or four feet of the surface. Especial pains must be taken to secure good drainage. Dig down as far as drainage will allow, and throw the earth back, to be used in banking up. If rough stones are to be had, they are the best for the walls ; if not posts, and planks will answer. A strong ridge pole is necessary, which must be supported by posts. Bank up the sides with earth, and plank the roof, and cover straw or leaves, over which rough boards, or something of the kind, must be placed to prevent blowing off. An easy entrance should be made at the front by digging down the earth in a gradual slope ; and as this part will be exposed to the weather, it should be made double ; and if boards, filled between with straw.—Where stones is used a space for air is sufficient.

Didn't See It.

Joe Phillips was an awful story teller. When a stranger came into his tavern if he appeared at all credulous, old Joe would tell a long yarn to some of his village acquaintances, but talk at the stranger. A short time since a stranger came into the bar-room with a rod, line, and other fishing articles, when he seized a friend and startled him with the question ;

'Did you hear about that big fish P—— caught to-day in the river?'

Stranger pricked up his ears.

'No,' said friend.

'Biggest sturgeon ever caught any where,' continued Joe.

'You don't say,'

'Yes,' said Joe, 'when I came away he hadn't caught all of him, although he had six feet of him ashore.'

'Gracious,' said friend, 'how much did he weigh?'

'Three hundred pounds,' said Joe, with decision. 'And he made nine barrels of oil.'

'Nine barrels of oil?' inquired the stranger, advancing; 'did you say nine barrels of oil?'

'Yes,' said Joe, fiercely, ,I said nine barrels; is that anything strange, sir?'

'Oh, no, beg pardon,' said the stranger musingly, 'only I was thinking it a little singular, that he could extract twenty seven hundred pounds of oil from three hundred pounds of fish!' and gathering up his fishing utensils, left.

Joe hasn't told a story since.

Be Manly.

Never try to keep out of any one's way when you owe him anything—unless it be a thrashing. It is bad enough, in all conscience, to be in debt, but dont make your condition worse by growing mean under its pressure. When you absolutely cannot pay up, at the appointed time, don't make believe sick, don't sulk about in out-of-the-way streets to avoid meeting your creditors, don't sneak around the first corner when you catch sight of him before he has seen you. All such conduct is unmanly. No doubt you feel averse to standing face to face with a man to whom you are a debtor—pay day past, and you a debtor still—it is mortifying, very ; but it is only one of the natural consequences of borrowing ; and as you have incurred the penalty, why meet it like a man. Face your creditor ; let him know that you neither forgot the debt, nor underate his patience with you. Say frankly that you are very sorry to keep him so long without his money, and that you will pay up as fast and as soon as you can.

This is the only creditable way to conduct yourself in the case. There is no respect due to men or women who, feeling unable to meet their payments at the proper time, instead of going at once and explaining the reason why they fail, and doing and saying all they can to assure their creditors that they mean no dishonesty, just sneak about carefully, anxious only to shun the creditor's sight.

The Object of Education.

It seems to me that the object of education is to produce men practiced in business, with enlarged minds and correct judgments, and men of learning not unversed in the world, Now as to our practical men, they owe their knowledge, not to their education, but to the necessities of life; all they have ever learned at school they have long since forgotten and very little regret. And as to our learned men—they are what they are. But how great, I would ask, is the learning the youth can bear away from school, however facilitate its acquisition? So minute a fraction of that he must afterward acquire as scarcely to deserve mention. The importance of school education, then, can never consist as much in what it teaches, as in the method it uses, and which from boyhood it accustoms the man for acquiring and giving certainty to knowledge and putting that knowledge to use.

Some men are kinder to the occupants of their kennels than to their families. They will treat wife and children like dogs, but not dogs themselves so.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

A YOUNG GENTLEMAN, happened to sit at church in a pew adjoining one in which sat a young lady for whom he conceived a sudden and violent passion, was desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot; but the place not suiting a formal declaration, the exigency of the case suggested the following plan.: He politely handed his fair neighbor a Bible open, with a pin stuck in the following text: Second Epistle of John, verse fifth:—"And now I beseech thee lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." She returned it, pointing to the second chapter of Ruth, verse tenth—"Then she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes seeing that I am a stranger?" He returned the book, pointing to the thirteenth verse of the Third Epistle of John—"Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink, but I trust to come unto you, and speak face to face, that our joy may be full." From the above interview a marriage took place the ensuing week.

GOOD IDEA OF DEATH.— That death and sleep are very much alike, the sages all tell us—but see how attractively Leigh Hunt describes the latter;—"it is a delicious moment certainly, that of being well nestled in bed, and feeling that you shall drop gently to sleep. The good is to come—not past; the limbs have been just tired enough to render the remaining in one posture delightful; the labor of the day is done. A gentle failure of the perceptions comes creeping over one; the spirit consciousness disengages itself more and more with slow and hushing degrees, like a mother detaching her mind from that of her sleeping child; the mind seems to have a balmy lid closing over it, like the eye; 'tis closing—'tis closing—'tis closed. The mysterious spirit has gone to take its airy rounds."

Uncle Sam had a neighbor who was in the habit of working Sunday, but after a while he joined the church. One day he met the minister to whose church he belonged.

"Well, Uncle Sam," said he, "do you see any difference in Mr. P. since he joined the church?"

"Oh yes," said Uncle Sam, "a great difference. Before, when he went out to mend his fences on Sunday he carried an ax on his shoulder; but now he carries it under his overcoat."

BEEF CONSUMED BY THE ARMY.—The number of bullocks consumed by the Army of the Potomac, during the time that elapsed between their march from Catlett's Station towards Fredricksburg under Burnside and Hooker, was thirty-five thousand.

Fresh army beef is self transported, and the saving in transportation effected by driving cattle for army supplies is found to be equal to one and a quarter pounds per day.

TRUE DIGNITY.—The day-laborer, who earns, with hard hand and the sweat of his face, coarse food for a wife and children whom he loves, is raised by this generous motive, to true dignity; and, though wanting the refinements of life, is a nobler being than those who think themselves absolved by wealth from serving others.

Why is a drunkard hesitating to sign the pledge like a skeptical Hindoo? Because he doubts whether to give up the worship of Jug or not.

Won't some one show us a Copperhead whose sole argument is not "Abolitionist!"

There are more sorrows of women than of men, just as in heaven, there are more eclipses of the moon than of the sun.

Butler's Appointment.

WASHINGTON Nov. 3.

The appointment of General Butler to the Department of which Fortress Monroe is at present the Headquarters is considered an earnest of a purpose to conduct the war in that quarter on what are briefly known as Butlers principles.

From Memphis and Corinth

CAIRO, Nov. 3.

The steamer Anderson with 200 bales of cotton and Memphis dates to the 31st has arrived.

The report was current that the rebel General Chambers has been relieved of his command, and Gen. Forest appointed in his stead; also that Forest has instructions from Joe Johnston to burn all the cotton within the limits of his command.

Corinth dates to the 29th says the 1st Alabama Cavalry, loyal, about 800 in number, were recently sent to destroy railroad communication.

The enemy when near Talladega were surrounded by a largely superior force, and most of them captured.

KILL OFF THE DOGS.—On the 10th inst., a German farmer from the town of Blooming Grove, Waseca County, made affidavit that he had lost in one night, 67 sheep by the dogs, and 17 more so badly wounded, as to be worthless. His sheep were in a yard which was connected with an old log stable. The dogs drove the sheep into the stable and there slaughtered them.—Goodhue Volunteer.

The Weekly Union.

Mankato, Friday, Nov. 13, 1863.

The Election in the East.

Official returns from sixty-two counties in Missouri give the Radicals a majority of 5,000.

The result of the election in New Jersey is that in the Senate the Copperheads have gained five and the Republicans seven members.

In Wisconsin, the Union majority will be 15,000, and the soldiers vote will increase it to a majority exceeding that given for Lincoln. The Legislature will stand 22 Union, 11 Copperheads. The Assembly, 40 Union, 30 Copperheads.

Illinois gives a Union majority of thirty thousand.

It is believed that the election in Maryland has resulted in the choice of four Administration members of Congress, and one Secessionist. The majority on the State ticket will be near 30,000.

Official Vote of Blue Earth County.

A Horrible Affair.

We take the following account of a most horrible affair, from the Cleveland Plaindealer. It says:

Three weeks ago a young man named George Beaver, about twenty years of age, stole $300 from his employer, a merchant of Fond du Lac Wisconsin, and decamped. Beaver arrived in this city last week, and remained here a short time, when he proceeded to Norwalk, in which place he had few friends. A day or two since he called upon a young lady acquaintance, and requested an interview, which was granted. He then told her that he was on the point of killing himself, at the same time producing a revolver. The lady seized his arm and tried to get the weapon from him. During the struggle Beaver exclaimed, "Stand aside or my brains will be spattered over your person!" The lady then did as desired, when the wretch placed the muzzle against his forehead, and blew the top of his head completely off.

Upon the person was found eighty cents in money, and a pawn ticket for a gold watch, from which he had parted while in Cincinnati not long since. In answer to a telegram describing the sad affair, Beaver's parents who are poor people and reside at Fond du Lac—directed that his remains should be buried at Norwalk.

Letter from the Ninth Regiment.

HEADQUARTERS 9TH MINN. VOLS.
CAMP BROWN, JEFFERSON CITY, MO.
Friday, October 30th, 1863.

To the Editor of the Union:

Judge of the surprise of the boys of the 9th Regiment, when wakened by the animated reville, on the morning of the 28th, to find the ground all covered with snow. We were not at all prepared for such a visitation in the sunny South, where the trees are supposed to be ever green, and where your fair Winnebago City correspondent locates the "land of the Orange and Palm." No! we little expected when we closed our eyes in slumber the night before, "beneath the sunny skies" of this Southland, to be greeted on the following morning with snow two or three inches deep. We had all supposed that in a latitude as far North as Central Missouri, the autumn would glide pleasantly into the lap of the winter season. But in this, as in many other respects we were subject to disappointment. The boys seem to think that all this talk about the sunny South with its groves of Orange, and Magnolia trees, is a sentimental misapprehension of the real state of things. A few days residence here, suffice to eradicate all such errors of fact. Instead of the tropical fruits—the Orange and the Palm—we find here the Papaw and the Persimmon.

Jefferson City contains a population of about 1500 inhabitants. The site upon which the town is built, is very rough and uneven. There are as many hills as buildings, and vice versa. Add to this the numerous narrow and deep water courses made by the violent storms, common to this latitude, and you have a surface rough in the extreme. The streets are generally in a very bad condition. If we except, Mainstreet which runs paraiell with the Missouri river, and on a ridge of land the whole length of the city—we apprehend it would be difficult to follow any other one street for more than eight or ten blocks with a vehicle, on account of the deep gulches cut through them.

The buildings are generally made of brick, The style of architecture is unlike anything of which mention is made, in Ancient or Modern record. Among the exceptions to this rule, we refer briefly to the following: The Capitol buildings and State Armory are fine structures. The former occupies a commanding position on the banks of the sluggish Missouri, and was erected at an estimated cost of half a million of dollars. The material of which it is built is stone, nearly white, and taken from the quarries in this State. The Armory is a substantial stone structure, erected since the outbreak of the Rebellion. In addition to these, there is another, equally as popular, if we are to judge by the great number who frequent its grim halls. I refer to the Penitentiary. Some 371 guests have taken quarters there—many as permanent, and other temporary inmates. In company with a few soldier friends, I made a visit to this institution, a day or two since, and through the courtsey of the Warden was shown through every department. The cleanliness of the cells, rooms and grounds, connected with it, show that the supervision is most excellent. Almost every branch of trade is here carried on. Three hundred of the convicts are hired out to a firm in this city for thirty cents per day. They are fed and clothed at the expense of the State. The evidences of thrift and enterprise in this, the Capital city of Missouri, are nowhere to be found. The blight of slavery rests upon this people. By it the spirit of improvement so natural to the Yankee nation is kept down. Progression in the scale of intelligence by the masses of the people, will never commence until the system of slavery, with its atrocious barbarisms, is completely eradicated. Then, and not before, will Missouri begin that progressive career, for which she is so admirably adapted, by virtue of her immense resources. Should the Radical party gain a victory at the coming election, the progress of Missouri would be onward to a healthy development of her resources, under the intelligent direction of men of known business capacity An intelligent, and sagacious capitalist from the East, while speaking of the future prospects of this State, made this remark; If the Radicals win, I shall conclude the State will soon get out of its difficulties, because then it will be in the hands of men who are undoubtedly for the Union, and the freedom of the State. If, on the other hand, the Conservatives—a mongrel party, made up of rebels and semi-unionists, and pro-slavery men—win, I shall be in serious doubts of Missouri's future, as I shall feel that the policy which will then govern her is to be one of entire uncertainty."

The health of the Regiment is tolerably good, in view of the inclement weather of the past ten days. Of the six companies present at this post twenty-four men are reported sick, either in quarters or Hospital. From Co "E" there are four or five in Hospital, two of whom are down with Typhus Fever. Francis E. Miller—one of the two mentioned above—is improving slowly. Wm. Griffeth—although quite low, is not thought to be dangerously sick. Drs. Bingham, and Twitchell are very attentive to the wants of the Regiment. All that can be done for the sick, will be done by them. As I intimated in a previous letter, the 9th Regiment has a good repute not only in this city, but was highly complimented at different points on our route, for the orderly conduct and gentlemanly bearing. The following from the St. Louis Democrat, speaks for itself.

> Among the gallant regiments which the great Northwest has sent to us greeting none merits more honorable mention than the 9th Minnesota, which lately passed through St. Louis, and is now on guard at the capital of our State. This command numbers over eight hundred effective men, who have been in the service fourteen months, during which time they have been engaged in fighting the relentless savages and defending the frontier of Minnesota.
> Colonel Alexander Wilkin, commanding the regiment, was Captain of a New York company during the Mexican war. Early in the present war he was Captain of a company in the 1st Minnesota, and was promoted to a captaincy in the 17th Regulars for gallant conduct at the battle of Bull Run. Afterwards he was made Major, subsequently Lieutenant Colonel of the 2d Minnesota Volunteers, and then Colonel of the 9th. His record as "a fighting man" is regarded as emphatically of the first water."

A rebel guerilla, or bushwhacker, was executed this afternoon at 3P. M., in accordance with a sentence passed upon him by a Court Martial, which convened at this place some weeks since. The prisoner was escorted from the prison to the gallows, by six companies of the 9th Minnesota, and three of the Missouri Cavalry. The movement of this force to the solemn strains of the "Death March," was a scene of the most imposing character. The prisoner, dressed in his winding sheet, rode in an open carriage, accompanied by a Catholic Priest his spiritual advisor. He wore nothing upon his head. He seemed unmoved by the awful fate that awaited him. His countenance—pale and careworn—did in no wise belie his notorious reputation for cruelty and reckless desperation. Upon ascending the scaffold he helped to adjust the fatal noose, which was soon to terminate his earthly existance. The Priest, who attended him, after going through the usual religious ceremonies, asked the prisoner if he had any remarks to make, to the waitng multitude. Addressing those around him, he only called upon them to witness, "how a Confederate soldier can die." Glorying in his awful crimes, he assumed till the last, an air of unconcern. He had been a terror to his loyal neighbors for a long time, and was a villain of the deepest dye. His hands were stained with loyal blood, and his garments smell of the smoke of loyal habitations. His cruelties were unparallelled—justice has overtaken him, and his fate was a merited one.

October 31st.—William Griffith died at 7 o'clock this morning. During the night his symptoms became alarming, and to day we are called upon to mourn the loss of a faithful soldier—a kind and conscientious man.

NOW AND THEN.

A RECEIPT WORTH ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS.—Take one pound of sal soda and a half pound unslacked lime put it in a gallon of water, and boil twenty minutes. Let it stand till cool, then drain off and put it in a stone jug or jar. Soak your clothes over night, or until they are wet through—then wring them out and rub on plenty of soap; and in the boiler of clothes well covered with water, add one tablespoonful of the washing fluid. Boil half an hour briskly, then wash them thoroughly through one suds, and rinse with water, and your clothes will look better than the old way of washing twice before boiling. This is an invaluable receipt, and I want every poor tired woman to try it. I think with a patent wash-tub to do the little rubbing, the washer woman might take the last novel and compose herself on a lounge and let the washing do itself. The woman who can keep a secret, has known this a year or two, but perhaps she told it while on an electioneering tour.

From the Seat of War.

The New York Herald has the following:

Our army is well over the river, and that Sedgwick's has reached Brandy Station.

No reports of fighting has been received.

This will be a week of exciting and stirring events.

Reports from the front to-day are to the effect that Gen. Kilpatric occupied the city and heights of Fredricksburg yesterday, and was in a position to hold them until reinforcements could reach him.

Probably the army has already joined him and is now entrenching itself on the south bank of the Rappahannock.

Trains conveying the wounded from the battle of Kelly's Ford yesterday to the number of 1,500 arrived here at 11 o'clock to night. There were no ambulances there to transport the wounded men to hospitals, and it may be several hours before they will be placed where they can receive surgical attendance. Prisoners are expected to arrive here during to night.

The army under command of Brigadier General David A. Russel, Gen. Wright being in command of the corps, reached the heights this side of the Rappahannock about one o'clock, and drove the rebel pickets. Gen. Sykes' division of the same corps, on Russel's right, commenced skirmishing soon after, and drove the enemy before them.

Col. Tompkins, Chief of artillery, on Gen. Sedgwick's staff, posted our artillery on the heights about three-fourths of a mile this side of the river, and commenced to shell the works about 3 o'clock. Eighteen guns engaged in shelling them at this short range, doing a dreadful and effective execution. That of the enemy was also very fine.

While this was going on, Gen. Russell was busy with his musketry.

He pushed his line of skirmishers upon both flanks of the enemy's works until nearly sunset, when his own brigade, composed of the 5th Wisconsin, under Col. Allen, the 5th Maine, under Col. Edwards, the 6th Maine, under Col. Harris, and the 21st New York, under Col. Upton, were ordered to charge upon the rifle-pits and earthworks upon both flanks. Led by Gen. Russell in person they went steadily and silently onward, fighting as they proceeded, till nearing the works they fixed bayonets and pitched in with cold steel.

This was too much even for the flower of the Southern army, for it was the much vaunted Louisiana brigade they found there, and after a short hand to hand contest they turned to flee to their pontoons which were lying directly in their rear. But here they were foiled. Our boys had already secured the approach to the bridge and they had no alternative but to surrender or swim for it. Some of them tried the latter but it was no easy matter and they yielded. When those on the opposite shore found that we held this end of the bridge they set fire to their side and destroyed a portion of it, when some were drowned and many were killed by our Infantry. All the artillery the rebels had on this side of the river was captured, which is reported to be seven guns. Their whole camp equippage undoubtedly fell into our hands, as they were compelled to leave it in their hasty retreat.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—One hundred and twenty-five officers are among the rebel prisoners just in from the front. These men represent that but few of their companions retreated across the river, and their General commanding had barely time to escape on his horse. They seem to unite in regarding the movement on our part as having been one of the most decidedly successful of the war.

Intelligence has been received here, dated Clarksburg, Virginia, that Generals Averill and Duffie commanding the forces, after several severe engagements on Friday and Saturday last, succeeded in driving the enemy under Mudwell and Jackson, several miles down the Valley, east of Greenbrier Mountains, into and through the town of Lewisburg, in Western Virginia.

After the first battle on Friday by General Duffie, the enemy was reinforced, but nevertheless the rebels were totally routed on Saturday, under the combined forces of Duffie and Averil.

The route was so complete that the enemy fled leaving all their supplies, guns, colors, &c., and fled in utter dismay, leaving their dead and wounded on the field.

Our men behaved splendidly, and the victory was one of the most brilliant of the war.

The number of killed and wounded on our side is not stated.

We hold Lewisburg.

BRANDY STATION, Nov. 9.—The 3rd army corps after a brilliant action of Saturday at Kelly's Ford, encamped on the south side, resting till daylight yesterday morning when they took the lead in the pursuit of the rebels, followed by the 2nd and 1st corps in order. About noon they came upon a strong force of cavalry and light artillery posted in a line on a hill near the railroad and two miles east of Brandy Station. The 3rd division under Gen. Carr, were in advance, and Col. Keifer's brigade supported by the other two brigades of this division, immediately charged upon and soon drove them from their position. This division, with its artillery, followed them leisurely, dispensing severe punishment upon them as they retreated up the railroad to a point two miles beyond Brandy Station.

Casualities on our side were very light, not exceeding seven or eight wounded.

While this was going on the other corps was scouring the country up the river and towards Stevensburg, but could find only occasional struggles from the retreating army which has evidently left its well prepared winter quarters only a few hours previous. We find the whole country gone over so far filled with camps, many of them with commodious log tents.

Meanwhile it is reported that movements are being made by another column in a more southerly direction; and the report of Kilpatrick's being in possession of the heights back of Fredericksburg is reiterated.

It is further stated that Lee is not with the forces in front of Mead, but that A. C. Hill and Ewill are in command. Lee is reported to have gone to Chattanooga.

Young Girls Enticed Off.

On Saturday last six or eight young girls mysteriously disappeared from this city and Putnam. One of them fortunately left a note in her room, stating that they were going in charge of a captain to the South, to act as nurses in a military hospital. The parents of the young adventurers were agonized with grief when they discovered they had gone, and immediately dispatched two or three gentlemen after them. By last evening's Express, we learn that two girls, supposed to belong to the party, one hailing from Zanesville and the other from Putnam, were arrested at the depot in that city on Saturday afternoon, dressed in military apparel, They had a large quantity of letters from anonymous correspondents, who are in the army, and, judging from the tenor of the communications and the actions of the girls, there is no doubt but what they were enticed away from there comfortable homes by that romantic but decidedly injurious pleasure of answering or inserting advertisements headed, "Wanted Correspondence." They had purchased tickets for Cincinnati. Their exposure appears to have been taken very hard by them, and in reality they were on their way to join their pretended lovers. The Express says they behaved very modestly, and appeared to be, as they really are, highly respectable. These girls are perfectly innocent, but most woefully deluded. They will be returned to Zanesville. It is earnestly to be hoped that the others will also be found and be sent home before it is too late.—Zanesville Courier

There is a Chippewa Indian squaw who is one hundred and twenty years old living at Red Lake Crossing. Her progeny numbers hundreds—some of them full bloods, many of them, through degradation, half breed. She is the first Chippewa woman that ever set foot on the shores of Red Lake. She is hale and hearty yet, but resembles somewhat the idea one always forms of a mummy. She is represented as being the oldest one of her tribe now living.—La Crosse Democrat.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1862, with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P. Folsom in 1852, and by E. D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot. Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota."

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors, at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th, 1861," which waiver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagors, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.32, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount to be due on said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

Dated, November 2, 1863.

THE Draft in this State has been postponed until the fifth of January.

THE past week has been one of very fair weather, quite favorable for the supply train now on its way to the agencies.

MESSRS Willard & Barney, have completed the removal of their building, and are fitting it up anew throughout.

REMOVED.—Mr. Porter has been removed from his position as Express and Stage agent at this place, and Mr. J. G. Simpson, an old and experienced employee of Burbanks appointed in his place.

We are indebted to Messrs Kyte & Torry, for a lot of fine apples. Their fruit Stand can be found near Leech's stone building. Chestnuts, Hickory-nuts, and every thing good have they.

Four thousand dollars in greenbacks were paid to merchants and mechanics in this vicinity, from Friday of last week, up to Tuesday of this, on account of the Indian supply train.

Charlie Heinze has taken us in "out of the wet," and presented us with a bottle of native grape wine. As we never drink, we are going to present it to the first friend we find who does!

Charlie has gone to St. Paul after new goods, and will bring on a stock of groceries.

DRESS MAKING.—Mrs. Baxter has established herself in the dress making business, and her rooms can be found directly over Finch & Thurston's grocery store. We hear her highly spoken of as a competent dress maker.

Governor Swift, during his visit to Washington, says the Press, endeavored to secure the establishment of a Government Hospital in this State, where our sick and wounded soldiers can be cared for. There is a fair prospect of his efforts being crowned with success.

WE call attention to the card of Dr. Wm. Frisbie, in another column. In his former home the Doctor's reputation as a physician was a No 1, and we trust those who may need the services of a physician will extend to him a share of their patronage. He may be found at his office at any hour of the day or night.

Finch & Thurston have opened up, "and more to." They received a large lot of goods yesterday, and concluded the best way to make it known was through the columns of the UNION. They are experienced tradesmen, and buy no goods but what are saleable. Buy ye of them.

E. H. SMITH & Co.,—In another column will be found the card of the Messrs, Smith. Their office for this winter will be found just above Tinkom's Drug Store. They buy and sell coin, Exchange, and Government and State vouchers, and sell exchange on all principal cities in Europe. They are also agents for the Liverpool packets. We observe that the Chicago and De Kalb papers, speak in terms of praise of the business capacity and enterprise of this firm. And we trust our merchants and business men will extend to them the hand of confidence, and patronize them so far as they can.

D. H. TYNER'S LIVERY STABLE BURNED.—Tuesday evening about six o'clock, two men who were standing on the corner of Main and Front streets, discovered a light in the hay loft of Mr. Tyner's Livery Stable. At first they took it to be the light of a candle; but it increased so rapidly that they soon concluded the stable was on fire, and quickly gave the alarm. There was no one in the stable when the alarm was given, but the man who has charge of it. Mr. Pay having gone to supper, and Mr. Harmen Tyner having just started up town. A large number of people were soon on the ground, however, and went to work with a will to get out the horses, and remove the other property in the stable.

At this time the fire was all on the second floor, burning in the hay and roof, not a spark having fallen to the lower floor. The horses were untied and turned loose into the street. One of them not being disposed to go out, had to be blindfolded. The buggies, sleighs, harnesses, saddles and office furniture were safely removed. In a bin in the back part of the stable were from fifty to a hundred bushels of corn. Men were engaged in taking it out, but had removed only a few bushels, when the roof fell in and the intense heat drove them away.

The wind at this time was in the south-east, and was driving the fire directly on to the buildings in the rear of Messrs Shaubut's and Meagher's stores, and strong fears were entertained at one time that they too would be burned. The Hook and Ladder Company were on hand by this time with their hooks and poles, and commenced tearing away the sheds and a small frame building standing near. All the government hay stowed away in the log stable was taken out and the roof covered with blankets kept constantly wet. Every precaution was taken to keep the fire from spreading. The barn was soon burned down, thus rendering the efforts to keep the fire from spreading successful.

The building was not insured, and the loss to Mr. Tyner, including about two tons of hay and the grain, will be about $500. No clue whatever can be found as to how the fire originated. Smoking up stairs was never allowed, and no one had been up there for two hours previous to the discovery of the fire. It was no doubt the work of an incendiary.

This misfortune, coming so untimely, when Mr. Tyner is just recovering from a long fit of sickness, and not able to help himself, and lumber so scarce that none is to be had, with which to build again, has entirely broken up his business for the present. The entire community sympathize with him.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON WRITING.—We have been obliged to lay aside the report of the committee on writing, until this week. Those of our young friends who have been looking so anxiously for it, will be gratified this week.

MANKATO, Oct. 23, 1863.

To Prof. A. J SHAW:

The Committee appointed by the scholars of your school for the purpose of examining the specimens of writing placed in their hands, and deciding upon their merits, beg leave to present the following statement as their report:

The Committee met Thursday evening, and conducted their examination in the following manner; There were three prizes to be given; one for the best specimen of writing, one for the greatest improvement made during the term, and one for the specimen showing the second best improvement. It was decided to divide them into three classes, and to select from the first class the best specimen of writing, also the specimen showing the greatest improvement; and to take from the second class the specimen showing the second best improvement. The third class contained those specimens showing improvement, but not sufficient to come under the head of second class. After the classifying was concluded, no further attention was paid to the specimens of the third class and they were laid aside.

The Committee then proceeded to decide upon the best writing, from the specimens in the first class. Each specimen was carefully examined by each member of the Committee, and the one having the greatest number of correct letters, accurately and neatly formed, was adjudged to be the best written specimen. The committee would therefore decide that specimen "No. 62"* is entitled to the prize for being the best written.

Good writing depends entirely upon the correct formation of letters. An easy and graceful, and even a beautiful style, can be obtained in a sort of running hand, the letters all being too pointed. But to acquire perfection, every letter should have its proper curve, slope and shade.

Your committee proceeded in the manner as above stated in determining as to the specimen in which the greatest improvement had been made, and also the second best.

They would therefore decide that the writer of specimen "No 6" has made the greatest improvement, and that of "No. 13" has made the second best.

There were several specimens in which marked improvement was apparent, of which we would mention No's. 32, 31, 94, 11, 1, 79, 59, and 20. The scholar who sent in specimen No. 20, will, by perseverance, surely become a good writer. Many of the specimens in the third class evidently evinced no care, whatever, in the formation of the letters, and some of them seemed to have forgotten the principles by which they should be governed.

Before closing this report the committee would return their thanks to the school for the honor conferred upon them, and would speak in terms of commendation and praise of Prof Shaw, as a very competent teacher of practical penmanship.

Your Committee would recommend that the last specimens of the second term be presented for the prizes of the term just commenced. All of which is respectfully submitted.

FAREWELL.—Farewell is a lonely sound, and its echo has caused many a sad heart; but none would feel saddened but rather be greatly cheered and benefitted by saying farewell to all kinds of Soda and Saleratus except DeLand & Co.'s Chemical Saleratus, which will scatter rays of sunshine and happiness in every household when properly used, being always uniform and perfect.

SALE OF THE MANKATO HOUSE—We forgot to notice, last week, the sale of the Mankato House, and the change of proprietors. Mr. Burt, the late popular clerk, and Mr. D. S. Law, one of the proprietors of the hotel at Winnebago City, have purchased the entire hotel property consisting of house, and furniture, barn and two lots, for the sum of $3,500

The experience which Messrs. Burt & Law have had in hotel keeping, is a sufficient guarentee that the popularity which the Mankato House enjoyed during Mr Shaubut's administration, will not be lessened. We commend them to the traveling public.

To-morrow, George Andrus will sell at public auction eight head of horses, and a lot of other property.

RETURNED—Dr. M. R. Wickersham, of the Winnebago Agency, returned home last week.

Thanksgiving Proclamation by the President.

The year that is drawing towards its close has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties, which are so constantly enjoyed that we are prone to forget the sources from which they come, others have been added, which are of so extraordinary a nature that they cannot fail to penetrate and soften even the heart which is habitualy insensible to the ever watchful providence of Almighty God.

In the midst of a civil war of unequaled magnitude and severity, which has sometimes seemed to invite and provoke the aggression of foreign States, peace has been preserved with all nations, order has been maintained, the laws have been respected and obeyed, and harmony has prevailed everywhere, except in the theater of military conflict; while that theater has been greatly contracted by the advancing armies and navies of the Union.

The needful diversion of wealth and strength from the fields of peaceful industry to the national defense, has not arrested the plow, the shuttle, or the ship. The ax has enlarged the borders of our settlements, and the mines, as well of iron and coal as the precious metals, have yielded even more abundantly than heretofore. Population has steadily increased, notwithstanding the waste that has been made in the camp, the siege, and the battlefield; and the country, rejoicing in the consciousness of augmented strength and vigor, is permitted to expect a continuance of years, with a large increase of freedom.

No human counsel hath devised, nor hath any mortal hand worked out, these great things. They are the gifts of the Most High God, who while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy.

It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently and greatfully acknowledged by the whole American people. I do, therefore invite my fellow-citizens in every part of the United States, and also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to our benificent Father who dwelleth in the heavens; and I recommend to them that, while offering up the ascriptions justly due Him for such singular deliverance and blessings they do also, with humble penitence for our national perverseness and disobedience, commenced to His tender care all those who are widows, orphans or sufferers in the lamentable civil strife in which we are unavoidably engaged, and frequently implore the interposition, of the Almighty hand to heal the wounds of the nation, and to restore it as soon as may be consistent with the Divine purpose, to the full enjoyment of peace, harmony, tranquility and union.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this the third day of October, in the year of our Lord 1863, and of the independence of the United States the eighty-eight.

A. LINCOLN,

By the President.
WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

HIGH HANDED PROCEEDING.—Yesterday morning several deck hands from the Northern Belle, entered suit before Squire Strother against the steamer Northern Belle, for wages. They claimed that Capt. Martin agreed to give them $75 per month when they shipped from La Crosse, but now refused to pay that much. Squire Strother at once issued an attachment against the boat, and constable John Pendergast set out to execute it. Instead of levying on the boat, as the custom always has been he proceeded, with several assistants to the cabin and removed from thence all the chairs, even compelling some of the lady passengers to give up those they were sitting on. The chairs were taken away, but Capt. Martin compromised the affair with the deck hands some how, and left at the usual hour for La Crosse.

It seems that the offer of $75 was made conditionaly, and the conditions not being fulfilled, were not obligatory on the officers of the boat. This, however is nothing unusual; such cases happen frequently. Those low offscorings swear to anything that suit them, regardless of truth. It is a wonder they had not swore that the offer was $100 per month, since they have a Court, where, according to to their own boast, judgement is given to them right or wrong. "How long, O, Lord, how long?"—St. Paul Press.

PRODIGIOUS.—We learn from one of the attaches of the Sioux Indemnity Commission now in session in this city, that the single item of "Ruttabagas," claimed in the sworn statements of claimants, if allowed would amount to tens of thousands of dollars. The number of bushels destroyed by reason of the Sioux outbreak is incredible. By a mathematical demonstration it has been shown that if all the "Rutas" thus said to have been destroyed were evenly spread over the entire State, the whole surface would be covered to the depth of one foot.

Pity the bloody Sioux did not undertake to eat them. They would soon have been in the interesting condition of the Anaconda when it swallowed the ox, unable to bend or crawl. Then, indeed, SIBLEY'S Great Expedition might have succeeded in catching them.

Wisconsin.

We have received a large number of reports by mail from our friends in various parts of the State, which will be found in any other column. In nearly every instance the Union gain is quite large, running all the way from twenty to eighty on the vote of small towns, and in many cases a greater gain even than the larger of these figures is reported.

If the whole State has gone as these towns have, our estimate of 15,000 majority on the home vote will be quite within the mark, although there never was an election whose results was more difficult to estimate accurately than the present.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS—While Brandreth's Pills are so potent for good to diseased bodies, they are harmless as bread. The babe at the breast or the man of ripest years, and delicate females, are certain to receive an increase of health from the use of these pills blessed of Heaven.

It has been said by an able physician, that "this medicine always benefits and never injures." Wherein is the superlative quality. The Brandreth Pills have no power or action but upon impure humors in the blood. They seize only the impurities in and around the parts affected by disease; all parts involved in diseased actions are operated upon, and cleansed from all foulness, and reinfused with "Life" by the wonderful curative powers contained and inherent of the most justly famed BRANDRETH'S PILLS.

Millions of people, whose lives appeared to be at the last ebb worn out by fever's consuming fires, by consumption's insidious advances, by racking torments of inflammatory rheumatism, have been cured by the use of these pills. The persons are living witnesses, and thousands are residents in every city in America. Principal office, No 294, Canal St, N. Y.

How Lost! How Restored!

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price, Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically. CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

SINGER & CO'S.

Letter "A" Sewing Machine.

WITH ALL HE IMPROVEMENTS.

IS the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Turlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful, substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality.

And THEODORE TILTON,

Is issued in the same form, and at the same low price of

TWO DOLLARS

Per annum, notwithstanding the great advance in white paper.

It Affords its Readers:

Fair and thoughtful editorial discussions of the most important facts, occurrences, and interests of this nation, and of the world.

A comprehensive record of facts, men, and movements of the Religious World.

A full and careful weekly history of the progress of the rebellion.

Ample chronicles of the important general news, home and foreign.

Fair and careful accounts of new books; made on the express principle of serving as a safe-guide to buyers.

Interesting correspondence from Washington, from the West, from the army, from abroad.

Six columns a week of carefully selected Family Reading; being prose and poetry, suited to interest both the Old and the Young.

A full chronicle of the progress of business, and of the current prices of merchandise, produce, and live stock in New York [illegible].

[illegible] prepared commercial and financial article, embracing the latest and most reliable information in regard to the money market, trade, commerce, and business generally. In this department The Independent has secured a valuable reputation for fairness, boldness, and for discussing all secular topics from the highest moral stand-point.

A Dry Goods Report, furnished particularly for country merchants, a weekly report of the prices current in this city of all descriptions of domestic dry goods. The information thus furnished, so entirely reliable, cannot be found in any other periodical. We have the best of evidence on that point from all quarters. We are not permitted to give the names of the parties who make this weekly report to us, but will state that they are two competent merchants, with entirely different connections, and that they are well known throughout the United States, and have been for years. The prices given are the exact figures at which the several descriptions of goods are sold for NET CASH by the jobbing houses in this city on the day said report is made, viz., Wednesday of each week.

The balance of the purchase money is payable at any time within twenty years, at the option of the purchaser, if interest at seven per cent, per annum is annually paid in advance.

Interest to the first day of June, 1861, must be paid at the time of the purchase

Persons purchasing lands upon which other parties have made improvements, will be required to pay the owner of the same the appraised value of the improvements, one half to be paid at the time of the sale, and the balance within six months thereafter, with interest at seven per cent. per annum,

In case the person occupying or improving the land has damaged the same, the appraised amount of damage will be deducted from his improvements, and where the occupant is the purchaser, the damage will be added to the price of the land

No lands will be sold for less than the appraised value.

Purchase money payable in specie and legal tender notes.

Valuable Lands for Sale.

BY direction of the Hon. Secretary of the Interior, the undersigned will receive sealed bids for the purchase of any or all of the lands hereinafter described, they being among the choicest and best farming land in Minnesota.

These lands comprise what are known as the Winnebago Trust Lands in the State of Minnesota, and will be sold to the highest and best bidder in tracts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres each, under the provisions of a treaty concluded with the Winnebago Indians, April 15th, 1859, and an act of Congress, approved February 21st 1863, entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their Reservation, in Minnesota, for their benefit."

No bid will be entertained at a rate less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

In case a bid is accepted, the party making the same will be notified as soon thereafter as practicable. If within thirty days after such notice the party shall fail to make payment to the undersigned, the land for which such bid was made will be subject to sale to any other person.

Patents will be issued and transmitted to purchasers as soon after payment as the same can be prepared. Payments may be made either in cash or in the certificates of indebtedness of the Winnebago Indians, issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for the debt of said Indians, and secured to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said lands by the third article of the treaty above mentioned. The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. All bids must be sealed and addressed to the undersigned, Washington City, D. C., and endorsed "Bid for Winnebago Tract Land."

HARPER'S

New Monthly Magazine.

Critical Notices of the Press.

The volumns Bound constitute of themselves a liberary of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.

The most popular Monthly in the world. —N. Y. Obsercer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People: and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each Number contains fully 144 pages reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good woodcuts: and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature. —Trubner's Guide to American Literature London.

No Magazine in Europe or America is so well known, none has half as many readers; and, we may safely say, none has received so large a tribute of admiration from the cultivated class, that delighted in a healthy, diversified, elevating periodical literature. It is the foremost magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

TERMS.

The papers of permanent value which have been published in almost every Number render a complete set of Harper's Magazine a desirable acquisition to public or private library. WHEELER & WILSON'S
SEWING
MACHINES

MERIT ALONE MAKES A SEWING MACHINE VALUABLE.

The people are perceiving that Glowing Representations are not Merit.

That it is economy and wisdom to purchase only Sewing Machines of known practical utility.

THIS MACHINE IS PROFITABLE AND AVAILABLE A LIFE TIME.

An annual dividend of 100 to 500 per cent. (on its cost) may be obtained in its use, by its possession.

There are over 95,000 WHEELER & WILSONS Machines in use in this country and Europe.

It is the only Machine in the world making the Lock-Stitch with Rotating Hook and using the Glass Foot.

The Wheeler & Wilson Machines are right, and if they do not operate well it is because people are not fully instructed in their use.

☞ALL MACHINES ARE WARRANTED, AND FULL INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN.☜

All persons owning Wheeler & Wilson Machines can have them properly adjusted, and full instructions given in their use, free of charge, by calling at the wheeler & Wilson Rooms, in the Greenlief Block, Third street, a few doors below the Post Office

Poetry.

Little Rose.

She comes with fairy footsteps;
Softly their echoes fall:
And her shadow plays like a summer shade,
Across the garden wall
The golden light is dancing bright,
'Mid the mazes of her hair,
And her fair young locks are waving free
To the wooing of the air.

Like a sportive fawn she boundeth
So gleefully along,
And as a wild young bird she caroleth,
The burden of a song
The summer flowers are clustering thick
Around her dancing feet,
And on her cheek the summer breeze
Is dancing soft and sweet.

The very sunbeams seems to linger
Above that holy head
And the wild flowers at her coming
Their richest fragrance shed.
And oh! how lovely light and fragrance
Mingle in the life within!
Oh! how fondly do they nestle
Round the soul that knows no sin!

She comes, the spirit of her childhood—
A thing of mortal birth,
Yet bearing still a breath o' heaven,
To redeem her from the earth,
She comes in bright-robed innocence,
Unsoiled by blot or blight,
And passeth by our wayward path,
A gleam of angel light.

Oh! blessed things are children!
The gifts of heavenly love;
They stand betwixt our worldly hearts
And better things above
They link us with the spirit world
By purity and truth,
And keep our hearts still fresh and young
With the presence of their youth.

—Blackwood's Magazine.

True Loveliness.

She who thinks a noble heart
Better than a noble mein—
Honors virtue more than art—
Though 'tis less in fashion seen—
Whatsoe'er her fortune be,
She's the bride—the wife—for me.

She who deems that inward grace
Far surpasses outward show,
She who values less the face,
Than the charms the soul can throw—
Whatsoe'er her fortune be,
She's the bride—the wife—for me.

She who knows the heart requires
Something more than lips of dew—
That when love's brief rose expires,
Love itself dies with it too—
Whatsoe'er her fortune be,
She's the bride—the wife—for me.

Parting.

We clasp our hands; we turn and go,
Our footsteps echoing years between;
We meet again, we hardly know
These ghosts of loved ones long unseen.

We clasp our hands; we turn and go,
Far travelers with strange hours and years
The face, the form, the voice we know,
They come not back from time and tears

We clasp our hands in loving trust;
We send our voices o'er the wave;
No hand can reach us—from the dust;
No voice can find us—in the grave.

How to Pay the Rent.

'I don't see how I am going to get through this year and pay my rent, and support my wife and children,' said a young man to a friend as they were walking home together at nightfall. 'It looks darker and darker every day. My receipts are not half what they used to be, and my expenses are a great deal higher. Mary is a capital manager, though, and if any body can steer the ship safe through in-doors, she will. Such contriving and cutting over of old things to make new ones for Frank and little Fan, beats everything I ever saw. But the rent is what plagues me. This home just suits us, and I wouldn't move, I believe, unless I was turned out,' and the young man tossed a cigar out into the street, heaving a sigh and quickening his pace, as troubled people are wont to do.

'There goes a part of your rent,' said his friend, pointing to the cigar just thrown away.

'A pretty small part, you would say I guess, if you had fifty dollars to make up every quarter when you could not see where five of it were to come from.'

'I can put you in the way of paying one quarter with perfect ease.'

'Be so kind as to do it, then—the quicker the better.'

'Just step in here and let me draw up a pledge for you, in which you promise to leave off cigars, and then when you are tempted to buy one, slip the paper out of your vest pocket and read it over. That would save you in the course of the year over fifty dollars.,

'But then a cigar is such a comfort to a fellow when he is perplexed and worried to death with his affairs. I feel wretchedly without one after dinner.'

'How will you manage when you are fifty, if you are such a slave to a bad habit at thirty? Be assured, Tom, it will bring seven others more mighty than the first, and you will be bound hand and foot. Come, Tom, shake yourself and throw off this tyrant. Are you going to let your wife bear all the sacrifice and self-denial, while you selfishly stick to all your old luxuries? You are more of a man than that, I know. I'll draw up the pledge for you and bring it over to night—what do you say?'

'I'll think about it, and try for a week,' said Tom, who was beginning to be half convinced.

'That will not answer. You must commit yourself to the fight if you are going to break up a bad habit of several years' standing. You must go into it body and soul, determined to win, or you will be weaker than ever. Come, it is fully worth the effort; a chance to make fifty dollars should not be thrown away these times.'

Some panoramic pictures passed slowly before Tom's mind. He saw his wife and children in a narrow, uncomfortable home, brought there because he could not give up his selfish indulgences; he thought of the pleasant, elegant home from which he had brought his Mary when she first placed her hand in his and promised to walk through life by his side. He saw her slowly wearing herself out to provide for the little ones, while he put no shoulder to the wheel, and the vision roused his really generous nature which too much ease had covered up with rubbish.

'I'll do it, Wilson,' he said, with energy. 'I will cut off that and all other superfluities, and see if I cannot help Mary in the retrenching business.'

His friend warmly seconded the resolution, for he knew Tom well enough to understand that the chief thing he needed was to be fully aroused.

The good resolutions were well carried out, and the end of the year found the household still in the pleasant old home, out of debt and never more happy and comfortable in their lives.

Cut off the superfluities this year, and see if they do not go a long way towards paying rent. You will be the happier for it. That is one of the surest first fruits of self-denial.

A Romantic Incident of the war.

A few mornings ago Governor Curtin of Pennsylvania, was called upon at the Continental Hotel, in Philadelphia, by a young lady. When she was introduced into the parlor she expressed her great joy at seeing him, at the same time imprinting a kiss upon his forehead.

'Madame,' said he, 'to what am I indebted for this unexpected salutation?'

'Sir, do you know me?

'Take a chair,' said the Governor, at the same time extending one of the handsomest in the parlor.

'Shortly after the battle of Antietam you were upon that bloody field,' said she to the Governor.

'I was,' replied the governor.

'You administered to the wants of the wounded and dying.'

'It was my duty as a feeling man.'

'You did your duty well. Heaven alone will reward you sir, for in this life there is no reward adequately expressive of the merit due you. You sir, imparted consolation and revived the hopes of a dying soldier of the Twenty-eight Ohio. He was badly wounded in the arm; you lifted him into an ambulance, and the blood dripping from him stained your hands and your clothing. The soldier was as dear to me as life itself.'

'A husband?' said the Governor.

'No sir.'

'A brother, perhaps?'

'No sir.'

'A father?'

'No sir'

'A son?'

'No sir.'

'A lover?'

'No sir.'

'If not a husband, father, brother, son, or lover, who then, could it be?' said the Governor at length breaking the silence. 'This is an enigma to me. Please explain more about the gallant soldier of Ohio.

'Well sir, that soldier gave you a ring—C. E. D. were the letters engraved on the interior. That is the ring now upon your little finger. He told you to wear it and carefully have you done so.'

The Governor pulled the ring off, and sure enough the letters were there.

'The finger that used to wear that ring will never wear it any more. The hand is dead, but the soldier still lives.'

The Governor was now more interested than ever. 'Well, madam' said he 'tell me all about it. Is this ring yours? Was it given to you by a soldier whom you loved?

'I loved him as I loved my life, but he never returned that love. He had more love for his country than for me. I honor him for it. The soldier that placed that ring upon your finger now stands before you.' So saying the strange lady arose and stood before the Governor.

The scene that now ensued we leave to the imagination of the reader. A happy hour passed. The girl who had thus introduced herself was Catharine E. Davidson, of Sheffield, Ohio. She was engaged to be married but her future husband responded to the call of the President, and she followed him by joining another regiment. He was killed in the same battle where she fell wounded. She is alone in the world, her father and mother having departed this life five years ago. She was the soldier of the Twenty-eight Ohio who had placed the ring upon the finger of Governor Curtin for the kind attention given her upon the bloody field of Antietam.

The right arm had been amputated about halfway between the elbow and shoulder. The interview finally ended, and having at last seen her benefactor, she bade him and his friends adieu, taking with her an order, bearing the signature of A. G. Curtin, for one of the most modern patent arms.

How to Send Grain to Market.

It is unaccountable to me that so many farmers have not yet learned how to send grain to market so as to make them pay the most profit. I see boat loads and car loads of such produce passing through my neighborhood on its way to our city, hundreds of miles distant. It brings prices that would make a Western farmers pockets jingle merrily, only that a large part of the money stops in the hands of the transporters, to pay freight. Now railroads and canal boats are excellent institutions, but I have never found so good a way to send corn to market, as on four legs of a well fattened animal. A bullock or a hog will pack away a few bushels of corn more snugly than any freight master could do, and it brings better prices after they have worked it over into beef and pork, than in the raw state. With the exceptions of wheat and perhaps rye, I would not sell a peck of grain from my farm, except for seed. Along in the summer, when pasture is scarce, and plenty of cattle are to be picked up, I secure enough to consume all the corn I can spare, over what will be needed to fatten my hogs, (these I raise at home,) and just before cool weather commences, I set the beef factories to work. The chips give me profit in the shape of manure enough to make the operation pay, even if I could only get the same price for the grain as before feeding it out, but there is a gain here, too. When I read about Illinois farmers and others using corn for fuel because it is cheaper than coal, I think they need instruction on this point. If they have not capital enough to buy stock to eat up their grain, let them borrow the cattle, and agree to return so many pounds of fattened beef for each animal, in the same way that sheep are taken on shares; it would be mutually beneficial to themselves, and to those who have more animals than they can keep profitably. I know that many years hence, when their lands begin to show signs of weakness, as those of western New York have done, it is very easy to keep a soil fertile, but a slow and costly operation to restore a worn out one. But whether the manure be used or not, I believe it will be found to pay to feed out our grain before sending it to market.

FINDING FAULT.—A great part of the patriotism of some people seems to consist in grumbling at the government. Nothing is easier than to find fault. People who have not the remotest comprehension of even what constitutes the government, much less of what is needed to conduct successfully its million-wheeled machinery, condemn with easy assurance the plans of statesmen and the strategy of generals. People who take not the slightest risk either upon their persons or their property, will decry with ready voice every misfortune or miscalculation of those on whom has fallen all the responsibility of action. In such a complicated piece of machinery as the government of the United States, and such an emergency as the present, so entirely unparalleled in history, it is impossible but that mistakes should occur. That these mistakes should be fairly and openly criticised by those acquainted with the subject, is all right. But is not right that people should give themselves up to a general spirit of querulous discontent. The charity which the Gospel enjoins should be no more excluded from political than from other subjects. It is the duty of every man to judge the government with the same candor and forbearance with which he would judge a neighbor, or with which he would himself be judged. To be perpetually croaking at every reverse in public affairs, to visit with harsh and indiscriminate censure every act of government of which we cannot as yet see any justifying reason, is a sin and a wrong. Political croaking at the best of times is a folly. At this time it is a grievous sin. It is next door to open treason.

A MOTHER'S GRAVE.—Earth has some sacred spots where we feel like loosing the shoes from our feet, and treading with holy reverence, where common words of pleasure are unfitting; places where friendship's hands have lingered in each other, where vows have been plighted, prayers offered and tears of parting shed. Oh, how the thoughts hover around such places, and travel back through immeasurable space to visit them. But of all the spots on the green earth, none is so sacred as that where rests, waiting the resurrection, those we once loved and cherished. Hence, in all ages, the better portion of mankind have chosen the loved spots where they loved to wander at eventide and weep alone. But among charnel houses of the dead if there is one spot more sacred than the rest, it is a mother's grave. There sleeps the mother of our infancy—she whose heart was a stranger to every other feeling but love, and who could always find excuses for us when we could find none for ourselves. There she sleeps and we love the very earth for her sake.

The Wager.

Dr. Jameson is one of the most able, talented and eccentric surgeons of the present century. His practice embraces a large circuit, and his fame extends to every part of Massachusetts. The Dr. was one morning in his office poring over some medical work, when a loud rap at the door aroused him.

"Come in," said the Dr.; and an old lady hobbled into the apartment, who seemed the embodiment of dirt and negligence.

"Doctor, I've got a dreadful sore foot—can you help it?" said she.

"I will try—let me see it."

The old crone proceeded to divest her understanding of the apology for shoe, with which it was covered, and displayed at the astonished doctor a foot!

"La, doctor, ye needn't be in such wonderment about it. There's dirtier feet than that, I'll warrant—aye, and dirtier feet than that in yer own house, as proud as the young ladies, your daughters, are, for all that."

And the old hag cackled forth at the doctor's surprise.

"Woman, if you can find a dirtier foot than that in my house, I will give you five dollars, and cure your foot for nothing."

"Pon honor?" cried the hag.

"Pon honor," said the doctor.

The woman stripped off the other stocking, and displayed a foot that beggared all description, grinning in the face of the astonished doctor she exclaimed:

"Gie me the money! I knew it—I washed' tother fore I came in here!"

A BEAUTIFUL FIGURE.—Life is beautifully compared to a fountain fed by a thousand streams, that perish if one be dried. It is a silver cord, twisted with a thousand strings, that part asunder if one be broken. Frail and thoughtless mortals are surrounded by innumerable dangers, which make it much more strange that they escape so long than that they almost all perish suddenly at last. We are encompassed with accidents every day to crush the mouldering tenements we inhabit. The seed of disease are planted in our constitutions by nature. The earth atmosphere, whence we draw the breath of life, impregnated with death. Health is made to operate its own destruction, the food that nourishes containing the elements of decay; the soul that animates it, by vivifying first, tends to wear it out by its own action; death lurks in am bush along the paths. Notwithstanding this is the truth, so palpably confirmed by the daily examples before our eyes, how little do we lay it at heart. We see little our friends and neighbors die among us; but how seldom does it occur to our thoughts that our knell shall, perhaps, give the next fruitless warning to the world.

FALL WORK IN THE GARDEN.—Could trees or plants be removed from the nursery or lawn in early summer, when the leaves are so brilliantly green and the flowers so beautiful and fragrant, then everybody with a rod or two of ground would turn planters. But, trees must be planted when destitute of their summer robes, when they have no beauty to recommend them. The work of planting, too, cannot be done as a general rule, when the genial sun and singing birds charm the dullest to an admiring sense of nature's beauties, and woo even the sluggard to the garden. This work must be performed when the winds are chilly, when the cold blasts from the ice fields of the North benumb the fingers, when the soil is damp and everything has an unpleasant aspect. The planter, then, must be a man of forethought, faith and patience—one who is willing to labor and wait for coming good, having confidence in the glorious promise that "seed time and harvest shall not fail." All the improved in transplanting trees, shrubs, &c.; the walks should be put in order, and everything possible done in the garden to lighten spring work. Our springs are short, and the weather usually quite unfavorable for out-door work. Dig, drain, and get everything in order.

We do not die wholly at our death: we have mouldered away long before. Faculty after faculty, interest after interest, attachment after attachment disappear; we are almost torn from ourselves while living, year after year sees us no longer the same, and death only consigns the last fragment of what we were to the grave.

Secretary Chase and an Office Seeker.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, who traveled with Mr. Chase during his recent visit to Ohio, tells the following good story of an office seeker.

"Friday morning the Secretary had been importuned by a certain Ohioan for an office.

'What are you doing now?' inquired the Secretary, 'don't you mean to go home to vote?'

'No, I guess not, 'replied the sanguine applicant indifferently; 'i hardly think it is worth while to do so for that.'

'Well, sir, if I had five hundred offices to give away to-morrow, no man should have even the poorest of them who didn't make every exertion in his power to go home and vote

The applicant retired somewhat abashed.

As the party came out from the Oakland breakfast table, who should encounter the Secretary but the same office hunter.

'Well Govenor,' he exclaimed, as he seized his hand in a wonderful outburst of friendship, 'I'm going to vote. I thought it was every man's duty to go, no matter what the expense.'

The fellow may not get his office, but, as the divines would say, it is evident that he don't intend to neglect the use of the appointed means.

BIG WORDS.—Big words are great favorites with people of small ideas and weak conceptions. They are often employed of men of mind, when they wish to use language that may best conceal their thoughts. With few exceptions however, illiterate and half educated persons use more "big words" than the people of thorough education.

It is very common but very egregious mistake, to suppose that long words are more genteel than short ones—just as the same sort of people imagine high colors and flashy figures improve the style of dress. They are the kind of folks who do not begin, but always "commence."—They don't live but "reside." They don't go to bed, but, mysteriously "retire." They don't eat and drink but "partake of refreshments." They are never sick but extremely indisposed." And instead of dying at last they "decease."

The strength of the English language as in the short words—chiefly monosyllables in earnest seldom use any other. Love, hate, anger, grief, joy, express themselves in short words and direct sentences; while cunning falsehood and affectation delight in what Horace calls verb equipedalia—words a "foot and a half long."

BAD STATE OF THE REBEL CURRENCY.—All the Southern papers are proposing plans to stop the depreciation of Confederate money, which is now worth but little more than the paper it is printed on. The most radical scheme is proposed by a writer in the Richmond Whig:

"If our circulation of treasury notes is $500,000,000, at present, and the expenses of the Government for the next year are $500,000,000, we must collect in taxes 500,000,000, either in money or in the tax in kind, otherwise the currency will continue to decline and prices to go up. This will be regarded as a great tax. So it is. It is equal to the supposed outstanding debt of the Confederate States—that is, every person in the Confederate States must pay all the money he or she may have to-day, or in one year, to carry on successfully our war of independence. Then we stop the depreciation with certainty. We can do this rather than fail; and we had better do this than to let our credit die under the present condition of our country. I, for one, say, apply the remedy, and apply it at once; and if it takes every Treasury note in the Confederate States collected in one year, and again paid out to carry out the war and sustain our credit, I say, do it; and it is a good and safe investment, and should be done by a people situated as we are, and that without a murmur.

ALL EQUAL HERE.—It is related of the Duke of Wellington, that once when he remained to take the sacrament at his parish church, a very poor old man had gone up the opposite aisle, and reaching the communion table, knelt down close beside the duke; some one—a pew owner, probably—came and touched the poor man on the shoulder, and whispered to him to move further away, or to rise and wait until the duke had received the bread and wine. But the eagle eye and quick ear of the great commander caught the meaning of that touch and that whisper. He clasped the old man's hand and held him; to prevent his rising, and in a reverential under tone, said most distinctly, said, "Do not move—we are all equal here."

Words of Wisdom.

We say of the blind man, from whom the visible world is shut out, that he is poorer by half the world than the man who sees. O, ye spiritually blind: ye indeed are poorer than us by a whole world.

To be without sympathy is to be alone in the world; without friends or country, home or kindred.—Bovie.

No men ever despise physic so much as physicians because no men so thoroughly understand how little it can perform.

There is this difference between happiness and wisdom; he that thinks himself the happiest man really is so, but he who thinks himself the wisest man is generally the greatest fool.—Lacon.

The character of covetousness is what a man acquires more through some niggardliness or ill grace in little and inconsiderable things than of expenses of any consequence. A very few pounds a year would ease that man of the scandal of avarice.

Every Christian should begin to doubt himself, if, after ten years, he finds that self denial is as hard in the same things as it was in the first.

The highest virtue implies the highest intellect, just as the greatest sacrifices demand the greatest force of character to make them.

It is not known where he who invented the plough was born or where he lived; yet he has effected more for the happiness of the world, than the whole race of heroes and conquerors, who have drenched it with tears and manured it with blood.

One of the lady managers of the fair to come off in Chicago next week says:

"A large number of young ladies would assist at the concert, and would be put into pyramids and in unions of very beautiful shapes."

A Miss Joy was present at a party recently, and in the course of the evening some one used the quotation' "A thing of beauty is a joy forever" when she exclaimed: "I'm glad I am not a beauty, for I shouldn't like to be a Joy forever."

On being asked what he considered the most essential thing for a soldier the Duke of Wellington replies: "A good pair of boots." And on being asked what was the next essential thing he said: Another good pair of boots.' Nothing daunted, the questioner asked what was the next most essential thing, to which the Duke replied, "A good pair of boot-soles in his haversack."

VALUABLE RECEIPTS.—For preserving the complexion, temperance. For whitening the hands, honesty. To remove stains, repentance. For improving sight, observation. The most valuable ring, the home circle. For improving voice, civility. The best rouge, modesty. The best eye-water, charity. A cure for deafness, attention. A mixture to clear the throat, cheerfulness. A wash for wrinkles, contentment. A general beautifier, contentment.

COOKED FOOD.—It has been pretty satisfactorily proved that one pound of cooked corn will make as much pork as two uncooked. Let the hogs be fed with cooked food, and in such quantities as will insure early fattening, as the same amount of pork may be made from less food in warm or mild weather, than in cold. It is said, also, that exercise is not conducive to the rapid development of "his porkship," and that it is economy to confine in close quarters during the fattening period. Be that as it may, the apartments should be kept clean, and free from noxious odors, which may be done by giving frequent and liberal supplies of fresh earth, loam, or turf.

OUR VIVANDIERS.—We have several of these charming creatures in the army. The third corps is more favored in this way than any other, for it has no less than three or four petticoat warriors. The most famous of these is Annie Etheridge, who always followed the fortune of the third brigade. Her dress has been perforated with bullets several times, yet she clings on to the Jessie, attending the dying and wounded. I recollect meeting her at the battle of Chancellorville, with a bullet hole right through her dress, and under the hottest fire, and told her to fall back to the rear.

"No," said she," here are the dead and wounded, and this is my place."

She had been presented with a Kearny medal for her cool bravery, and her devoted attendance on the wounded. Another follows the 3rd Michigan, but I know little of her history.

These ladies, in their Bloomer costume, and their kegs of refreshing drinks slung before them, have a kind of cheering effect upon us, moreover, where petticoats are so scarce.

Claims of Settlers Approved.

We learn by private letters from the General Land Office that the settlers who asked for relief on the Winnebago Reservation, have had their claims approved so far as the amount of damages is concerned, but will not be allowed to enter their claims.

The Vote in Nicollet and Blue Earth Counties.

The vote in Nicollet county at the late election was only 808, while the vote of Blue Earth County was 1194, showing our population to be nearly fifty per cent greater than that of Nicollet.

The Indian Supply Train.

Providence seems to favor the supply train now on its way to the Agencies, as more pleasant weather could not be desired than we have had during the past week. The train is now in the vicinity of Lake Shetek where it will stop a few days to feed, and then proceed on its way.

Considerable trouble took place at Crystal Lake, in consequence of which the train was delayed. Some of the soldiers had volunteered to drive teams, for which they were to be paid $1,25 per day, but were made to believe by parties here in town that it was a private train, and if teamsters could not be obtained the expedition would have to be given up. They were instigated by Copperheads in town to use every means to hinder and break up the train. In one instance we know of, a civilian was offered five dollars a day to go along and "cut up." Nearly seventy five nuts and screws were taken off from the wagons and hid. Forty-six of them were afterwards found.

As soon as Colonel Crooks heard of the disturbance he went up and set matters to rights, giving them to understand that it was a Government train and any efforts to hinder its progress would be treated with the utmost severity. He issued stringent orders in regard to a night patrol around the wagons, and any one found inside those lines the guard had orders to shoot. The soldiers were not so much to blame as the instigators of this cowardly scheme, who will find that the end is not yet.

The Draft.

Below will be found the list of men drafted from this county. It is not valid, of course, as the order postponing the draft to the 5th of January was issued some days prior to the 9th. If the proper effort is made throughout the State to fill our quota under the last call of the President, we need have no fears of a draft in Minnesota. But a great deal of hard work must be done, and it must be undertaken systematically and at once.

Letter from Mr. Russell.

To the Editor of the Union.

Will you allow me through the medium of your paper, to return my cordial thanks to the citizens of Blue Earth County, who so nobly acted out their principles at the Ballot Box at the recent election, and thus gave me a majority of one hundred and twenty-five, over the highest candidate on the opposite representative ticket.

I appreciate it all the more, because the vote thus given, was evidently a vote in favor of pure Republican Union principles, unswayed by local or personal considerations. For in my canvass, I never asked for the vote of any man as a personal favor, or made any promise to aid future aspirants for office.

I am aware that I lost some Republican votes by earnestly denouncing the utter want of political honesty and truthfulness on the part of one of the candidates on the Senatorial ticket. I did this from principle, not to gain votes for myself as a vote for him was of course no loss to me.

If by pursuing this course, under a sense of duty, I lost my election, I in no wise regret it, as I still retain an approving conscience, which I value far more than any office, if such can only be had by treachery and fraud.

I know not how the other defeated candidates may feel, but for my own part I feel much more like rejoicing than desponding. What is a temporary victory of our opponents, gained not on principle, but from local causes. Have we not abundant compensation in witnessing the triumph of our own cause in not only our own State, but also throughout the loyal States. No less than eighteen of them during the past year having given large majorities for the government and the Union.

I have full faith that the intelligent voters of the seventeenth Senatorial and Representative District will not fail at the next election to place our district among the loyal supporters of the Union, and that the supporters of tyranny, oppression, and slavery will soon be a miserable minority in every part of this glorious republic.

"For right is might,
And right the day will win,
To doubt it were disloyal,
To fear it would be sin!"

Unanimous Verdict.—The most rigid analysis by good chemists have failed to discover anything in the Chemical Saleratus which can, when properly used, be in the least degree detrimental to health. While the women of our country entertain sentiments widely different upon other matters, all concur in a verdict that the Chemical Saleratus is the only infallible article in use for light and sweet bread.

Business.—We have never seen a more busy season than the present one Every branch of business seems to be pressed to its utmost limit. Our streets are constantly crowded with teams from the country. Our stores, notwithstanding the almost exorbitant price of all articles of use and convenience, are thronged with customers, who buy without stint.

Recruiting officers say there are plenty of men who would volunteer for the rich bounty offered, but their business is so good that bounty is no consideration to them. Who will say we cannot carry on a war for the Union, and yet be a prosperous people?—Goodhue Volunteer.

Peat Whiskey.—The Peat excitement had fresh fuel added to it yesterday, by the arrival of some countryman from near Hudson, Wis., with a few bottles of Mountain Dew, which he had distilled in a small still, using Peat for fuel. It had the real smoky flavor. (So we are told—as we did not try it.)—Saint Paul Press.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Letter from the Ninth Regiment.

Headquarters 9th Minn. Vols.,
Camp Brown, Jefferson City, Mo
Friday, Nov. 6th, 1863.

To the Editor of the Union :

A splendid autumnal day has just passed over us. The brilliant sunbeams at mid-day were sufficiently warm for bodily comfort;—and were it not for the vivid recollection of drifting snow-flakes having fallen within the last ten days, we could almost imagine ourselves in a climate actually tropical. But the recollection is too chilling to admit of so romantic a deception, and therefore we gracefully fall back upon the stern realities and hasten to lay before your readers the news of the current week.

In my last letter, I briefly alluded to the death of Wm. Griffiths of Co. E. His remains were placed in a metallic coffin and on Monday morning last forwarded by express to his aged parents, who reside near Ottawa, Le Sueur county. Chaplin Kerr preached his funeral sermon on the evening previous. It now becomes our painful duty to add another name to the record of those who have fallen by disease, since our departure from Minnesota. James H. Carver, of Co. C. died in the General Hospital at this place in the early part of the present week, after a brief sickness. The number of sick in the hospital has been on the decrease for the last five days. The change of climate, together with the newly acquired habits of living, seem to have operated somewhat unfavorably upon the health of some in the Regiment. Many are, no doubt very indifferent as to quality and quantity of food eaten. A little more care with reference to so important a matter, would to a certain extent, obviate the necessity of going into the hospital for medical attendance. With prudence and temperance Northern soldiers might find this latitude reasonably healthy, notwithstanding the sudden changes of temperature, and the frequent deluges of rain, which fill the thousand-and-one gullies on every hill-side, and renders the ground upon which we sleep so damp that the bed-clothes soon become saturated with moisture. A little more attention to personal cleanliness, would obviate the necessity of undergoing a siege of sickness, on the part of some, at least. One very fruitful source of sickness in camp, is instanced in the wholesale "gobbling up" of every and anything the appetite craves. Apple-girls make their appearance quite early in the morning and continue their visits until the shades of evening draw their mantles around us. Boys and girls, with pies, half-cooked, and indigestible biscuits—find a market here, when, as a simple matter of sanitary wisdom, the boys would find "hard tack," far more healthy.

Lieut. Col. Marsh, Capt. Dane, and Lieut. Clark of the 9th have been ordered to Warsaw, Benton County Mo., to examine into the alleged outrages committed by officers and soldiers in the U. S. service. It is alleged that these troops—or some other persons in Federal uniform—have been guilty of the murder of citizens, and the plundering and burning of stores and dwellings. The Board are authorized to examine into all and other complaints against soldiers and citizens in that military District. They have a field of operation as broad as that of the Sioux Commissioners, having power to change the place of meeting for the prosecution of their work, to any place in the district, they may select. Probably it will require three or four months for the completion of their difficult task.

Two companies of the 9th—G. and H. under command of Major Markham, were detained at St. Louis, to assist in guarding that city. C. and K. are still at Lamine Bridge, and from present indications are likely to remain there for some time.

The Radicals of Missouri did nobly at the election on Tuesday last. This city went Union by thirty-eight majority. St. Louis rolled up a majority of over 2000, for the Radical ticket, and Frank P. Blair stands repudiated in his own home. The official representatives of the Federal Government backed by a host of rebel retainers, fought the unconditional Union candidates with a relentless spirit, seldom, if ever equalled in any political canvas. The German element is true to the great principles of Freedom and humanity. As a body they embrace the Radical party. In speaking of the results of the late election, the Saint Louis Democrat gives the following con[illegible]

1st. No such combination can ever be again secured against the Radicals as at the late election. Such coalitions never last but for one election. Victory or defeat is equally fatal to them. The elements are so discordant that harmonious conjunction is impossible. When, therefore, the Radicals have not been crushed by the combined assaults of it enemies, but, on the contrary, have come out of the conflict with rejoicing hearts, it must be accepted as an earnest of future victory.

2d. The influence of the National Executive is not at all likely to be hereafter directed as at the late election.

3d, The Radicals have carried St. Louis, St. Joseph and Hannibal, the three largest cities in the State—likewise Jefferson City, the State capital—the controlling center of both business and political influence. They consequently hold the citadels of political power.

4th. The Radicals have likewise carried all the more loyal counties and districts of the State, showing that they embrace the great body of the loyal men—that in fact the loyal population of Missouri has already become Radicalized. Consequently every addition made to the loyal population of the State is, as a rule, an addition to the Radical party. Its strength is in the growing element of the State. The strength of its adversaries is in the element which time may be expected constantly to diminish. The Radicals have no losses to fear. All who have stood by them in the late contest are men tried in the fire—Radicals from principle. All the fair-weather friends were on the other side.

5th. The Radicals embrace the Germans as a body, whose influence in Missouri has been such as to turn the scales at the outset of the rebellion in favor of political power for a considerable time to come.

6th. The election proves that the soldiers are upon the side of the Radicals.

7th. More important than all else—the Radicals are in sympathy with the sentiment and principals which are destined to triumph in the great national struggle now going on. "Union" and "freedom" are their watch-words, and Union and freedom are certain to carry the day.

Whatever may, therefore prove to be the technical issue of the very close election held in this State, Tuesday, the victory is practically with the Radicals. They have met the enemy, and if they have not gained the the present in full, they have gained the future. The State is theirs at the next Presidential election, and for all the period that existing issues are destined to divide and control the the politics of the nation.

NOW AND THEN.

Thanksgiving Proclamation by the Governor.

A law of this State requires that the Governor shall, by proclamation set apart one day in each year for the solemn and public Thanksgiving to Almighty God for his blessings to us as a State and nation.

This law, standing permanently upon our Statue book, is a general and constant recognition by the people of Minnesota of a great truth, while our nation lives and our State laws have force, whatever temporary clouds of adversity may overshadow or threaten us, the devout patriot can always find abundant reasons for thankfulness to "Him who doeth all things well."

A wicked rebellion may be striking at the heart of our Government; savages become a terror upon our borders; the heavens refuse to give us rain for a season and frosts arrest maturity of our corps; but we know that all these events are overruled by one whose chastening is a sure evidence of his love.

In observance, therefore, of the law and custom of this commonwealth, and in accordance with a Proclamation of the President of the United States, I, Henry A. Swift, Governor of the State of Minnesota, do appoint THURSDAY, the twenty-sixth day of November, instant, as a day of solemn and public Thanksgiving and Praise to Almighty God, and recommend that the people, refraining from their usual vocations on that day, do assemble in their places of worship, and as each heart shall dictate, acknowledge the blessings that have crowned the year.

Let us remember with gratitude that the husbandman toil has been more abundantly rewarded in our State than we dared to hope; that the murderous hand of the savage is for the time stayed upon our frontier; that the tide of immigration has brought unexpected accessions to our population and wealth; that universal health has prevailed among our people; and that unusual prosperity has flowed in all the channels of industry.

Let us thank God for the glorious victories achieved by our brave soldiers in their fierce struggle for the maintenance of our Government against traitors in the field, and for [illegible] our people to continue and support a vigorous prosecution of the war until rebellion shall yield to respect for our Constitution and Laws.

Let us praise him for unexampled national prosperity notwithstanding the ravages of war in the land; for the prospect of an early termination of this fratricidal strife; for the extention of the area of human freedom; and for the bright hopes we may cherish for the future of our beloved country.

Let us be thankful of the absence of foreign intervention in our domestic contentions and for the sympathy extended to us by friends of Liberty, Order and equal Rights throughout the world.

And in our gratitude for State and national blessings, and our enjoyment of individual comforts at home, let not the brave spirits who "stand between our loved homes and war's dessolation" be forgotton; let us call for God's blessing upon them in the field and camp and hospital; and let us remember in sympathy those whose homes and hearts mourn for loved heroes who will celebrate Thanksgiving Day with them no more.

Let us with due humility and patience acknowledge our many national and individual sins, and imploring forgiveness through the infinite merits of One "who was acquainted with grief," let us pledge that our future walk shall be close with Him.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my hand and caused the great seal of the State to be affixat the capital in the city of St Paul this tenth day of November A. D. One thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-three

By the Governor

HENRY A. SWIFT.

D. Blakely, Secretary of State

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

New York, Nov. 16.—The Herald has advices from General Banks' expedition up to the afternoon of the 4th. The expedition landed rapidly on the Texas shore of the Rio Grande, after loosing one or two vessels, but no lives A boats crew was seven soldiers, however, were drowned while disembarking.

The rebels evacuated Fort Brown, setting fire to the works there. Brownsville also was set fire to by a few rebel cavalry, but the Union men turned out to extinguish it, when the rebel cavalry, joined by secessionists in town, attacked them and a terrible street fight was going on while the houses were burning around them. The 4th Maine regiment was immediately ordered to march on the place

A Maine regiment was first to land on the Texas shore. One Iowa regiment landed immediately after them, their regimental flags being hoisted almost simultaneously.

Mexican advices state that the commander of the French army in Mexico, had taken the field at the head of his forces and some encounters with the troops of the Republic had taken place. Gen. Comonfort, had assumed the position of Commander-in-Chief of the latter forces.

A gent who arrived direct from Charleston bar, expresses great confidence in the progress of operations now going on there, and predicts the capture of Charleston in a few weeks.

The 12th Illnois cavalry have re-enlisted as a veteran regiment. Advance pay and bounties have been paid.

There has been considerable firing on our extreme left between our cavalry and the rebels. As far as ascertained, it did not amount to much. Our position has not changed for three days, but we shall not long remain inactive.

It is well ascertained that with the exception of detachments of cavalry the rebels have moved to their old strong posts south of the Rapidan.

There are reports about a general engagement being imminent.

The rebels could have been accomodated any time during the past week, but fled before our advance, leaving their comfortable winter quarters. They do not want to fight north of the Rapidan.

Gen. Meade is master of the position of the Rapidan, and will no doubt give the enemy battle when it will be advantageous to do so.

Fourteen more miles of the Orange and Alexandria railroad have been rebuilt, including the bridge over the Rappahannock, which is 550 feet span.

A violent thunder-storm raged all last night.

Seventy prisoners, most of them captured by our cavalry, were sent to the old capital to-day.

The following story is told of Hallam and Rogers; "how do you do Hallam?" said the poet. "Do what?" said the other. "Why how do you find yourself;" "I never lose myself." "Well how have you been?" "Been where?" "Pshaw! How do you feel?" "Feel of me and see." "Good morning. Hallam" "Its not a good morning." Rogers could say no more.

A Plucky Conscript—A correspondent in the army of the Potomac says that Gen. Warren is the man to make good soldiers is indisputable, and that he commands a gallant corps is undeniable. The following incident is characteristic:

When falling back during the night after the fight of Bristow, he saw a conscript straggling along, apparently without any weapon. "To what command do you belong?" asked General W. "Second corps," replied the man, with a strong nasal twang denoting his recent departure from the Eastern States. "What are you doing here without a gun?" demanded the General. The man gave an evasive reply, indicating that was his own business. "What have you got under your coat there?" inquired General Warren. "A gun, you —— fool," returned the conscript, partially revealing a gun beneath the folds of his ample coat. "There's no discount on that man," remarked General Warren to an aid, and passed on. Should this meet the brave fellow's eye, he will learn that he addressed his complimentary response to General Warren, and will wonder, perhaps why he was not punished.

To the Friends of Deaf Mutes.

The Commissioners charged with the duty of providing for the education of the Deaf Mutes of the State, take satisfaction in announcing that the school opened at Faribault on the 9th of September last according to published notice is in successful operation. They express the hope that no mute in the State who is a proper subject for education in the sight language will fail to attend from inability to advance the $20, the estimated cost of provisions to the first of January next. None will be rejected for such inability.

Faribault Nov. 6th 1863

Lift me Higher.—A girl, thirteen years old, was dying. Lifting her eyes toward the ceiling, she said, softly.

"Lift me higher! lift me higher!"

Her parents raised her up with pilows, but she faintly said,

"No not that! but there!" again looking earnestly toward Heaven, where her happy soul flew a few moments later. On her gravestone these words are carved:

"Jane B——, aged thirteen. Lifted Higher."

A beautiful idea of dying, was it not? Lifted higher.

"Would you throw Vallandigham, an ex Congressman, into jail with common vagabonds?" asked a sensitive copperhead of Judge Holt, when the famous or rather infamous, traitor was arrested. "Certainly." responded the Judge, "if the vagabonds don't object.

Squabbles, an old batchelor, shows his stockings, which he has just darned, to a maiden lady, who contemptuously remarks, "Pretty good for a man darner. Whereupon Squabbles rejoins. "Good enough for a woman, darn her."

Farmers Clubs.—Organize them early. One should be in operation in in every school district. Secure an occasional address on agricultural subjects from competent speakers, but devote the meetings mainly to informal conversations of the facts connected with the every day farm experience and observations of the different members: this will be of greater benefit in eliciting thought, and more interesting to the participants than attempts at speech, making, or listening to elaborate essays.

"A Thing of Beauty is a Joy Forever"—A handsome face, and a form of grace, are always attractive to the eye, and nothing helps so much to improve the looks of man or boy, as a suit of fine clothes, purchased at S. Randall's Clothing Store, situated on Front street, opposite Bradley's store, where can be found good Winter Clothing, Hats and Caps, Undershirts and Drawers, and Gent's Furnishing Goods, at very low prices. He pays the highest cash price for Wheat. 13-1y*

Finch & Thurston have got some Fresh Baltimore Oysters. O——h! aint they delicious.

"Wanted."—Some young lady is wanted, and we call her attention to the advertisement which appears in this issue.

Capt. Davy, of the Mounted Rangers, passed through town Wednesday on his way to Fort Snelling. As soon as his company is mustered out, the Captain says he shall return and go to recruiting.

Why do Postmasters deserve the execration of the American people? Because they are always blacking the face of Washington.

Finch & Thurston, are not fishes, neither are they whales, but they have some of the nicest Salmon and Hallibut that ever wiggled.

The sale of School Lands for this County will take place at the Treasurer's office, to-morrow at 10 o'clock, A. M. Auditor McIlrath will be present.

The river at this place has raised nearly three inches since the last rain. As soon as it freezes we may expect boats from St. Paul.

Good.—The ten dollar prize which we offered to the person who succeeded in getting the most scholars the third term of Prof. Shaw's Writing Class was awarded to Mrs. Fowler. It is in good hands.

E. P. Evans, Esq., of Garden City, passed through town a few days ago, on his return from the East, where he has been visiting for near two months. He was quite sick during his absence, and has not yet fully recovered his usual health. We are glad to welcome him back.

Notice.—In cheerful compliance with the wish and proclamation of the President, we would inform the public that there will be divine service held in the City Hall, Thursday, Nov. 26th. We affectionately invite all other denominations to join with us, and respectfully ask the attention and attendance of the citizens generally. Services will commence at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

THOMAS DAY, Pastor M. E. Church.

Capt. McKusick, accompanied by Col. Crooks' Adjutant, and an escort of four men, has been out on the frontier inspecting the line of defense from Fairmount to Manannah, within forty miles of St. Cloud. He reports everything in good order along the line, and nothing wanting save cavalry horses. The term of enlistment of nearly all of the Mounted Rangers has expired, and the horses have been taken to Fort Snelling; the result is that Capt. McKusick has been ordered to St. Paul to select cavalry horses to take their place. He left yesterday for that purpose.

Rev. J. O. Rich.—The first quarterly meeting of the present Conference year, of the M. E. Church, was held in City Hall last Sunday. A large audience was present to hear the sermon of the P. E. Rev. J. O. Rich. We believe all were satisfied that the District would be well represented by Mr. Rich. Of one thing we take pleasure in speaking. His quarterly claim of thirteen dollars, was fully made up. Heretofore the claim of the Elder on this station has been only four dollars, and it was even difficult to raise that sometimes. A better state of things is coming we believe.

The Postmaster at Mankato has placed a way mail on the Blue Earth route, so as to obviate the necessity of overhauling the entire mail. The Postmasters above tell us it is just the thing. So we think.

The Blue Earth Stage Line is now owned and controlled by C. M. Sly, he having purchased the interest of his former partner P. C. Seely. The good management of the contractors of this line has rendered it very popular, and we feel assured from what we know of Mr. Sly, that he will leave nothing undone that will add to the comfort and convenience of travelers, and insure the prompt transmission of the mail. The line is well stocked, he has engaged careful and experienced drivers, and we understand he will soon have that easy riding hack covered, so as to make it comfortable for winter. The mails now leave Mankato at five A. M.

Cooley, Carver & Co.—In another column will be found the card of Cooley, Carver & Co., of St. Paul, wholesale grocers and commission merchants. It is only a little over two years since they commenced business in the State, yet by energy, fair dealing, and close application to business, they have acquired a good business reputation. They are well known to all in the valley as large wheat buyers. Their grocery house in St. Paul is one of the largest in the city, and their stock embraces as good a variety of wholesale groceries as can be found in the west.

A Pleasant Party and Supper.—Saturday evening was the last school in the third term of Prof. Shaw's writing Class, and after the exercises were over, the scholars adjourned to the Clifton House, and partook of a sumptuous repast gotten up by "mine host" Flower. There were about sixty persons present, and after supper the following toasts were proposed by C. H. Slocum.

1. Penmanship
2. Prof Shaw's Writing Class
3. The Ladies.
3. Professor Shaw.

To which responses were made by Wm. L. Coon, Esq.

The school presented Mr. Slocum with a very neat writing table as a token of their friendship and esteem, and for which a suitable acknowledgement was made.

The committee on examination of specimens, made a verbal report, as follows.

Best writer—Mrs. Mary E. Roberts.
2nd best writer—Miss Maggie Todd.
Greatest improvement—Emma Hall.
2nd best in improvement—Carrie Hall

Taken altogether, the party was a very pleasant one and broke up about twelve o'clock.

Donation.—The friends of Rev. Jenkin Jenkins will give him a donation visit at South Bend, Friday evening Nov. 27th, at 7 o'clock, in the Church. As Mr. Jenkins is universally beloved by the members of his charge, a pleasant time may be expected.

Our Winnebago correspondent sends us the following, which explains itself.

"Your fair Winnebago City correspondent" as that mysterious gentleman Now And Then, is pleased to call her, wishes to say that she did not intend to locate the land of the Orange and Palm in Missouri. When the article he refers to was written she supposed that the gallant 9th would long ere this have been testing the realities of "the sunny south." Fate seems to have ordered otherwise, and we find that they have as yet scarcely reached the borders of that mystic land of which geographers give such charming descriptions, and our soldier friends such dismal ones.

New Stove Store.—In our advertising columns of to-day Mr. P. B. Sparrow informs the many readers of the Union that he has opened a new stove and hardware store in Mankato. We have taken pains to examine his stock, and we think it as good as any ever brought to this market. Mr. S. has been engaged in the hardware and stove business in Milwaukee for a number of years, and comes among us well recommended. He has a good stock of cooking stoves on hand, and in the spring it will be largely increased. Our friends in the city and country will do well to make his acquaintance, and give him a share of their trade.

Writing School in Winnebago City.—Prof. Shaw will soon commence teaching a Class in Winnebago. He has over thirty scholars engaged. As a teacher of Penmanship we cannot speak too highly of him. His success in Mankato has been unparalelled. His system is the Spencerian one, and that every body acknowledges to be the best taught. The result of his coming among us is that we have a larger number of good writers than we had before. In his new field of labor we wish him all the success of which he is deserving.

Deputy Provost Marshal.—Thos. M. Pugh, of South Bend, has been appointed Deputy Provost Marshal in place of J. T. Williams, who has resigned and gone to Pennsylvania.

Willard & Barney have nearly finished fitting up their building opposite the Clifton House. The first floor will be occupied as a drug store by William Kilgore, recently from Kentucky, and the second floor by the Union office, which will be removed to its new quarters next week.

Our merchants are making preparations to buy wheat, and are seeking out places in which to store it. The highest cash price will be paid. We understand there will be quite a market for Barley, parties having offered as high as seventy cents per bushel for it.

The Methodist Society are talking about getting a Melodeon for their own use in Church. Let us suggest that the ladies interested take hold of the matter with a subscription paper, and pick up the dimes, quarters, and dollars, wherever they can be found, and the means will not be long wanting with which to purchase one. An instrument can be obtained of O. Ward who is agent for Prince's Melodeons and School Organs.

The Select School of Miss Pease and Miss Flower is well attended. They have nearly thirty scholars. They have had experience as teachers and know how to make the young mind "shoot."

Notice.—From and after the 20th, inst., and until further notice, the Post Office at this place will open at seven A. M., and close at seven P. M. On Sunday, it will be open from half-past seven to half-past eight A. M., and from half-past twelve to half-past one P. M. All mails will close at half-past six, excepting on Sunday, when they will close at six o'clock P. M.

R. J. SIBLEY, P. M.

New Millinery Shop.—Mrs. J. Armstrong has recently purchased the Millinery establishment owned by Mrs. Oglesby, and has opened a shop on the second floor in Bergholtz block. She has just received a choice lot of millinery goods, such as our lady friends love to wear, and is daily expecting more, and her knowledge of the millinery business, she having had over ten years experience, will, we feel assured, bring her many customers. Give her a share of your patronage, ladies, and don't forget to read her advertisement.

Cathcart & Co.—Our business men know that one of the largest dry goods and carpet stores in St. Paul is kept by Cathcart & Co., They were among the early settlers of the State, and have been in business many years. They are wholesaling their goods now at such prices that merchants in the country can afford to buy of them. Our merchants in the Blue Earth Valley buy a large amount of goods in St. Paul, and we recommend to them these gentlemen as among those who sell low for cash. See their advertisement.

WITH ALL HE IMPROVEMENTS.

Is the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful, substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1862, with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P. Folsom in 1852, and by E D Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot. Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota."

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th, 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.52, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

Dated, November 2, 1863.

Brandreth's Pills.—While Brandreth's Pills are so potent for good to diseased bodies, they are harmless as bread. The babe at the breast or the man of ripest years, and delicate females, are certain to receive an increase of health from the use of these pills blessed of Heaven.

It has been said by an able physician, that "this medicine always benefits and never injures." Wherein is the superlative quality. The Brandreth Pills have no power or action but upon impure humors in the blood. They seize only the impurities in and around the parts affected by disease; all parts involved in diseased actions are operated upon, and cleansed from all foulness, and reinfused with "Life" by the wonderful curative powers contained and inherent of the most justly famed Brandeth's Pills.

Millions of people, whose lives appeared to be at the last ebb worn out by fever's consuming fires, by consumption's insidious advances, by racking torments of inflammatory rheumatism, have been cured by the use of these pills. The persons are living witnesses, and thousands are residents in every city in America. Principal office, No. 294, Canal St., N. Y.

Sold by J. F. Wickersham, Mankato and by all respectable dealers in medicine.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

These Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever! !!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are peculiar facts, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

MANHOOD;

How Lost! How Restored!

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price. Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage, bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Letter "A" Sewing Machine.

WITH ALL HE IMPROVEMENTS.

IS the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist-thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality,

Valuable Lands for Sale.

BY direction of the Hon Secretary of the Interior, the undersigned will receive sealed bids for the purchase of any or all of the lands hereinafter described, they being among the choicest and best farming land in Minnesota.

These lands comprise what are known as the Winnebago Trust Lands in the State of Minnesota, and will be sold to the highest and best bidder in tracts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres each, under the provisions of a treaty concluded with the Winnebago Indians, April 15th, 1859, and an act of Congress, approved February 21st 1863, entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their Reservation, in Minnesota, for their benefit."

No bid will be entertained at a rate less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

In case a bid is accepted, the party making the same will be notified as soon thereafter as practicable. If within thirty days after such notice the party shall fail to make payment to the undersigned, the land for which such bid was made will be subject to sale to any other person.

Patents will be issued and transmitted to purchasers as soon after payment as the same can be prepared. Payments may be made either in cash or in the certificates of indebtedness of the Winnebago Indians, issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for the debt of said Indians, and secured to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said lands by the third article of the treaty above mentioned. The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. All bids must be sealed and addressed to the undersigned, Washington City, D. C. and endorsed "Bid for Winnebago Tract Land."

HARPER'S

New Monthly Magazine.

Critical Notices of the Press.

The volumns Bound constitute of themselves a liberary of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.

The most popular Monthly in the world —N. Y. Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People: and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each Number contains fully 144 pages reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good woodcuts: and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature. —Trubner's Guide to American Literature London.

No Magazine in Europe or America is so well known, none has half as many renders; and, we may safely say, none has received so large a tribute of admiration from the cultivated class, that delighted in a healthy, diversified, elevating periodical literature. It is the foremost magazine of the day The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore)

SEWING MACHINES

MERIT ALONE MAKES A SEWING MACHINE VALUABLE.

The people are perceiving that Glowing Representations are not Merit.

That it is economy and wisdom to purchase only Sewing Machines of known practical utility.

THIS MACHINE IS PROFITABLE AND AVAILABLE A LIFE TIME.

An annual dividend of 100 to 500 per cent, (on its cost) may be obtained in its use, by its possession.

There are over 95,000 WHEELER & WILSON'S Machines in use in this country and Europe.

It is the only Machine in the world making the Lock-Stitch with Rotating Hook and using the Glass Foot.

The Wheeler & Wilson Machines are right, and if they do not operate well it is because people are not fully instructed in their use.

All persons owning Wheeler & Wilson Machines can have them properly adjusted, and full instructions given in their use, free of charge, by calling at the wheeler & Wilson Rooms, in the Greenleaf Block, Third street, a few doors below the Post Office F. M Johnson, Agent.

Poetry.

"The Old Tom Cat."

Don't you remember the old Tom cat, John Smith,
The old Tom cat whose notes were so high,
As he used to serenade us each night, John Smith,
When the stars were bright in the sky?
Down by the old Niagara's shore, John Smith,
Where the elm stands silent and lone,
Some naughty boys threw in the river, one day,
The old Tom cat attached to a stone.

Don't you remember old Towzer, John Smith,
Old Towzer, who belonged to Bill Gale,
And how many times, in our childhood sports,
We have tied oyster cans to his tail?
Old Towzer would have lived with Gale, John Smith,
Until he had grown helpless and old,
But they caught him stealing a sheep one night,
And old Towzer's tale was soon told.

Don't you remember the old pond John Smith,
And the bridge across built of logs,
And how many times we have stood on the bridge,
And pelted with stones the poor frogs?
That bridge and pond are gone, John Smith
And all things have changed that I view
But I find no change in my pocket, John Smith,
Could I borrow a dollar of you?

Twenty Minutes at the Railway Station.

BY WILL LIVINGSTONE.

'Oh!' exclaimed Janey Morgan, as she awoke one bright spring morning somewhere between two and three years ago, to find the sun already up and the robin carrolling merrily in the apple tree whose long branches brushed her chamber window. 'How late I have slept! Its Monday, too. The soldiers will leave to-day, and perhaps I shall never see them again, and—and—oh dear? why do we live?'

And her little bare foot patted the carpet nervously, and two bright tears rolled down her plump cheeks, looking for all the world, as though they were lost among the dimples.

Do not puzzle your little head with that problem, Janey Morgan, for many an older and wiser one has attempted to solve it, and retired from the task in despair.

She was no stately damsel, reader, this heroine of mine, but a quiet New England girl of twenty, with soft brown eyes and brown hair that always would curl, and in its own way, too, in spite of its wilful owner, a neat, trim figure, and a pretty hand and foot. Just such an one as you might pass in a crowd for days without notice, but whose deft, fairy-like ways and thoughtful kindness you would never forget, should you once meet her in the home circle.

Janey was an only child, and an orphan. Her parents died when she was very young leaving her to the care of her aunt, with whom she had resided ever since, in the country town of C——, in Connetient.

The enthusiasm which swept like a wave over our land when our glorious flag was first defied by the minions of Treason and Rebellion was at its height, and that day a company of soldiers would take their final departure from the village for the scene of war. Many of these were Janey's friends and early schoolmates, and so the afternoon found her standing in the crowd which had assembled at the railway station;

At last the train arrived. It was already nearly filled with soldiers, many of whom sprang out when the conductor announced that 'they would stop for twenty minutes.'

Janey had withdrawn from the crowd and was standing upon a grassy knoll, bright with crocuses and violets. Bitter thoughts surged through her heart and she murmured 'Not only am I too worthless for a sacrifice myself, but I have no heart-jewel to place upon the altar of my country, as my offering for her salvation!'

A low moan near her drew her thoughts outward. Harry Markham was bidding farewell to the gentle, childlike creature who had been but six months his wife.

'Oh Harry' she sobbed, 'your love cannot be like mine, or you would never have left me.'

'Don't say that, Annie—don't say that!' and his features grew rigid with pain. 'God knows I love you better than life, but our country, Annie, our country!'

Two soldiers who had left the train were standing a little way from Janey, in such a position that she could not see their features, but now one of them spoke;

'I'm glad my wife ain't here, Capt'n. I'd no idea she'd feel so bad about it, but she took on so I most wished we'd never been married,' and a suspicious moisture glistened in his honest gray eyes.

'Then,' said he lightly, who had been addressed as Captain, 'you do not agree with the poet who say

"Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all?

Why was it that Janey Morgan drew down her veil and turned away as these words met her ear? She paused, however, as he spoke again, in those low, intense tones which come from the heart.

'Anything is better than living death! Better that the heart throb and quiver with anguish than that it lie cold and lifeless in the breast! I tell you, Webster, I would rather be yonder soldier, whose wife has fainted, and whose three children are weeping around him, than to stand here as i do, without one living creature to say 'God bless you' or to weep for me if I should fall.'

He turned as he ceased speaking and saw Janey, who had raised her veil and stood like one in a trance.

'Janey!' he cried eagerly, while a flush of pleasure lit up his pale face. Then, checking himself, he said, 'I beg pardon, Miss Morgan.'

She did not return his salutation, but asked, abruptly.

'Are you not married?'

'Married! and to whom?' And now he stood by her side.

'To Sophie Ellis.'

'And why do you ask that?' He questioned gravely, while a smile lurked in his eyes and hovered around his mouth.

'I heard that you were engaged, and I saw your marriage in the paper.'

'Sophie is married to my cousin, Janey.'

'Your cousin?'

'Yes. You have heard me speak of my cousin who was lost overboard while going to England, some three years since, haven't you?'

'Yes.'

'Well, he was not lost, but was picked up by a ship bound to Japan, whither he was therefore obliged to go. Want of opportunity at first, and afterwards a desire to surprise us prevented his writing. He returned last winter, and married Sophie almost immediately. Our names are the same, both having been named for our grandfather, and it was his marriage, and not mine, which you saw. And was that why you wrote me that letter and refused to receive mine, returning them unopened?'

'Yes, I—I—O Carlton! will you forgive me?'

'On three condition,' he replied, windning his arm tenderly around her, as though to assure her that those conditions would not be very hard. 'First, that you wear this ring, and never, never take it from your finger again.' And he placed a heavy golden circlet bearing his initials upon her finger. .Next, that you write to me every week while I am gone, and that when I return you will be my wife. Do you promise, Janey? O Janey, Janey, do not send me away miserable!'

'Yes, Carlton, I will promise, and—there's the car-bell!'

'Give me something of yours—a curl, Janey?'

'I've no scissors—I'll send it in a letter.'

'And your picture, too. But I must have something now, something tangible, to assure me that it is not all a dream.'

Janey hastily gathered some crocuses and violets, and winding their stems with a thread of her bright brown hair placed them in his hand.

'Goodbye, darling,' said he folding her hastily in his arms.

'God bless and keep you!' she replied.

'Captain Strong! where's Captain Strong,' called a voice from the car window, as he sprang on the platform of the moving cars.

Janey watched the train until it disappeared in the distance, and then moved slowly homeward with a great happiness swelling in her heart, and sending the blood leaping through her veins. There were tears upon her cheek, but they were tears of joy. Henceforth no bitter murmurs escaped her lips—she was not wholly worthless, for she, too, had placed an offering upon the altar of her country.

Since writing the above. I have read in an Eastern paper that "Col. Carlton Strong, whose bravery at Gettysburg is yet fresh in the memory of our readers, was recently married to Miss Jane Morgan of C——, Connecticut, who has accompanied him to his post of duty."

A Married Man Elopes with a Young Lady.

We were Saturday put in possession of the following facts, which are entirely reliable: A man by the name of Isham Horn, who has for some time been employed by the firm of Hanons & Milland, doing a military and collecting business in Sonora, Missouri, and who was intrusted with the money of that firm, eloped a short time since with a young and beautiful lady of that place, taking seven thousand dollars of his employers' money with him.

Mr. Horn had resided in Missouri for a number of years, and was the head of a large and interesting family. He was beloved and respected by all who knew him. Not long since he made the acquaintance of a beutiful young lady residing in the same town, by the name of Sallie Kersley, and that acquaintance soon ripened into affection, and the two were often seen together, but owing to the high standing of the parties nothing was thought of the matter. Soon afterwards an elopement between Horn and Miss Kersley was agreed upon, and they, under the pretext of taking a buggy ride, left that city, since which time nothing has been heard of them. He left his family in a destitute condition. What direction the guilty pair took is not known, but it is supposed they came in this direction, and are probably living in some portion of this State or Indiana, under assumed names.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On Sunday afternoon last Henrietta Meyer., a lady of 28 years, who has made it her home in our family for the past year, was taken with convulsions and died within thirty minutes thereafter. For a long time past she had a premonition that her days were nearly numbered, and especially since the death of the wife of the writer, has been very sorrowful and despondent, and by her actions at many times giving form to the suspicion that she was somewhat insane. On Sunday she was unusually down-hearted—having determined to leave us and seek rest for her disturbed mind in change of surroundings. Just before four o'clock we left the house to go in search of some one to take her place on the morrow. After we had gone she washed up the supper dishes, and, as her wont, latterly, went to her room and lied down. Shortly after a young man sitting by the kitchen table reading heard her call. He went to the door of the room where she was, and she told him to to run for the wife of a neighbor as she was cramping. Being a stranger with us he called Mr. Oliver from up chamber, who immediately hastened for assistance. A physician was also summoned, and reached her in a very few moments, but it was already too late to give her relief. Soon after his entrance she had a strong convulsion, her puls suddenly stopped beating—she was dead! Kind hands prepared her body for the last rest, and on Tuesday she was laid in the grave.

Miss Meyers was born in Germany, whence her mother, then a widow, with several children, emigrated many years ago. She has married sisters at Jefferson and Rome in this State, and in Montcalm Co., Michigan. She was a good girl—tender-hearted as a child, and while her faults shall be forgotten her virtues will long lay in the memory of those who knew and appreciated her.—Waupun (Wis.) Times.

TWO GOOD 'UNS.—A lady made her husband a present of a silver drinking cup with an angel at the bottom, and when she filled it for him, he used to drink it to the bottom and she asked him why he drank every drop.

'Because ducky, he said, "I long to see the dear little angel."

Upon which she had the angel taken out, and had a devil engraved at the bottom, and he drank it off just the same, and she again asked him the reason.

"Why," replied he, "because I won't leave the old devil have a drop.',

New Estray Law.

An act to regulate the taking up and disposition of estrays, and to repeal contravening acts.

SEC. 1. Any person who shall take up any estray horse, mule, ass, neat cattle, hog, sheep, or goat, or who shall have at any time upon his enclosed land an estray, shall within five days thereafter advertise the same by posting up in three of the most public places in town where such estray was taken up or found, giving a particular description of such estray, its age, color and marks, natural and artificial, as near as may be, together with the name and place of residence of the taker up or finder of such estray.

SEC. 2. If within ten days after such notice of the taking up or finding, the owner shall not have claimed such estray and have paid all reasonable charges and damages which the taker up or finder may have sustained by reason of any depredations committed by such estray upon the crops growing or otherwise upon the enclosed land of the taker up or finder, the taker up or finder shall file with the clerk of the town a notice in writing containing the name and place of abode of such person, and also the age, color and marks, natural and artificial, of such estray, as near as may be.

SEC. 3. The town clerk shall enter the same at large in a book to be provided by him for that purpose, for which entry he shall receive ten cents each for all horses, mules, asses, and neat cattle, and five cents each for all hogs, sheep, and goats, to be paid by the person delivering the notice.

SEC. 4. The taker up or finder shall within ten days after the taking up or finding such estray notify two of the fence viewers of the town, who shall immediately proceed to the place where such estray is kept, and shall then appraise the value of such estray and also all damages which the taker up or finder may have sustained by reason of depredations committed by such estray, and shall certify in writing to the taker up or finder the value of such estray, together with the damages which such estray may have committed.

SEC. 5. Any person upon whose enclosed land any such estray may come, or who shall have taken up any of the above named animals and shall neglect to post up notices as required in this act, or to file the notice with the town clerk, he shall be subject to a fine of not less than five nor more than fifty dollars, to be sued for before any Justice of the Peace of the county, and shall be precluded from all the benefits of this act, and from all claims to damages or compensation for keeping such estray.

SEC. 6. The person delivering the notice shall be entitled to receive therefor ten cents each for all horses, mules, asses, or neat cattle, and five cents each for all hogs, sheep or goats, described therein, and he may detain such estray until the owner thereof shall appear and pay such fees, together with the fees paid or due the clerk, or which may be due the fence viewers or supervisors, and all damages and reasonable compensation for keeping and advertising such estray.

SEC. 7. When the value of such estray appraised as provided for in this act shall exceed the sum of twenty-five dollars, and the owner shall not have claimed such estray and paid the charges and damages as above required within thirty days from the time of filing the notice with the town clerk, then the person detaining such estray shall advertise in a newspaper of the county, and the town clerk shall forward to the publisher a copy of the registry thereof marked outside "estray papers," together with a fee of one dollar and fifty cents, which shall be advanced by the keeper of the estray and out of which the postage shall be paid, which shall also be a legal charge against such estray.

SEC. 8. If any person claiming the ownership of such estray, when the taker up shall have complied with the provisions of this act, shall drive away from the place where such estray is kept, without first paying all charges and damages against such estray, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction before a Justice of the peace, shall be fined double the sum of said charges and damages, and imprisoned in the county jail not less than ten or more than thirty days.

SEC. 9. Every person who shall have filed any such notice and have kept any such estray described therein shall, if the same be not sooner claimed and redeemed between the first day of May and the twentieth day thereafter give notice to one of the supervisors of the town, whose duty it shall be to ascertain according to the best of his knowledge and judgment the reasonable charges for keeping such estray, a certificate whereof shall be given to the person applying for the same.

SEC. 10. Each supervisor or fence viewer shall be entitled to receive six cents for every mile he shall be obliged to travel from his house to the place where such estray is kept, and twenty-five cents for the certificate of the charges and damages and twenty-five cents for a certificate of appraisal as ascertained on appraisal by him, such fees to be paid by the owner of the estray.

SEC. 11. If no owner shall appear to claim such estray on or before the first day of May next, after the making of such entry as before provided, or neglect to pay the sum charged against such estray, may proceed to sell the same by public auction to the highest bidder; such person shall give at least twenty days notice of the time and place of such sale, posted up in three of the most public places in the town, and when the value of such estray shall exceed twentp five dollars, also in a newspaper published in the county two weeks successively before the day of sale,

SEC. 12. Out of the moneys arising from such sale he shall retain for his use the sums charged on such estray according to the provisions of this act and the like charges for sale as are allowed on sales under executions issued out of Justices Court. He shall pay the residue of said money on demand to the owner of the estray if he shall appear and demand the same.

SEC. 13. If the owner shall not appear and demand the residue of such money at the time of such sale he shall deposit the said residue of money with the treasurer of the town, taking a receipt for the same which shall be a legal discharge to the keeper of such estray.

SEC. 14. If the owner shall not within six months after the deposit of the residue of the money appear and claim such money he shall be forever precluded from recovering any part of such money, and such money shall thereafter belong to the town, to be used under the discretion of supervisors of such town.

SEC. 15. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 16. This act shall be in force from and after its passage.

Approved March 5, 1863.

Providentially Directed.

Among the attendants at a late Methodist conference was a very beautiful and inteligent looking young lady, who drew the admiring gaze of many eyes, particularly eyes masculine always on the lookout for pretty feminine faces. During the intermission at noon, a spruce young minister stepped up to the presiding elder and said, with an air of secrecy:

'Did you observe the young lady who sat by the first pillar on the left?'

'Yes,' said the elder, 'what of her!

'Why,' said the young man, I feel impressed that the Lord desires me to take that lady for a wife. I think she would make a good companion and help-meet in the work of the ministry.'

The elder as a good christian ought had nothing to object.

But in a few moments another candidate for ministerial efforts and honors, and for the name of husband came confidentially to make known a like impression regarding the same identical young lady.

'You had better wait awhile. It is not best to be hasty in determining the source of such impressions,' said the prudent elder.

And he said well, for hardly were the steps of the second youth cold at his side, ere a third approached with the same story; and while the worthy confident still marveled, a fourth drew near with the question.

'Did you notice the fine noble looking girl on your left?'

'Well, sir,' went on the fourth victem of that unsuspicion girl 'it is very strongly borne in upon my mind that it is the will of the Lord that I should make proposal of marriage to that lady. He has impressed me that she is to be my wife.

The elder could hold in no longer.

'Impossible! impossible!' he exclaimed in an excited tone, 'the Lord never intended that four men should marry that one woman!'

A "BUMPTIOUS" traveler, overtaking an old Presbyterian minister, whose nag was much fatigued, quizzed the old gentleman upon his "turn out." "A nice horse, yours, doctor! very valuable beast, that—but what makes him wag his tail so, doctor?" "Well, as you have asked me, I will tell you. It is for the same reason that your tongue wags so—a sort of natural weakness."

DURING the examination of a witness, as to the locality of the stairs in a house, the counsel asked him.

"Which way do the stairs run?"

The witness, who by the way, was a noted wag, replied:

"One way they run up stairs, the other way they run down stairs.

The learned counsel winked both eyes and then took a look at the ceiling.

WOOL-GROWING.—J. G. Scott on East Prairie, one of our most extensive wool growers, gives us the following items in relation to his clip for the last year:

From between 900 and 1,000 sheep, he sold wool to the amount of $2,735,65—about $3 per head, old and young. He has probably as good, if not the best, flock in the State of an equal number. He sold his entire clip at 67 cents per pound. He had four fleeces which brought him $37,50, or nearly $9,50 per fleece.

Mr. Scott has taken great care in selecting his flock to secure the best breeds of Sheep, and we doubt if any wool grower in the State can show more satisfactory results, or better pay for his labor and care of his flock.

Mr. Scott informed us that he had several very fine bucks of the best breed which he would sell, and we advise our wool growers to give him a call. The fact that he sold his wool at from 9 to 10 cents per pound more than any other large lot was sold for in this County, is a good evidence of the superiority of his flock. It will pay any wool grower to ride over and examine them; and it is certainly a fine opportunity for the improvement of lower grades.

Farmers should always bear in mind that it costs less to raise a grade. The fine wooled sheep will shear a heavier fleece—while it costs no more, if as much to keep them.—Faribault Republican.

THE CONFESSION.—A cloud was seen to pass suddenly over the fair features of the gentle Maria. The lusture forsook her eyes. Her spirit seemed troubled—

"Triumphs the lily now on that young cheek,
Where bloomed the rose."

Ten times that evening did Harvey importune her to acquaint him with the cause of her sadness, but not a word escaped her lips. Sadly and faintly she sat—

"And now and then a sigh she stole,
And tears began to flow."

"Breathes there a wretch so base as to injure you, my dearest, by word or action? Tell me, and by thine heart, as pure as heaven, I swear never to rest till I have redressed thy wrongs! Is it an awful mystery locked up in thy bosom, that I must not know? Tell me thy secret, and by the ringlets of thy hair, I'll swear never to reveal it, though the black torments rack me! Pour out thy soul; tell thine own Harvey what lies heavy on thy breast?"

She blushed—she placed her fair hands across her bosom—looked languidly in her lover's face, and softly, "like the low breathings of an expiring saint," she thus confessed, "Tis them apples, Harv!"

A WILLFUL LIE.— The dirty lying [illegible] "old stag" editor of the [illegible] Republican, in his [illegible] sheet of yesterday, among other misrepresentations relative to ourselves, has the following:

"He stated, as we are informed on good authority, that he hoped every soldier that enlisted and went South, would be brought back with a secesh bayonet sticking in his back."

It is unnecessary to say more in reply to the above than to pronounce it a willful and malicious LIE, and known to be such by that greasy old skunk, J. E. Burbank, when he penned it. He never was so informed by any one; if so, his informant is a LIAR of the blackest stripe, and Burbank knew him to be so. For a mean contemptible, unresponsible falsifier, "old Burbank" stands ahead of "Tom Pepper," the cuss that was kicked out of Hell for beating the devil at his own game.

General Headquarters, State of Minnesota.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
St. Paul. Minn., Nov. 19th, 1863.
[GENERAL ORDERS, NO. 78.]

Application having been made to the War Department of the United States for leave to have each township in the State accredited, as against the ensuing draft of the militia on the 5th of January, 1864, with the whole number of volunteers that have been mustered into the United States service, whilst legal residents of such town. In anticipation of a favorable answer to our application, and in view of the near approach of the time designated for the commencement of the draft—

It is recommended as follows:

The Board of Supervisors of every town, the Common Council of each city, and the Aldermen of each Ward in any city desiring that their respective districts may receive full credit as above indicated, will forward by mail, or other safe conveyance, to this Department, a full and complete list of the names of all volunteers, who, being residents of town city or ward, have enlisted or been appointed into the United States service since the making up of the returns in pursuance of General Orders No. 42, series of 1862, from this Department. Such list must show explicitly, as far as possible, the company and regiment in which each volunteer enlisted or was appointed, and contain an exposition of the number of those who enlisted in the 1st Regiment Mounted Rangers previous to the making up of the returns under General Orders No. 42 of last year.

Such list must be verified by the oath of at least one member of the Board of Supervisors, Common Council or Alderman, to the effect that such persons had been duly appointed to act by the Board, and that he believes the list, as made out, to be true and correct.

Such list must be filed in this office at the earliest day practicable.

Any town not complying with the foregoing recommendations, may not receive full credit for the whole number of troops which it may now have furnished.

By order of Commander-in-Chief.

Adjutant General.

MR. BEECHER FROM A SCOTCH POINT OF VIEW.—The English correspondent of the New York Tribune thus speaks of a criticism on Henry Ward Beecher by a Scotchman whom he met in the cars.

"Very recently I journeyed some distance by railway with a Scotch commercial traveler, who had heard Mr. Beecher at Manchester and was enthusiastic in praising him in the most unmistakable High Fifeshire. 'Eh mon! he was joost gran'!' he said; 'he gart me tingle fra' the tap of my head to my taes. Ye must ha' [illegible] if he's a fair sample of em!' Mankato, Friday, Nov. 27, 1863.

Enlisted Men from this County.

Col. Smith is getting up a full and complete list of persons who have volunteered from this county since the war began. He requests us to state to the Supervisors of the several towns that he wishes them to send to him the name of each volunteer, and the Company and Regiment in which he enlisted, also, the date of enlistment as near as can be ascertained. From that record he proposes to keep an account of all casualties that hereafter occur to our soldiers.

If these lists are furnished soon by the Supervisors, it may save our county from the draft. At least, it will greatly reduce the number to be drafted, as we believe this county has never received full credit for all the men she has furnished.

The record will remain on file in the Register's office, for reference. It will also be published in the UNION, and furnished to all our subscribers. We think this an excellent plan—one that will be adopted by other counties, and we urge upon our Town Supervisors its importance, and trust they will not fail to attend to it without delay.

The Law Regarding Estrays.

On our first page we publish the Estray Law, approved last March. It describes the manner in which farmers must proceed when they take up estrays. It is a slow and tedious process in our opinion, and does not amount to a row of pins. Probably there is not one case in fifty in which the law is fulfilled to the very letter. The quickest and cheapest way to let it be known that you have taken up an estray, is to advertise it in the newspaper. The owner, of course takes the paper, (and if he don't he ought to,) and invariably reads the article, and is generally willing to pay whatever expense may have been incurred.

Our Elections.

To the Editor of the Union.

There is scarcely any thing which comes before the eye of an adopted citizen of the United States that presents a greater contrast than the mode in which our public elections are carried on compared with those in Great Britain. It has been my lot to witness, and take an active part in them for something like fourteen years. There fraud at the polls is every thing but impossible. The claim of a freeholder, or the right to vote, is tested by an able lawyer, and if it is good the claimant gets his papers to that effect; his name is placed on the public records, and when election day comes each candidate in the contest has his lawyer to test the voter again on the value of his property, and again sworn if necessary. He then tells out the names of those for whom he votes. The principle objection lies in the fact that the landlord or clergy control the elector in the use of his vote. Still, there is more sound reason for his being controlled by either the one or the other, than, as is the case in many instances here, by the whiskey bottle. But throughout the whole there is a respect for law and order that must commend itself to the respect of every sound mind. I have witnessed elections in some of the older States conducted by the simple farming classes which would do credit to any community: but what I have seen in Minnesota is absolutely sickening. Only imagine an election carried on in a private house where the old man is said never to be without the rum bottle in his pocket, and the keg or barrel in the cellar, and before the polls were opened some of the voters have their eyes sparkling and their tongues quickened with the liquid fire. When the voting begins, one of the clerks calls for a list of the names on the town roll. No list, old or new is forthcoming, but the chairman of the board of Supervisors is present, and in his own house. The ballot box is scarcely half an hour open when there is a beaten track from the door to that of the cellar, and the worthy supervisor could be seen leading from two to six occasionally in and out. By and by there can be seen the flaming eye, and flippant tongue, telling the sad tale that the grog is on the wrong side of the head. The jack knife is out, whittling something carelessly; and the big plug of tobacco is tumbling through the jaw, at intervals, and the nasty spittle bespatters the floor; and the foolish if not profane language tells the terrible effects of alcohol. The poor Clerk, who is weary with cold and hunger, must endure the thump of the clenched fist upon the table where he writes. His nerves are unable to bear up and he cries out; "If I don't get quietness I cannot proceed in finishing up my writing." A Justice takes compassion, and orders silence. The steel pen again proceeds, and an oration is given outside the door, the speaker standing on a packing box. O, how I sighed to see men prostrate their privileges as Americans to such a degraded condition. Many of those present were from Ireland: a greater number still from the dominions of Louis Napoleon. It is not probable that one twentieth of the whole ever had a vote in the land of their birth, and seen in that condition, disturbing the proceedings, would be immediately locked up in jail. Americans cry out lustily against the influence of landlord or clergy at the election, but the love of whiskey reduces a man below the level of the brute, and he is under the influence of a more degrading tyrant than any landlord on earth. Its action on the brain can command more votes in a drunken community than the most persuasive speech from one of our best orators. A Republican people to maintain their independance must be virtuous and intelligent; this includes sobriety. When the Rebellion is crushed out the energies of the good must be directed against his awful vice.

JOHN KELLET,

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Letter from the Ninth Regiment.

HEADQUARTERS 9TH MINN VOLS.
CAMP LEOWN, JEFFERSON CITY, MO.
Friday, Nov. 14th, 1863.

To the Editor of the Union:

I had intended in this letter to give a few reflections concerning the first week's work of the Missouri Legislature, which met on Tuesday last, pursuant to adjournment. Having been an inmate of this Hospital for the past three days, the idea has necessarily been relinquished. I will state however that a sort of Kilkenny cat fight is now in progress between the Conservatives and Claybank elements, which may yet result in the election of one and possibly two U. S. Senators of the Radical school. In addition, to the election of Senator, this body of men are expected to legislate upon Railroad, and other matters and provide for the "enraged Militia," of which Governor Gamble is the honored Commander-in-chief. Senatorial aspirants from the Conservative and Claybank ranks are numerous and reconnoitering in force preparatory to the grand conflict, soon to come off. The contest promises to be an exciting one. When the Hon Henderson arrived in town, he tried hard to make himself agreeable to the Radicals, and declared upon his honor, that the report that he wanted to send sixteen of them to h—l was a downright lie. Before another year rolls around Missouri will be thoroughly radicalized.

The general health of the Regiment is about as when I last wrote.

The Regimental P. M.—Mr. Ed. L. Clapp—informs me that the average number of letters sent by the six companies at this place, per week, is fully fourteen hundred.

NOW AND THEN

RIVER ITEMS.—Steamboats are beginning to hunt their winter quarters, the Dunleith line having been nearly all laid up. DAVIDSON is running the Northern Belle, Frank Steele, and Favorite to Lake City, and from there to St. Paul the Cutter is making tri-weekly trips. The above three boats will attend to the business of Winona, which relieves the Keokuk from further service. An increase in freight and passenger tariff has gone into effect. The passenger rate to La Crosse is $3 50, which is the same as the stage fare. Rather expensive riding at that rate, we should judge.—Winona Rep.

A LATE NEWS ITEM.—An Eastern paper has the following.

MINNESOTA papers say that in consequence of the absence of hunters' prairie chickens are running through the streets of St. Paul.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The New Orleans correspondent of the Herald, 14th, states that yesterday the United States Marshal and his deputies seized all the cotton now in New Orleans, under the order of Mr. Rufus Waples, the United States District Attorney acting upon information derived from secret parties, that most of the cotton now in store and in transit was purchased from disloyal parties, and [illegible]. Rumor says the seizure was made in order that it can be released the [illegible] must prove that the parties from whom [illegible] purchased are loyal to the United States Government.

The Issue of Treasury Notes.

By the act of March 3d, 1863, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to issue $40,000,000 Treasury notes running not longer than three years and bearing interest not higher than six per cent, which he can make a legal tender for the face value.

Under this authority $50,000,000, of the three years notes, at five per cent interest, payable every six months, were negotiated with the associated banks of the three cities on the 8th of September last; these notes to be a legal tender for their faces if paid out of the banks. They will in a great degree operate as an equivalent increasing of currency.

Plates have already been prepared for the issue of one years notes at the same rate of interest payable at maturity with the principal, which notes are also legal tender; but no decision has yet been arrived at as to their issue.

The aggregate amount of United States legal tender notes which the Secretary has been authorized by the act of Congress to issue absolutely is $40,000,000. All this amount has been issued. He has besides conditional authority to issue 50,000,000, more for the redemption of a temporary loan, should it become necessary to do so.

Sharpshooting.

B. F. Taylor, of the Chicago Journal, has the following allusion to sharpshooting in the army:

Sharpshooting is the squirrel hunting of the war, and it is wonderful how utterly forgetful of self the marksmen grow; with what sportsmanlike eye they watch the grander game, and with coolness and accuracy they bring it down. I find, however, that indifferent as men become to human life, they have the most vivid and minute remembrance of the first man they brought down with a deliberate aim, often noting, in the instant of time preceding the fatal shot, the fashion of features, color of eyes and hair, even the expression of face, all painted in a picture that shall last the life out.

"My first man," said an artilleryman to me, "I saw but twenty seconds, and shall remember him forever. I was standing by my gun when a rebel infantry soldier rushed up and made a lunge with the bayonet at one of the horses. I whipped out my revolver, and took him through the breast. He threw up his hands, gave me the strangest look in the world, and fell forward upon his face. He had blue eyes, brown curling hair, a dark moustache and a handsome face."

The gunner paused a moment and added: "I thought the instant I shot that I should have loved that man had I known him. I tell you what—this war is terrible business." And so it is—and so it is—but "they that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

About 250 reams of straw paper are manufactured daily at Niagara Falls, for the New York Tribune. The company are building a large storehouse for straw, just below the bridge, in the "midst of the waters." The Lockport Journal says the modus operandi is somewhat changed since the introduction of straw as an ingredient. The straw is cut with a straw cutter made for the purpose, and is then put into two large iron rotaries holding 2,200 pounds of straw each. A preparation of Alkali is added. The rotary is then set in motion, under the influence of strong heat, and is thus moved until the straw is made into a thick dark pulp. This passes through several processes of bleaching till it is white and fit for use. It is then mixed with rag pulp, and passes on toward paper. The paper thus made is one half straw and half cotton.

AN IRISHMAN'S WILL.—I give and bequeath to my beloved wife, Bridget, all my property without reserve, and to eldest son, Patrick, one half the remainder, and to Dennis, my youngest son, the rest. If anything is left, it may go to Terence McCarty.

—Gentlemen from Vicksburg say that leading rebels with whom they have come in contact there freely admit that the rebellion is in its last year, unless French intervention shall come to their help.

The contest for the next Speakership is said to be between Schuyler Colfax and E. B. Washburn of Illinois. Frank Blair has been talked of in that connection but it is said that he will not submit his name as a candidate.

—The Richmond rebels are at last tasting the cry of hunger. A man may avoid crying out when his thumbs are in the thumbscrews but not when his belly is pinched.

A PASSENGER on board the Arcon—a queer type of the English personage—was asked what his peculiar emotions were as the vessel was thumping upon the rocks. "Why," said he, "as I looked down upon the waves I wondered I should be so [illegible] as I shouldn't be on it in the Strand."

William L. Stone, lately elected Governor of Iowa, who studying law twelve years ago, worked eight hours a day, for the privilege of earning money to pay his board and tuition.

LATEST NEWS.

NEW YORK Nov. 22.—The army of the Potomac is still going Southward. It occupies Madison court House, which looks more like a flank movement. Pontoons went down last night.

Our cavalry it is said, got in the rear of Lee's forces.

No doubts are felt in the minds of intelligent men as to the result of an engagement between Meade and Lee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Yesterday afternoon about ninety of Mosby's men approached to within three miles of Bealton with the intention of making a raid on the railroad. Being dressed in the Federal uniform the detachment of the 1st Pennsylvania and the 6th Ohio cavalry, who were in the immediate neighborhood at the time, mistook them for friends, but soon discovered their error, when the rebels fired a volley into them by which several were wounded. The rebels were instantly pursued and driven into Snicker's Gap. Six of the gang were captured and at the latest accounts our cavalry had not returned.

The impression in regard to the enemy's strength on the Rapidan are various. It is maintained that Lee's entire force does not exceed 35,000. Others place it as high as 74,000.

An army of the Potomac dispatch of the 21st states that the army is not advancing. The rain has caused some mud, but the roads will soon be dry.

The Herald's army of the Potomac dispatch states that our cavalry have occupied Culpepper, but the infantry has not yet reached that point.

It was rumored in camp that Lee had fallen back from the Rapidan.

The depredations in the rear of our forces prove to be deserters from our own army.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The Chronicle and Republican both announce that the army of the Potomac moved at an early hour this morning.

The Star says it is not known in official circles here, that the army of the Potomac has moved, or is it expected it will move to-day, and intimates that Gen. Thomas is about taking advantage of Longstreet movement against Burnside.

The Republican extra this morning says:

"This morning, at dawn of day, the grand army of the Potomac broke up camp near the north bank of the Rapidan, and, with ten days' cooked rations in haversacks and wagons, commenced an advance movement upon the enemy, under orders of Gen. Meade. It is supposed before noon to-day the whole of our army will be beyond the Rapidan.

General Lee must fight or run. If Lee has resisted the crossing of Meade's forces there has been a battle before this. If Lee does not resist the crossing it is evident he is not strong enough to fight outside of his fortifications. In the latter event he will fall back upon Gordonsville, or Richmond, most likely the former.

The report that Lee's army is at Hanover Junction is only speculation. It will soon be known exactly where he finds it if he has to go to the "walls of Richmond."

An Army of the Potomac letter says an order has been issued to immediately shoot all guerrillas as soon as captured.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The Chattanooga correspondent of the World, dated the 15th, says

Will Bragg move upon Burnside with a portion of his forces, leaving the remainder to resist an advance on the Federals? Has he sufficiently fortified his position in front of Chattanooga to allow him to do this? That he might have done this had not the situation changed within the last twenty four hours is possible, but as Hooker's advance from Bridgeport settled the supply question so another movement has settled the possibility of a flank movement on East Tennessee. What it is I am not at liberty to say, but it will not be shrouded in mystery long.

If as is alleged by some refugees and deserters, a portion of Bragg's forces have already started on their mission against Burnside, they must be immediately recalled or rebel communications will be severed and the whole army threatened from the rear.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov 23.

The following is from a letter dated Port Hudson, 3d, written by a Captain in the 7th regiment and addressed to his father in this city.

"We have just received information of a positive character that First Lieutenant Geo. B. Calmer jr., of New York, who was captured about two months ago, while out on a raid, was hung within twenty-four hours afterwards together with some twenty privates, (colored), who were taken with him. I hope some action will be taken on this subject. The officers and soldiers of the Corps d'Afrique will take immediate and final action if they ever get hold of [illegible] and the men of the command [illegible] Government should neglect to do it."

Army of the Potomac, November 20.—The guerrillas around Warrenton, having fired upon our pickets [illegible] the citizens have been informed that the first recurrence of rebel shooting, Warrenton will be shelled.

BRANDY STATION, Nov. 20.—A portion of the 6th, 7th, and 3rd Virginia cavalry, of Buford's command, under Capt. Conger, of the latter regiment, made a reconnoissance yesterday in the direction of Sperryville, and captured a rebel herd of 232 cattle, 14 horses, and 15 herders.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Advices from the front to-night state that no collision has yet occurred. The rebels have made no new demonstrations within a day or two but still seem to be strengthening their earthworks.

Times dispatch. The enemy's movement on Wednesday seems to be a concerted plan along the whole front to ascertain our position.

A force of infantry crossed a short distance below Raccoon Ford, and attempted to cut off the First Michigan cavalry, but Major Brewer discovered them before the attack could be made. The enemy crossed the river during the night, and exposed themselves just at dawn. After skirmishing one and two hours, and finding their plans discovered, they returned to the opposite bank.

Letter "A" Sewing Machine.

WITH ALL THE IMPROVEMENTS.

Is the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist-thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality.

"A THING OF BEAUTY IS A JOY FOREVER."—A handsome face, and a form of grace are always attractive to the eye, and nothing helps so much to improve the looks of man or boy, as a suit of fine clothes, purchased at S. RANDALL'S Clothing Store, situated on Front street, opposite Bradley's store, where can be found good Winter Clothing, Hats and Caps, Undershirts and Drawers, and Gent's Furnishing Goods, at very low prices. He pays the highest cash price for Wheat. 19-1y*

A liberal sum of greenbacks is offered by the Devil of this office for a good carrier's address.

WE publish our paper this week in advance of our publication day in order to give our boys a chance to keep Thanksgiving.

"Richard's himself again," and so is Dan Tyner. His new quarters are on Main street, in the rear of the old Military headquarters.

OUR club for Godey's Lady's Book will be sent on in a few days. Only three or four names more wanting to fill it. Those who wish to join will please "hurry up."

We understand that hay is selling in the Southern part of the county a $1 50 per ton.

NEW-PAPER CHANGE.—E. H. Folsom has purchased of D. A. Caneday the St. Croix Monitor, and [illegible] the old name of Taylors Falls Reporter. It is a good local paper.

ENLARGED.—The Rochester Post comes to us enlarged one column on each page. We are glad, brother Blakely, to see such evidences of your prosperity.

LIVERY.—We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. Swayne. He has a stock of [illegible] horses, buggies and cutters, [illegible] ready at a moment's notice, to [illegible] a good "rig." "I should [illegible]."

WE have received Godey's Lady's [illegible] December. It is a gem in [illegible] pictures, fashion plates and patterns of embroidery, [illegible] nothing of the interesting [illegible] in this number.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE.—A sermon [illegible] preached in the City Hall, [illegible] morning, (Thursday) by Rev. [illegible] Day, from the following text: "Whoso offereth praise glorifieth [illegible]"

WHEAT IN STERLING TOWNSHIP. A [illegible] from Sterling informs us that twenty thousand bushels of wheat have been raised in that township the past year. Two machines have been threshing there this fall, and each one has threshed about ten thousand bushels, and they are not through yet. One farmer has over [illegible] hundred bushels. This speaks [illegible] for this county where so little [illegible]ing was done last fall, in consequence of Indian trouble.

CLUBBING WITH THE PRAIRIE FARMER.—The subscription price of the Farmer, one of the best Agricultural papers in the West, is $2.00 a year. We will furnish it to those [illegible] subscribe for the UNION at $1.50 [illegible]. The Union and the Farmer one year for $3.00. Send in your orders, farmers, and get reading matter that will just suit you.

THE LADY'S FRIEND.—This is a new [illegible] magazine of literature and fashion, published expressly for the ladies. It will contain the latest patterns of cloaks, caps, bonnets, head-dresses, fancy work, embroidery and other matters interesting to them. The January number will be ready in a few days, and will contain a beautiful steel engraving called 'Gabriel Wilkes Return.' The subscription price is $2,00 per year. Published by Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

In our present number, Wm. J. Smith & Co. the extensive shoe dealers in St. Paul, advertise a large quantity of very seasonable goods at wholesale; such as Moccasins, Buffalo Over Shoes, Mitts, Gloves, &c.

All merchants who may need any of these goods, would do well to remember that Messrs. Smith & Co. are prepared to supply them at the lowest figures.

A SOLDIER'S DREAM.—The following extract, taken from a Soldier's letter, speaks volumes for our brave boys who have constant dreams of being around the bright home circle.

"I was very much disappointed a few nights ago. I thought I was at home, and was having one of the best of times. I thought I had just returned from the war, and you had a large party, and the way I was putting into the good things was a caution. And lo, I awoke, and found myself in a miserable, little dog tent. You cannot imagine my disappointment.

THE next meeting of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society will be held at the House of Mrs. A. N. Hilton on Thursday, Dec. 3rd.

NEW GOODS.—Charlie Heinze has received his new goods, and got them very neatly arranged in his show room. He has toys of all kinds for Christmas which, we know will please the young folks.

FURNITURE.—Charlie Hielborn, along with other advertisers, is determined that the readers of the UNION shall know where to get good substantial furniture. Accordingly, his advertisement will be found in this issue, wherein he informs them that he has everything they wish in the furniture line. He is a good workman, and gets up no poor trash. Rooms corner of Hickory and Second streets.

HON. Chas. McIlrath, State Auditor arrived in town last Saturday, and commenced the sale of School Lands for this County. Ten hundred and eighty acres were sold for $6 320. An average per acre of six dollars. Nearly all the lands were sold to settlers living upon them.

NO BETTER PROOF REQUIRED.—It has not yet been publicly denied that the Chemical Saleratus made by D. B. DeLand & Co., is all that its friends have claimed—that is a pure and wholesome article. This cannot be denied in face of the testimony of chemists and those best qualified to judge.

The following verses were written for, and sung by the children of the District School at Sterling, on Wednesday the 30th of Sept. 1863, at the closing of the summer school.

This is the day we close our school,
In the summer season,
And we are glad that we came here,
And we can tell the reason.
Yankee doodle, etc.

We are Sterling boys and girls,
Who come to school with pleasure,
Because we know that what we learn,
Will be to us a treasure.
Yankee doodle, etc.

Here we learn to read and write,
With arithmetic and spelling,
And grammar and geography,
We learn, and would excel in.
Yankee doodle, etc.

Here we're taught to speak the truth,
And treat each other kindly,
And as we practice what we're taught,
We get along quite finely.
Yankee doodlee, etc

We're too young to know much yet,
Of Union or Secession,
But we can pray that God will grant
Our country his rich blessing

CHICAGO SANITARY COMMISSION,
BRANCH OF U. S. SANITARY COMMISSION
Chicago, November 14th, 1863.

MRS J. R. TINKCOM, Mankato, Minn:

DEAR MADAM.—Your two favors of Oct. 16th and 20th are before me. Your shipment of fifty five dollars ($55,00) worth of hospital stores, and fifty-three dollars ($53.00) of articles for the Fair, have been received and appropriated, and I must now beg you not to think us neglectful or ungrateful because our promptness in offering thanks does not seem to equal yours in offering gifts. The pressure upon us has been enormous, and the incessant donations pouring in for the Fair, have kept us in a state of astonishment which we had not the power, had we the time, to express.

In addition to your shipment of articles for Fair and Hospital, as advised by your favor of Oct. 20th, let me acknowledge the receipt of a remittance of twenty two ($22) dollars sent by express. Of this sum, ten dollars was contributed by Lillie Tinkcom, a little girl ten years of age; and will you say to her that when she is grown up, and as long as she lives, it will be one of her proudest memories that she did so much for "the soldiers" in the time of our country's second Revolution. She has given a dollar for every year of her sunny life, and we doubt not a career thus begun, will always be a blessing to the country.

I remain, dear madam,
Very truly yours,
E. B. M. CAGG,
Cor. Sec. Sanitary Commission.

Messrs Hartman & Roberts took the contract for doing the work on Charlie Heinze new brick store—the former for the carpenter, and the latter for the mason work. They are certainly deserving of credit for the excellent manner in which they did their work. They are both good workmen, energetic and always on the lookout for work, and the consequence is they are always busy, which is a recommendation that speaks for itself.

PAPER AT NEW ULM.—The enterprising citizens of New Ulm are bound to have a paper, and one will be started at that place the first of January. The citizens have subscribed $1,000 for the purpose, and the editor of the Staatz Zietung, at St. Paul, is the gentleman who is to try his fortune there. We wish him abundant success.

COLD WEATHER.—Frosty nights and mornings have arrived, and it's getting mighty cold. It requires less self-denial to set up all night than it does to get up of a cold morning. Additional clothes are required on the bed, and bachelors are getting scarce. A number of young men who have been preparing to pay the board of some young woman have felt the necessity of hurrying up their cakes, and give the minister half a saw-buck. Jack Frost knows what's what.

THE ST PAUL PRESS.—We keep the Press for sale at our office, and parties wishing to subscribe, can do so either by the quarter, week, or single copy. The Press is the best newspaper published at the capital, and has a larger circulation than any paper in the State.

The citizens of Anoka have met together, pursuant to a call of A. G. Spaulding, Editor of the Anoka Star, to consider the newspaper interests of that town. It seems that some obstacles have stood in the way of the successful publication of a paper in that place, which obstacles are now removed. The Editor agrees to publish the Star for one year providing the subscriptions should be increased to three hundred.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS.—While Brandreth's Pills are so potent for good to diseased bodies, they are harmless as bread. The babe at the breast or the man of ripest years, and delicate females, are certain to receive an increase of health from the use of these pills blessed of Heaven.

It has been said by an able physician, that "this medicine always benefits and never injures." Wherein is the superlative quality. The Brandreth Pills have no power or action but upon impure humors in the blood. They seize only the impurities in and around the parts affected by disease; all parts involved in diseased actions are operated upon, and cleansed from all foulness, and reinfused with "Life" by the wonderful curative powers contained and inherent of the most justly famed BRANDRETH'S PILLS.

Millions of people, whose lives appeared to be at the last ebb worn out by fever's consuming fires, by consumption's insidious advances, by racking torments of inflammatory rheumatism, have been cured by the use of these pills. The persons are living witnesses, and thousands are residents in every city in America. Principal office, No. 294, Canal St., N. Y.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book "E" of mortgages on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P. Folsom in 1852, and by E. D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot. Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota."

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved March 13th 1860,' approved March 8th 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,115.52, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

MANHOOD;

How Lost! How Restored!

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price, Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

The balance of the purchase money is payable at any time within twenty years, at the option of the purchaser, if interest at seven per cent, per annum is annually paid in advance.

Interest to the first day of June, 1861, must be paid at the time of the purchase.

Persons purchasing lands upon which other parties have made improvements, will be required to pay the owner of the same the appraised value of the improvements, one half to be paid at the time of the sale, and the balance within six months thereafter, with interest at seven per cent. per annum,

In case the person occupying or improving the land has damaged the same, the appraised amount of damage will be deducted from his improvements, and where the occupant is the purchaser, the damag will be added to the price of the land.

No lands will be sold for less than the appraised value.

Purchase money payable in specie and legal tender notes.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tention, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever! ! !

They are simple in construction, and easily understood: and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

SINGER & CO'S.

Letter "A" Sewing Machine.

WITH ALL HE IMPROVEMENTS.

IS the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful, substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality,

Valuable Lands for Sale.

BY direction of the Hon Secretary of the Interior, the undersigned will receive sealed bids for the purchase of any or all of the lands hereinafter described, they being among the choicest and best farming land in Minnesota.

These lands comprise what are known as the Winnebago Trust Lands in the State of Minnesota, and will be sold to the highest and best bidder in tracts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres each, under the provisions of a treaty concluded with the Winnebago Indians, April 15th, 1859, and an act of Congress, approved February 21st 1863, entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their Reservation, in Minnesota, for their benefit."

No bid will be entertained at a rate less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

In case a bid is accepted, the party making the same will be notified as soon thereafter as practicable. If within thirty days after such notice the party shall fail to make payment to the undersigned, the land for which such bid was made will be subject to sale to any other person.

Patents will be issued and transmitted to purchasers as soon after payment as the same can be prepared. Payments may be made either in cash or in the certificates of indebtedness of the Winnebago Indians, issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for the debt of said Indians, and secured to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said lands by the third article of the treaty above mentioned. The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. All bids must be sealed and addressed to the undersigned, Washington City, D. C., and endorsed "Bid for Winnebago Tract Land."

HARPER'S

New Monthly Magazine.

Critical Notices of the Press.

The volumns Bound constitute of themselves a liberary of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.

The most popular Monthly in the world. —N. Y. Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People: and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each Number contains fully 144 pages reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good woodcuts: and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature. —Trubner's Guide to American Literature London.

No Magazine in Europe or America is so well known, none has half as many readers; and, we may safely say, none has received so large a tribute of admiration from the cultivated class, that delighted in a healthy, diversified, elevating periodical literature. It is the foremost magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

Poetry.

The Two Southern Mothers.

Heard you not the din of battle,
Cannon's roar and musket's rattle,
Clash of sword, and shriek of shell,
Victor's shout, and vanquished's yell?

Saw you not yon scene of slaughter,
Human blood poured out like water:
Northern valor, Southern pride,
Stern resolve on either side.

Cheering on his flagging men,
Rallying to the charge again,
Comes a bullet, charged with grief,
Strikes the brave Confederate chief.

Down he falls, amid the strife,
Horses trampling out his life.
Scarce can his retreating force,
Find and save his mangled corse.

Home they bore him to his mother,
He was all she had—none other;
Woeful mother! who can borrow
Words to paint her frantic sorrow?

As she mourned her slaughtered brave,
Came and spake her aged slave,
Came and spake with solemn brow:
"Missis, we is even now.

"I had ten, and you had one;
Now we're even—all are gone;
Not one left to bury either—
Slave and mistress mourn together.

'Every one of mine you sold—
Now your own lies stark and cold:
To the just Avenger bow—
Missis! I forgive you now."

Thus she spoke, that sable mother;
Shuddering, quailed and crouched each other.
Yea! although it tarry long,
PAYMENT SHALL BE MADE FOR WRONG?

Select Miscellany.

THE WILL AND THE WAY.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

The conversation had turned on the pleasure of doing good, and a certain rich man's benevolent acts were spoken of with praise. It was told of him how he visited the hospitals, how he went among the poor; how he moved actively in the midst of various humane enterprises—always giving of his abundance with a liberal hand.

'It is easy enough for him to do good,' said Mr. Ellendorf. A fine ear would have detected something like envy. 'If I had his means—'

Mr. Ellendorf did not finish the sentence.

'I am quite sure,' remarked one of the company, 'that if I had his means, I would not use them as well he does. The fact is,' he continued, 'I have sometimes thought, in pondering these things, that God gives to every man the fullest measure of means for good he is willing to use.'

'Doubted,' answered Mr. Ellendorf 'For instance, a friend really in need of help, called on me yesterday and stated his case. It was a very hard one, and all my sympathies were touched. If I had been rich, he should have passed out through my door with a light heart, instead of the heavy one he bore away; my will was good, but, alas! my coffers were empty. Poverty denied me the luxury of benevolence.,

'The good you purposed might, have been harm in the act. If it had been best for you to give and for him to receive the means would have been in your hands.'

'You may be right in that,' said Mr. Ellendorf.

'My faith in Providence goes just so far. If this Providence comes down to the minutest things of our life, will it fail in those of larger importance? I think not. Take it for granted, then, that in letting your friend go from you in disappointment through inability to grant the aid desired, a higher service was wrought for him than if you had helped him to thousands of dollars. When he left your door, God's providences were still around him. All was not lost because you failed.'

'No, I trust not,' answered Mr. Ellendorf with a sigh. 'But,' he resumed, in a desponding voice, 'what an impediment is poverty! You are limited in every way. Hunger stares you in the face, and you have no granary from which to dispense food. The widow and the orphan cry to you in vain. The poor turn unrelieved from your threshold.'

'But still they are in God's hands and of more value than many sparrows. Their names are written in His book. He knows all their griefs. His compassion fail not.'

'It is all right I suppose,' said Mr Ellendorf, trying to rally himself and put on a more cheerful aspect.

'All right, so far as you and I are concerned if we simply do good with the means at our command as God gives the opportunity.'

'I have no means at command,' replied Mr. Ellendorf. 'You know I am circumvented in every way. Poor health and a large family! What can I do for the common good?'

'A word is often better than a coin.'

'Yes, I know. But, after you have refused the coin, the word will avail but little.'

'Possibly it may then avail most. The right thought in time of trouble is sometimes better than present relief. Our best service to mankind is not in the bestowal of money—not in ministration to bodily needs. There are higher things to be done than feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, and visiting those who are sick and in prson. Nay, more; there is a hunger, a nakedness, a sickness, and an imprisonment of the soul that money, or extrnal appliances, can reach. It is not large gifts, or riches, that we need for the work of humanity: but the unselfish purpose and the willing heart.'

Mr. Ellendorf felt rebuked by the closing sentence, and said no more on the subject. The coversation around him took a new direction, but he kept silent, pondering with himself the question of will and way. He was, in the main, a kind hearted man, with religione sentiments; and had made some efforts to bring his life into conformity with his understanding of the Divine law. When he saw the right clearly he tried to do the right.

'The unselfish purpose and the willing heart.' This sentence made an impression. It seemd like a rebuke at first, and hurt him. But when alone, and in a calmer frame of mind, he looked down into his heart, and tried to understand something about his real state.

In the evening, Mr. Ellendorf sat alone with his wife. She was sewing and he reading to himself.

'John,' said Mrs. Ellendorf, looking up from her work There was a slight hesitation in her manner, as if she were not sure that what she was about saying would be well received.

'What is it, Helen?' inquired Mr. Elendorf, seeing that his wife hesitated.

'Mrs. Mansfield was here this afternoon.'

'Was she?' His tone was indifferent. There was a slight closing of the brows.

'I didn't promise her that you wo'd call round and see her.'

'It's well you didn't.'

'And yet, John, you might be of great use to her. There's something on her mind and it's worrying her.'

'Did she say what it was?'

'No.'

The book in Mr. Elendorf's hand was interesting. He had on his dressing gown and slippers. He felt at ease and comfortable. 'The unselfish purpose and the willing heart.' Memory restored this sentence to his thought, and with it came back the conversation in which he had taken a part some hours before. Mr. Ellendorf did not feel at ease with himself.

'Did Mrs. Mansfield say that she would like to see me?' he asked.

'Not out and out in so many words; but she seems troubled and perplexed in her mind, and said once or twice, that if you had been at home, she would have been glad to have asked you some questions.'

'About what?'

'I can only guess.'

'What is your guess?'

'She is still young and attractive, and has some property.'

'Oh! You think there is a lover in the question.'

'Possible.'

'Then I shall stand aloof.'

'Not so, John. It is just possible that you may have some facts about this lover of the highest importance for her to know. A word from your lips may save her from a life of misery. I know she wants to see you, and that there is some trouble and perplexity on her mind. She has great confidence in your judgment.—We should do good as we have opportunity, John,—and here is an opportunity.'

'The unselfish purpose and the willing heart.' How clearly memory held this sentence!

The pressure on Mr. Elendorf was too great. Inward sense of duty and outward influence moved him to act. The pleasant book and comfortable dressing gown were laid aside, and he went forth to serve another and not himself.

'Mr. Ellendorf!' There was a surprise, pleasure, relief of mind, hope—all blended in the tone that pronounced his name, and all reflected in Mrs. Mansfield's warmly grasping his hand.

'Helen thought you would like to see me,' said Mr. Ellendorf, as he still held Mrs. Mansfield's hand.

'O, you are kind! Yes, I have wanted to see you very much. Sit down.

Mrs. Mansfield became a little embarrassed.

'If I can serve you in anything, speak freely,' said Mr. Elendorf.

Evidently, Mrs. Mansfield had to struggle with herself. The visit was a surprise. She had not expected, knowing Mr. Elendorf's habits, that he would take the trouble, after getting home in the evening, to come around and see her.

'I think you can serve me,' she replied.

'In what way?'

Some moments passed. Mrs. M. was evidently scanning the terms of the question she wished to ask. 'Simplest, best.' she said, in her thought, and then put the querry.

'Do you know Mr. Granger?'

'Henry Granger?'

'Yes.'

'I do.'

'How long have you known him?'

'For a Dozen years.'

'Ah! so long?'

'Yes.'

A slight pause. Then Mrs. M. resumed:

'Have you ever had business with him?'

'O, Yes.'

'Did you always find him fair and honorable?'

'No.'

A deep crimson stained the face of Mrs. M. She turned a little aside for concealment.

'Not honorable!' There was an expression of painful surprise in her voice.

'Neither fair nor honorable, Mrs. Mansfield. He is a smooth, specious, insinuating person, but void of principle. I know him well.

A cold palor succeeded to the crimson on Mrs. Mansfield's countenance.

'If you feel any interest in this man,' said Mr. Ellendorf, speaking strongly, 'I beg of you to let it die at once. He is of mean quality, and corrupt as well as mean.'

'I know you too well,' replied Mrs. M., 'to doubt the truth of your testimony. O, what a providence there is for me in your coming to night!—I must be frank with you, for you have not failed to see that I am interested in Mr. Granger. He has been visiting me almost every evening for some time. A few days ago he offered himself in marriage, and to night he is to have my final answer. I was in considerable doubt. Something about him did not satisfy me. Still I had no evidence against him, and my heart was in his favor.—There! that is his ring. What shall I do?'

Let your servant tell him that he must excuse you this evening. Don't see him on any account. He's a bad man; and you shall have, if you desire it, a cloud of witnesses to the fact.'

The servant was already moving along the hall. Mrs. M. had no time for deliberation; so she acted. Going to the parlor door she said:

'If that is Mr. Granger, tell him that I say he must excuse me this evening.'

The servant went to the street door. Mrs. M. stood on tip toe and breathless. It was Mr. Granger. She heard him pronounce her name, and heard the servant reply.

'O no, you are mistaken!' answered Mr. Granger, moving past the servant into the hall.

'No, sir,' returned the servant, 'I give you her message correctly.'

'Is she sick?'

'I believe not,' said the servant.

'Then I must see her. Go up and say that I am in the parlor; and that I cannot think you heard her aright.'

'She reported me correctly,' said Mrs. Mansfield, stepping out into the hall, and confronting him with a pale, calm face. You will excuse me to-night.

'But, Mrs. Mansfield, I——'

'You will excuse me to-night, sir!' Eyes and voice put on an expression of sternness. 'Good evening.'

But Mr. Granger did not stir.

There's something wrong here, Mrs. Mansfield. Has any one——'

He stopped suddenly, with a blank look, as Mr. Ellendorf came out of the parlor, and stood by the side of Mrs. Mansfield. His whole manner was changed. There was a mean guiltiness of expression about his face and attitude as of one caught in a theft.

'Good evening,' he said, and vanished through the vestibule door without giving Mr. Ellendorf even a shadow of recognition.

Mrs. Mansfield went back to the sofa, from which she had arisen but a few moments before, weak and trembling.

'Your timely coming has saved me, I think, from a life of wretchedness. I saw that man's character in his face just now. How strange that he could have so hidden it from my eyes before! O, my friend! how shall I ever repay the service of to-night?'

'For the little I have done, I am already repaid a hundred fold, Mrs. Mansfield. The effort on my part was slight, but the good result beyond calculation. If you had accepted that man's offer, your happiness would have been destroyed. To know that I have saved you from such imminent peril, will be a life-long satisfaction.'

As Mr. Ellendorf walked homeward that night, he thought thus with himself:

'How near I came to passing this golden opportunity which God has set in my way! Of all her friends, I alone could serve her in this her sorest need, and yet I came well-nigh failing her from indifference and a love of ease—I who, but a few hours before, was complaining that my hands were bound so that I could not help the needy nor minister to the suffering. The willing heart, the unselfish purpose, and the ready hand—if these exist, doubtless they will receive the fullest employment, How clear this seems to me now. Wealth has a thousand avenues to benevolence peculiarly its own; but the lack of it cannot shut the thousand other avenues that remain open, nor save us from the guilt of neglected opportunities.'

Mr. Ellendorf was right. It is the 'willing heart, the unselfish purpose, and the ready hand' that we need.—Having these, whether we be rich or poor, humble or exalted, God will not fail to give us abundant opportunity.

The President's Call for Volunteers. The Duty of Young Men.

The question whether the President's call for volunteers shall be met within the period to which it is limited, depends mainly upon the public spirit of the young men. They are the class from which alone serviceable soldiers can be obtained. "Young men for war" is the accepted maxim in all nations. Their physical vigor and endurance, their elasticity and dash, particularly fit them for the field. The loyal States are very powerful in this class of population. Notwithstanding all the drain that has been made upon them, they still contain over two million of men between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five. A sixth part of this number, properly armed, drilled and disciplined, and incorporated with our armies already in the field, might sweep off all that remains of this rebellion before next summer. There never was a more sacred call. Every young man who has a spark of manhood in his breast ought to give heed to it. The country has a right to the service of its stoutest arms without compelling that service, and it is far more honorable to go to the field as a volunteer than as a conscript. Many of the exemptions which the present law of Congress grants, particularly the three hundred dollar commutation, will probably be repealed before the drafting process is again applied; and there will be hereafter comparativly few chances of escaping the consequences of the lot when it is once drawn. The Government is determined to have the personal services of just so many men as it requires—voluntarily if it can, compulsorily if it must. It is not so much a question to the young men whehter they shall go, as how they shall go, by choice or by coercion.

Never has there been in the history of this country, and never probably will there be again, such another opportunity for young men who desire such a noble career. War is the most stirring of all human doings—the sphere of action which calls out the greatest energies of our nature. In it real superiority tells the quickest and the surest. In civil life mere circumstances has a great deal to do in shaping a young man's destiny. If in business, no diligence or prudence can secure him from the common vicissitudes of the commercial world. If in a profession, his speedy advancement depends greatly upon fortunate connections and other influences quite independent of his real merits. Agriculture and the mechanic arts, however respectable in themselves, can hardly satisfy him who aspires to distinction. Politics, in these days of political degeneracy, present little inducement to the young man who relies upon his manhood; the chances are ten to one that chicanery would thwart him. But war, in its stern necessities, brings the young man surely to the fairest tests; and when it is once proved that he has the true steel in him, there is no rank which he may not hope to reach. It is a matter of comparatively small consequence where he begins. No young private, however friendless or unknown, can exhibit a superior intelligence and promptness in the camp or superior gallantry in the field, without attracting the notice of his superiors. Promotion is sure to come to him, because it is of vital interest to the entire army that it should be officered as efficiently as possible. He will not have to wait long, inasmuch as vacancies are constantly occuring both from the casualities of battle and from the forced resignation of those whose unfitness has been proved. From the day he puts his foot into the ranks, the road to honor opens before him, broad and high; it is for him alone to fix his mark. Many of our best Colonels and even Generals began their career as privates. The places thus won are far more valuable than any obtained by personal favor. We have known of many young men who failed to go into the service simply because they failed to get the commission they applied for. The military spirit—saying nothing of the patriotic—that can thus be dashed must be of a very poor sort. The very fact that these young men have been thus influenced to stay at home is pretty good proof that they deserve to be disappointed. The man of real soldierly qualities would be kept back for no such reasons. Every fiber in him would be stimulated to make good his claim to what he has asked, and crave his way to a commission with his own good sword. So long as the ranks are open to him he need rely upon no favors.

Not only military distinction are to be won in the service to which the country now calls, but the best chances for future civil preferment. There is no country in the world in which military gallantry is more honored than in this; and he who has once proved himself true and faithful to the flag of the Republic, in the storm of battle, has a passport to the popular confidence that nothing else can give. It is certain that for the present generation the great majority of our officers of trust, from the Presidency down, will be filled by men who have periled their lives for the Stars and Stripes. The people will devolve their trusts upon the tried soldiers, both because they will love to honor them, and because they are thoroughly tired of professional politicians. No sordid, corrupt, faithless nature can belong to a true soldier, and the people instinctively feel it.

Every young man, who seeks an honorable future, who cares to figure in the grandest drama of the century, who has spirit enough to feel that.

> "One crowded hour of glorious life
> Is worth an age without a name,"

who has soul enough to realize how sacred a thing is patriotism, should hasten to the help of his country in this its last decisive grapple with the monster treason, now as never before desperate. Duty and glory alike urge it.

Every effort should be made to meet the President's call by voluntary enlistment, and not by the other alternative of drafting. Public opinion should hold every State and county of the North strictly to its duty. It should be deemed a positive dishonor to any locality not to furnish its fair quota of men—a reproach analogous to that which would come from actual disloyalty itself. In times like these professions are of slight account, unless backed up by substantial acts. Every citizen everywhere, who has the slightest influence, owes that influence now to his country, and he may be sure that he can exert it in no more effective shape than in stimulating young men to respond to the call of the country for more soldiers.—New York Times, Nov. 12.

The National Debt.

The actual amount of the public debt is one of those things of which the people have no very accurate information, and what is more singular, it is one of those things about which the people do not seem to have the slightest care. Since about the first day of June last, the agents of the government have been engaged in receiving subscriptions to the stock known as the "five twenty" bonds, at the rate of a million and a half of dollars a day. As about one hundred and fifty days have elapsed since then, there has been taken up of the floating debt of the nation over two hundred millions of dollars, which amount has become part of the funded debt of the government. Until recently the entire debt created by the war has been held by our own people, who to all appearances are capable of taking double the sum without any very great inconvenience. During the last thirty days however, there has been a steady increase of purchases of these five-twenty bonds for European capitalits, and we have no doubt that in a very short time, unless some new unexpected reverses shall take place, the whole unfunded debt of the government will be taken by purchasers of these bonds, and that a very large portion of these securities will be held by parties abroad. For the first time during the war, a portion of American securities are finding their way to Europe, and to that extent are relieving the home capital of the country. Europe by this time is satisfied that a people who can carry on an immense civil war without the aid of a dollar of foreign money, and who are prospering in all the branches of industry as they never prospered before, have within them the elements of stability and responsibility, before which even the immense national debt falls into insignificance. There is hardly an individual of any party who will not admit that peace with an unbroken Union would find the financial credit of the national government higher in the estimation of the world than it has ever been before; and that the people, under the renewed impulse that commerce and all branches of active industry would receive, would never feel the oppression which the gigantic nation debt under other circumstances would impose. A peace with a divided Union involves national bankruptcy and domestic ruin. Peace with an undivided Union, renders certain a national prosperity and power, such as the world has rarely witnessed.

An Incident of the Battle of Chickamauga.

In B. F. TAYLOR'S correspondence of the Chicago Journal, we find the following incident of the battle:

One of the boys ran down to a little spring and toward where the enemy lay, for water. He had just stopped and swung his canteen, when tick—a rifle ball struck it at an angle and bounded away. He looked around an instant, and thought it was a chance shot—a piece of lead, you know, that goes at a killing rate without any malice prepense—and so, nowise infirm of purpose, he again bent to get water. Ping—a second bullet cut the cord of his canteen, and the boy "got the idea";, a sharpshooter was after him, and he went to the right about and double-quick to the ranks. A soldier from another part of the line made a pilgrimage to the spring, was struck, and fell by its brink. But where was the marksman? Two or three boys ran out, to draw his fire, while others watched. Crack went the peice again, and some keen-eyed fellow spied a puff of smoke rolling out from a little cedar, That was the spot, then; the rebel had made him a hawks nest—in choice Indian, a Chattanoya, in the tree, and drawing the green covert close around him, was taking a quiet hand at "steeple shooting" at long range.

A big, blue eyed German, tall enough to look over into the third generation, and a sharpshooter withal, volunteered to dislodge him, Dropping into a little run-away, that neared the tree diagonally, he, turned upon his back and worked himself cautiously along; reaching a point perilously close, he whipped over, took aim as he lay, and God and his true right hand "gave him good deliverance." Away flew the bullet; an instant elapsed, the volume of the cedar parted and like a big frog," as the boys described it, out leaped a gray-back; the hawk's nest was empty; and a dead rebel lay under the tree. It was neatly done of the German man grown. May he live to tell the story a thousand times to his moonfaced grandchildren.

A YANKEE TRICK.—Just before the Declaration of Independence, a Yankee peddler started down to New York to sell a lot of bowls and dishes he had made of maple. Jonathan traveled over the city asking everybody to buy, but no one was disposed to purchase.

It happened that a British fleet was then lying in the harbor of New York, and Jonathan struck upon a plan of selling his wares. He got a naval uniform, by hook or by crook, (for his story doesn't tell where he got it,) and starting up town one morning asked a merchant if he had any nice wooden ware, as the commodore wanted a lot for the fleet.

The merchant replied that he had none on hand, but that there was some in town, and if he would send in the afternoon he would supply him with pleasure.

"Very good," said our naval officer, "I will call."

Johnathan now cut for home, by the shortest route, and he had scarcely doffed his borrowed plumage before down came the merchant, who seeing that Johnathan had sold none of his wares, offered to take the whole if he would deduct fifteen per cent, but Johnathan said he'd be gol darned if he didn't take' em home, before he'd take a cent less than the first price.

The merchant finally paid him down in gold the price for the wooden ware, which the naval officer never called for according to contract to take off his hands.

When JAMES T. BRADY first opened a lawyers office, he took a basement room which had been previously occupied by a cobbler. He was somewhat annoyed by the previous occupant's callers and irritated by the fact that he had few of his own. One day an Irishman entered. "The cobbler's gone, I see," he said. "I should think he had," responded Brady. "And what do ye sell?" he asked looking at the solitary table and a few law books. "Blockheads," responded Brady. "Begorra," resaid the Irishman, "ye must be doing a mighty fine business—ye have but one left.

A MISSISSIPPI JUDGE.—During the summer of 1833, a landlord was bro't before Judge Hawkins (who sat on a decayed stump in front of the hotel) on charge of selling liquor in quantities less than a gallon, being contrary to the law of the State. the process was commenced:

"Prisoner, are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty," the landlord replied.

"Prisoner," exclaimed the Judge, "you know that's a lie! I have drank in your house more than twenty times a day myself."

THE WILL AND THE WAY.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

The conversation had turned on the pleasure of doing good, and a certain rich man's benevolent acts were spoken of with praise. It was told of him how he visited the hospitals, how he went among the poor; how he moved actively in the midst of various humane enterprises—always giving of his abundance with a liberal hand.

'It is easy enough for him to do good,' said Mr. Ellendorf. A fine ear would have detected something like envy. 'If I had his means—'

Mr. Ellendorf did not finish the sentence.

'I am quite sure,' remarked one of the company, 'that if I had his means, I would not use them as well he does. The fact is,' he continued, 'I have sometimes thought, in pondering these things, that God gives to every man the fullest measure of means for good he is willing to use.'

'Doubted,' answered Mr. Ellendorf. 'For instance, a friend really in need of help, called on me yesterday and stated his case. It was a very hard one, and all my sympathies were touched. If I had been rich, he should have passed out through my door with a light heart, instead of the heavy one he bore away; my will was great, but, alas! my coffers were empty. Poverty denied me the luxury of benevolence.'

'The good you purposed might have been harm in the act. If it had been best for you to give and for him to receive the means would have been in your hands.'

'You may be right in that,' said Mr. Ellendorf.

'My faith in Providence goes just so far. If this Providence comes down to the minutest things of our life, will it fail in those of larger importance? I think not. Take it for

There are higher things to be done than feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, and visiting those who are sick and in prison. Nay, more; there is a hunger, a nakedness, a sickness, and an imprisonment of the soul that money, or external appliances, can reach. It is not large gifts, or riches, that we need for the work of humanity: but the unselfish purpose and the willing heart.'

Mr. Ellendorf felt rebuked by the closing sentence, and said no more on the subject. The coversation around him took a new direction, but he kept silent, pondering with himself the question of will and way. He was, in the main, a kind-hearted man, with religious sentiments; and had made some efforts to bring his life into conformity with his understanding of the Divine law. When he saw the right clearly he tried to do the right.

'The unselfish purpose and the willing heart.' This sentence made an impression. It seemd like a rebuke at first, and hurt him. But when alone, and in a calmer frame of mind, he looked down into his heart, and tried to understand something about his real state.

In the evening, Mr. Ellendorf sat alone with his wife. She was sewing and he reading to himself.

'John,' said Mrs Ellendorf, looking up from her work There was a slight hesitation in her manner, as if she were not sure that what she was about saying would be well received.

'What is it, Helen?' inquired Mr. Elendorf, seeing that his wife hesitated.

'Mrs. Mansfield was here this afternoon.'

'Was she?' His tone was indifferent. There was a slight closing of the brows.

'I didn't promise her that you wo'd call round an see her.'

'It's well you didn't.'

'And yet, John, you might be of great use to her. There's something on her mind and it's worrying her.'

'Did she say what it was?'

'No.'

The book in Mr. Elendorf's hand was interesting. He had on his dressing gown and slippers. He felt at ease and comfortable. 'The unselfish purpose and the willing heart.' Memory restored this sentence to his thought, and with it came back the conversation in which he had taken a part some hours before. Mr. Ellendorf did not feel at ease with himself.

'Did Mrs. Mansfield say that she would like to see me?' he asked.

'Not out and out in so many words; but she seems troubled and perplexed in her mind, and said once or twice, that if you had been at home, she would have been glad to have asked you some question.'

'About what?'

'I can only guess.'

'What is your guess?'

'She is still young and attractive, and has some property.'

'Oh! You think there is a lover in the question.'

'Possible.'

'Then I shall stand aloof.'

'Not so, John. It is just possible that you may have some facts about this lover of the highest importance for her to know. A word from your lips may save her from a life of misery. I know she wants to see you, and that there is some trouble and perplexity on her mind. She has

'I do.'

'How long have you known him?'

'For a Dozen years.'

'Ah! so long?'

'Yes.'

A slight pause. Then Mrs. M. resumed:

'Have you ever had business with him?'

'O, Yes.'

'Did you always find him fair and honorable?'

'No.'

A deep crimson stained the face of Mrs. M. She turned a little aside for concealment.

'Not honorable!' There was an expression of painful surprise in her voice.

'Neither fair nor honorable, Mrs. Mansfield. He is a smooth, specious, insinuating person, but void of principle. I know him well.

A cold palor succeeded to the crimson on Mrs. Mansfield's countenance.

'If you feel any interest in this man,' said Mr. Ellendorf, speaking strongly, 'I beg of you to let it die at once. He is of mean quality, and corrupt as well as mean.'

'I know you too well,' replied Mrs. M., 'to doubt the truth of your testimony. O, what a providence there is for me in your coming to night!—I must be frank with you, for you have not failed to see that I am interested in Mr. Granger He has been visiting me almost every evening for some time. A few days ago he offered himself in marriage, and to night he is to have my final answer. I was in considerable doubt. Something about him did not satisfy me. Still I had no evidence against him, and my heart was in his favor.—There! that is his ring. What shall I do?'

Let your servant tell him that he must excuse you this evening. Don't see him on any account. He's a bad man; and you shall have, if you desire it, a cloud of witnesses to the fact.'

The servant was already moving along the hall. Mrs. M had no time for deliberation: so she acted. Going to the parlor door, she said:

'If that is Mr. Granger, tell him that I say he must excuse me this evening.'

The servant went to the street door. Mrs. M. stood on tip toe and breathless. It was Mr. Granger. She heard him pronounce his name, and heard the servant reply.

'O no, you are mistaken!' answered Mr. Granger, moving past the servant into the hall.

'No, sir,' returned the servant, 'I give you her message correctly.'

'Is she sick?'

'I believe not,' said the servant.

'Then I must see her. Go up and say that I am in the parlor; and that I cannot think you heard her aright.'

'She reported me correctly,' said Mrs. Mansfield, stepping out into the hall, and confronting him with a pale, calm face. You will excuse me to-night.'

'But, Mrs. Mansfield, I——'

'You will excuse me to-night, sir!' Eyes and voice put on an expression of sternness. 'Good evening.'

But Mr. Granger did not stir.

'There's something wrong here, Mrs. Mansfield. Has any one——'

He stopped suddenly, with a blank look, as Mr. Ellendorf came out of the parlor, and stood by the side of a thousand avennes to benevolence peculiarly its own; but the lack of it cannot shut the thousand other avenues that remain open, nor save us from the guilt of neglected opportunities.'

Mr. Ellendorf was right. It is the 'willing heart, the unselfish purpose, and the ready hand' that we need.—Having these, whether we be rich or poor, humble or exalted, God will not fail to give us abundant opportunity.

The President's Call for Volunteers. The Duty of Young Men.

The question whether the President's call for volunteers shall be met within the period to which it is limited, depends mainly upon the public spirit of the young men. They are the class from which alone serviceable soldiers can be obtained. "Young men for war" is the accepted maxim in all nations. Their physical vigor and endurance, their elasticity and dash, particularly fit them for the field. The loyal States are very powerful in this class of population. Notwithstanding all the drain that has been made upon them, they still contain over two million of men between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five. A sixth part of this number, properly armed, drilled and disciplined, and incorporated with our armies already in the field, might sweep off all that remains of this rebellion before next summer. There never was a more sacred call. Every young man who has a spark of manhood in his breast ought to give heed to it. The country has a right to the service of its stoutest arms without compelling that service, and it is far more honorable to go to the field as a volunteer than as a conscript. Many of the exemptions which the present law of Congress grants, particularly the three hundred dollar commutation, will probably be repealed before the drafting process is again applied; and there will be hereafter comparativly few chances of escaping the consequences of the lot when it is once drawn. The Government is determined to have the personal services of just so many men as it requires—voluntarily if it can, compulsorily if it must. It is not so much a question to the young men whehter they shall go, as how they shall go, by choice or by coercion.

Never has there been in the history of this country, and never probably will there be again, such another opportunity for young men who desire such a noble career. War is the most stirring of all human doings—the sphere of action which calls out the greatest energies of our nature. In it real superiority tells the quickest and the surest. In civil life mere circumstances has a great deal to do in shaping a young man's destiny. If in business, no diligence or prudence can secure him from the complication of the commercial world. If in a profession, his speedy advancement depends greatly upon fortunate connections and other incidents. Agriculture and the mechanic arts, however respectable in themselves, can hardly satisfy him who aspires to distinction. Politics, in these days of political degeneracy, present little inducement to the young man who relies upon his manhood; that chicanery would thwart him. But war, in its stern necessities, brings the

Not only military distinction are to be won in the service to which the country now calls, but the best chances for future civil preferment. There is no country in the world in which military gallantry is more honored than in this; and he who has once proved himself true and faithful to the flag of the Republic, in the storm of battle, has a passport to the popular confidence that nothing else can give. It is certain that for the present generation the great majority of our officers of trust, from the Presidency down, will be filled by men who have periled their lives for the Stars and Stripes. The people will devolve their trusts upon the tried soldiers, both because they will love to honor them, and because they are thoroughly tired of professional politicians. No sordid, corrupt, faithless nature can belong to a true soldier, and the people instinctively feel it.

Every young man, who seeks an honorable future, who cares to figure in the grandest drama of the century, who has spirit enough to feel that.

"One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without aname,"

who has soul enough to realize how sacred a thing is patriotism, should hasten to the help of his country in this its last decisive grapple with the monster treason, now as never before desperate. Duty and glory alike urge it.

Every effort should be made to meet the President's call by voluntary enlistment, and not by the other alternative of drafting. Public opinion should hold every State and county of the North strictly to its duty. It should be deemed a positive dishonor to any locality not to furnish its fair quota of men—a reproach analogous to that which would come from actual disloyalty itself. In times like these professions are of slight account, unless backed up by substantial acts. Every citizen everywhere, who has the slightest influence, owes that influence now to his country, and he may be sure that he can exert it in no more effective shape than in stimulating young men to respond to the call of the country for more soldiers.—New York Times, Nov. 12.

The National Debt.

The actual amount of the public debt is one of those things of which the people have no very accurate information, and what is more singular, it is one of those things about which the people do not seem to have the slightest care. Since about the first day of June last, the agents of the government have been engaged in receiving subscriptions to the stock known as the "five twenty" bonds, at the rate of a million and a half of dollars a day. As about one hundred and fifty days have elapsed since then, there has been taken up of the floating debt of the nation over two hundred millions of dollars, which amount has become part of the funded debt of the government. Until recently the entire debt created by the war has been held by our own people, who to all appearances are capable of taking double the sum without any very great inconvenience. During the last thirty days however, there has been a steady increase of purchases of these five-twenty bonds for European capitalists, and we have no doubt that in a very short time, unless some new unex-

An Incident of the Battle of Chickamauga.

In B. F. TAYLOR's correspondence of the Chicago Journal, we find the following incident of the battle:

One of the boys ran down to a little spring and toward where the enemy lay, for water. He had just stopped and swung his canteen, when tick—a rifle ball struck it at an angle and bounded away. He looked around an instant, and thought it was a chance shot—a piece of lead, you know, that goes at a killing rate without any malice prepense—and so, nowise infirm of purpose, he again bent to get water. Ping—a second bullet cut the cord of his canteen, and the boy "got the idea;" a sharpshooter was after him, and he went to the right about and double-quick to the ranks. A soldier from another part of the line made a pilgrimage to the spring, was struck, and fell by its brink. But where was the marksman? Two or three boys ran out, to draw his fire, while others watched. Crack went the peice again, and some keen-eyed fellow spied a puff of smoke rolling out from a little cedar, That was the spot, then; the rebel had made him a hawks nest—in choice Indian, a Chattanoga, in the tree, and drawing the green covert close around him, was taking a quiet hand at "steeple shooting" at long range.

A big, blue eyed German, tall enough to look over into the third generation, and a sharpshooter withal, volunteered to dislodge him, Dropping into a little run-away, that neared the tree diagonally, he, turned upon his back and worked himself cautiously along; reaching a point perilously close, he whipped over, took aim as he lay, and God and his true right hand "gave him good deliverance." Away flew the bullet; an instant elapsed, the volume of the cedar parted and like a big frog," as the boys described it, out leaped a gray-back: the hawk's nest was empty; and a dead rebel lay under the tree. It was neatly done of the German man grown. May he live to tell the story a thousand times to his moonfaced grandchildren.

A YANKEE TRICK.—Just before the Declaration of Independence, a Yankee peddler started down to New York to sell a lot of bowls and dishes he had made of maple. Jonathan traveled over the city asking everybody to buy his wares, but no one was disposed to purchase.

It happened that a British fleet was then lying in the harbor of New York, and Jonathan struck upon a plan of selling his wares. He got a naval uniform, by hook or by crook, (for his story doesn't tell where he got it,) and starting up town one morning asked a merchant if he had any nice wooden ware, as the commodore wanted a lot for the fleet.

The merchant replied that he had none on hand, but that there was some in town, and if he would send in the afternoon he would supply him with pleasure.

"Very good," said our naval officer, "I will call."

Johnathan now cut for home, by the shortest route, and he had scarcely doffed his borrowed plumage before down came the merchant, who seeing that Johnathan had sold none of his wares, offered to take the whole if he would deduct fifteen per cent, but Johnathan said he'd be gol darned if he didn't take 'em home, before he'd take a cent less than the first price.

The merchant finally paid him down in gold the price for the wooden ware, which the naval officer never called for according to contract to take off his hands.

When James T. Brady first opened a lawyers office, he took a basement room which had been previously occupied by a cobbler. He was somewhat annoyed by the previous occupant's callers and irritated by the fact that he had few of his own. One day an Irishman entered. "The cobbler's gone, I see," he said. "I should think he had," responded Brady. "And what do ye sell?" he asked looking at the solitary table and a few law books. "Blockheads," responded Brady. "Begorra," resaid the Irishman, "ye must be doing a mighty fine business—ye have but one left.

A MISSISSIPPI JUDGE.—During the summer of 1838, a landlord was bro't before Judge Hawkins (who sat on a decayed stump in front of the hotel) on charge of selling liquor in quantities less than a gallon, being contrary to the law of the State. the process was commenced:

"Prisoner, are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty," the landlord replied.

"Prisoner," exclaimed the Judge, "you know that's a lie! I have drank in your house more than twenty times a day myself."

Why is a joiner less handsome than his wife? Kase he is a great deal-plainer.

Did the horsemen that scoured the plains, use soap?

'My faith in Providence goes just so far. If this Providence comes down to the minutest things of our life, will it fail in those of larger importance? I think not. Take it for granted, then, that in letting your friend go from you in disappointment through inability to grant the aid desired, a higher service was wrought for him than if you had helped him to thousands of dollars. When he left your door, God's providences were still around him. All was not lost because you failed.'

'No, I trust not,' answered Mr. Ellendorf with a sigh. 'But,' he resumed, in a desponding voice, 'what an impediment is poverty! You are limited in every way. Hunger stares you in the face, and you have no granary from which to dispense food. The widow and the orphan cry to you in vain. The poor turn unrelieved from your threshold.'

'But still they are in God's hands and of more value than many sparrows. Their names are written in His book. He knows all their griefs. His compassion fail not.'

'It is all right I suppose,' said Mr. Ellendorf, trying to rally himself and put on a more cheerful aspect.

'All right, so far as you and I are concerned if we simply do good with the means at our command as God gives the opportunity.'

'I have no means at command,' replied Mr. Ellendorf. 'You know I am circumvented in every way. Poor health and a large family! What can I do for the common good?'

'A word is often better than a coin.'

'Yes, I know. But, after you have refused the coin, the word will avail but little.'

'Possibly it may then avail most. The right thought in time of trouble is sometimes better than present relief. Our best service to mankind is not in the bestowal of money—not in ministration to bodily needs. There are higher things to be done than feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, and visiting those who are sick and in prison. Nay, more; there is a hunger, a nakedness, a sickness, and an imprisonment of the soul that money, or external appliances, can reach. It is not large gifts, or riches, that we need for the work of humanity: but the unselfish purpose and the willing heart.'

Mr. Ellendorf felt rebuked by the closing sentence, and said no more on the subject. The coversation around him took a new direction, but he kept silent, pondering with himself the question of will and way. He was, in the main, a kind hearted man, with religione sentiments; and had made some efforts to bring his life into conformity with his understanding of the Divine law. When he saw the right clearly he tried to do the right.

'The unselfish purpose and the willing heart.' This sentence made an impression. It seemd like a rebuke at first, and hurt him. But when alone, and in a calmer frame of mind, he looked down into his heart, and tried to understand something about his real state.

In the evening, Mr. Ellendorf sat alone with his wife. She was sewing and he reading to himself.

'John,' said Mrs Ellendorf, looking up from her work There was a slight hesitation in her manner, as if she were not sure that what she was about saying would be well received.

'What is it, Helen?' inquired Mr. Elendorf, seeing that his wife hesitated.

'Mrs. Mansfield was here this afternoon.'

'Was she?' His tone was indifferent. There was a slight closing of the brows.

'I didn't promise her that you wo'd call round an see her.'

'It's well you didn't.'

'And yet, John, you might be of great use to her. There's something on her mind and it's worrying her.'

'Did she say what it was?'

'No.'

The book in Mr. Elendorf's hand was interesting. He had on his dressing gown and slippers. He felt at ease and comfortable. 'The unselfish purpose and the willing heart.' Memory restored this sentence to his thought, and with it came back the conversation in which he had taken a part some hours before. Mr. Ellendorf did not feel at ease with himself.

'Did Mrs. Mansfield say that she would like to see me?' he asked.

'Not out and out in so many words; but she seems troubled and perplexed in her mind, and said once or twice, that if you had been at home, she would have been glad to have asked you some questions.'

'About what?'

'I can only guess.'

'What is your guess?'

'She is still young and attractive, and has some property.'

'Oh! You think there is a lover in the question.'

'Possible.'

'Then I shall stand aloof.'

'Not so, John. It is just possible that you may have some facts about this lover of the highest importance for her to know. A word from your lips may save her from a life of misery. I know she wants to see you, and that there is some trouble and perplexity on her mind. She has great confidence in your judgment.—We should do good as we have opportunity, John,—and here is an opportunity.'

'The unselfish purpose and the willing heart.' How clearly memory held this sentence!

The pressure on Mr. Elendorf was too great. Inward sense of duty and outward influence moved him to act. The pleasant book and comfortable dressing gown were laid aside, and he went forth to serve another and not himself.

'Mr. Ellendorf!' There was a surprise, pleasure, relief of mind, hope —all blended in the tone that pronounced his name, and all reflected in Mrs. Mansfield's warmly grasping his hand.

'Helen thought you would like to see me,' said Mr. Ellendorf, as he still held Mrs. Mansfield's hand.

'O, you are kind! Yes, I have wanted to see you very much. Sit down.

Mrs. Mansfield became a little embarrassed.

'If I can serve you in anything, speak freely,' said Mr. Elendorf.

Evidently, Mrs. Mansfield had to struggle with herself. The visit was a surprise. She had not expected, knowing Mr. Elendorf's habits, that he would take the trouble, after getting home in the evening, to come around and see her.

'I think you can serve me,' she replied.

'In what way?'

Some moments passed. Mrs. M. was evidently scanning the terms of the question she wished to ask. 'Simplest, best,' she said, in her thought, and then put the querry.

'Do you know Mr. Granger?'

'Henry Granger?'

'Yes.'

'I do.'

'How long have you known him?'

'For a Dozen years.'

'Ah! so long?'

'Yes.'

A slight pause. Then Mrs. M. resumed:

'Have you ever had business with him?'

'O, Yes.'

'Did you always find him fair and honorable?'

'No.'

A deep crimson stained the face of Mrs. M. She turned a little aside for concealment.

'Not honorable!' There was an expression of painful surprise in her voice.

'Neither fair nor honorable, Mrs. Mansfield. He is a smooth, specious, insinuating person, but void of principle. I know him well.

A cold palor succeeded to the crimson on Mrs. Mansfield's countenance.

'If you feel any interest in this man,' said Mr. Ellendorf, speaking strongly, 'I beg of you to let it die at once. He is of mean quality, and corrupt as well as mean.'

'I know you too well,' replied Mrs. M., 'to doubt the truth of your testimony. O, what a providence there is for me in your coming to night!—I must be frank with you, for you have not failed to see that I am interested in Mr. Granger He has been visiting me almost every evening for some time. A few days ago he offered himself in marriage, and to night he is to have my final answer. I was in considerable doubt. Something about him did not satisfy me. Still I had no evidence against him, and my heart was in his favor.—There! that is his ring. What shall I do?'

Let your servant tell him that he must excuse you this evening. Don't see him on any account. He's a bad man; and you shall have, if you desire it, a cloud of witnesses to the fact.'

The servant was already moving along the hall. Mrs. M had no time for deliberation; so she acted. Going to the parlor door, she said:

'If that is Mr. Granger, tell him that I say he must excuse me this evening.'

The servant went to the street door. Mrs. M. stood on tip toe and breathless. It was Mr. Granger. She heard him pronounce her name, and heard the servant reply.

'O no, you are mistaken!' answered Mr. Granger, moving past the servant into the hall.

'No, sir,' returned the servant, 'I give you her message correctly.'

'Is she sick?'

'I believe not,' said the servant.

'Then I must see her. Go up and say that I am in the parlor; and that I cannot think you heard her aright.'

'She reported me correctly,' said Mrs, Mansfield, stepping out into the hall, and confronting him with a pale, calm face. You will excuse me to-night.

'But, Mrs. Mansfield, I——'

'You will excuse me to-night, sir!' Eyes and voice put on an expression of sternness. 'Good evening.'

But Mr. Granger did not stir.

There's something wrong here, Mrs. Mansfield. Has any one——'

He stopped suddenly, with a blank look, as Mr. Ellendorf came out of the parlor, and stood by the side of Mrs. Mansfield. His whole manner was changed. There was a mean guiltiness of expression about his face and attitude as of one caught in a theft.

'Good evening,' he said, and vanished through the vestibule door without giving Mr. Ellendorf even a shadow of recognition.

Mrs. Mansfield went back to the sofa, from which she had arisen but a few moments before, weak and trembling.

'Your timely coming has saved me, I think, from a life of wretchedness. I saw that man's character in his face just now. How strange that he could have so hidden it from my eyes before! O, my friend! how shall I ever repay the service of to-night?'

'For the little I have done, I am already repaid a hundred fold, Mrs. Mansfield. The effort on my part was slight, but the good result beyond calculation. If you had accepted that man's offer, your happiness would have been destroyed. To know that I have saved you from such imminent peril, will be a life-long satisfaction.'

As Mr. Ellendorf walked homeward that night, he thought thus with himself:

'How near I came to passing this golden opportunity which God has set in my way! Of all her friends, I alone could serve her in this her sorest need, and yet I came well-nigh failing her from indifference and a love of ease—I who, but a few hours before, was complaining that my hands were bound so that I could not help the needy nor minister to the suffering. The willing heart, the unselfish purpose, and the ready hand—if these exist, doubtless they will receive the fullest employment, How clear this seems to me now. Wealth has a thousand avenues to benevolence peculiarly its own; but the lack of it cannot shut the thousand other avenues that remain open, nor save us from the guilt of neglected opportunities.'

Mr. Ellendorf was right. It is the 'willing heart, the unselfish purpose, and the ready hand' that we need.—Having these, whether we be rich or poor, humble or exalted, God will not fail to give us abundant opportunity.

The President's Call for Volunteers. The Duty of Young Men.

The question whether the President's call for volunteers shall be met within the period to which it is limited, depends mainly upon the public spirit of the young men. They are the class from which alone serviceable soldiers can be obtained. "Young men for war" is the accepted maxim in all nations. Their physical vigor and endurance, their elasticity and dash, particularly fit them for the field. The loyal States are very powerful in this class of population. Notwithstanding all the drain that has been made upon them, they still contain over two million of men between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five. A sixth part of this number, properly armed, drilled and disciplined, and incorporated with our armies already in the field, might sweep off all that remains of this rebellion before next summer. There never was a more sacred call. Every young man who has a spark of manhood in his breast ought to give heed to it. The country has a right to the service of its stoutest arms without compelling that service, and it is far more honorable to go to the field as a volunteer than as a conscript. Many of the exemptions which the present law of Congress grants, particularly the three hundred dollar commutation, will probably be repealed before the drafting process is again applied; and there will be hereafter comparativly few chances of escaping the consequences of the lot when it is once drawn. The Government is determined to have the personal services of just so many men as it requires—voluntarily if it can, compulsorily if it must. It is not so much a question to the young men whehter they shall go, as how they shall go, by choice or by coercion.

Never has there been in the history of this country, and never probably will there be again, such another opportunity for young men who desire such a noble career. War is the most stirring of all human doings—the sphere of action which calls out the greatest energies of our nature. In it real superiority tells the quickest and the surest. In civil life mere circumstances has a great deal to do in shaping a young man's destiny. If in business, no diligence or prudence can secure him from the common vicissitudes of the commercial world. If in a profession, his speedy advancement depends greatly upon fortunate connections and other influences quite independent of his real merits. Agriculture and the mechanic arts, however respectable in themselves, can hardly satisfy him who aspires to distinction. Politics, in these days of political degeneracy, present little inducement to the young man who relies upon his manhood; the chances are ten to one that chicanery would thwart him. But war, in its stern necessities, brings the young man surely to the fairest tests; and when it is once proved that he has the true steel in him, there is no rank which he may not hope to reach. It is a matter of comparatively small consequence where he begins. No young private, however friendless or unknown, can exhibit a superior intelligence and promptness in the camp or superior gallantry in the field, without attracting the notice of his superiors. Promotion is sure to come to him, because it is of vital interest to the entire army that it should be officered as efficiently as possible. He will not have to wait long, inasmuch as vacancies are constantly occuring both from the casualities of battle and from the forced resignation of those whose unfitness has been proved. From the day he puts his foot into the ranks, the road to honor opens before him, broad and high; it is for him alone to fix his mark. Many of our best Colonels and even Generals began their career as privates. The places thus won are far more valuable than any obtained by personal favor. We have known of many young men who failed to go into the service simply because they failed to get the commission they applied for. The military spirit—saying nothing of the patriotic—that can thus be dashed must be of a very poor sort. The very fact that these young men have been thus influenced to stay at home is pretty good proof that they deserve to be disappointed. The man of real soldierly qualities would be kept back for no such reasons. Every fiber in him would be stimulated to make good his claim to what he has asked, and crave his way to a commission with his own good sword. So long as the ranks are open to him he need rely upon no favors.

Not only military distinction are to be won in the service to which the country now calls, but the best chances for future civil preferment. There is no country in the world in which military gallantry is more honored than in this; and he who has once proved himself true and faithful to the flag of the Republic, in the storm of battle, has a passport to the popular confidence that nothing else can give. It is certain that for the present generation the great majority of our officers of trust, from the Presidency down, will be filled by men who have periled their lives for the Stars and Stripes. The people will devolve their trusts upon the tried soldiers, both because they will love to honor them, and because they are thoroughly tired of professional politicians. No sordid, corrupt, faithless nature can belong to a true soldier, and the people instinctively feel it.

Every young man, who seeks an honorable future, who cares to figure in the grandest drama of the century, who has spirit enough to feel that.

"One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name,"

who has soul enough to realize how sacred a thing is patriotism, should hasten to the help of his country in this its last decisive grapple with the monster treason, now as never before desperate. Duty and glory alike urge it.

Every effort should be made to meet the President's call by voluntary enlistment, and not by the other alternative of drafting. Public opinion should hold every State and county of the North strictly to its duty. It should be deemed a positive dishonor to any locality not to furnish its fair quota of men—a reproach analogous to that which would come from actual disloyalty itself. In times like these professions are of slight account, unless backed up by substantial acts. Every citizen everywhere, who has the slightest influence, owes that influence now to his country, and he may be sure that he can exert it in no more effective shape than in stimulating young men to respond to the call of the country for more soldiers.—New York Times, Nov. 12.

The National Debt.

The actual amount of the public debt is one of those things of which the people have no very accurate information, and what is more singular, it is one of those things about which the people do not seem to have the slightest care. Since about the first day of June last, the agents of the government have been engaged in receiving subscriptions to the stock known as the "five twenty" bonds, at the rate of a million and a half of dollars a day. As about one hundred and fifty days have elapsed since then, there has been taken up of the floating debt of the nation over two hundred millions of dollars, which amount has become part of the funded debt of the government. Until recently the entire debt created by the war has been held by our own people, who to all appearances are capable of taking double the sum without any very great inconvenience. During the last thirty days however, there has been a steady increase of purchases of these five-twenty bonds for European capitalits, and we have no doubt that in a very short time, unless some new unexpected reverses shall take place, the whole unfunded debt of the government will be taken by purchasers of these bonds, and that a very large portion of these securities will be held by parties abroad. For the first time during the war, a portion of American securities are finding their way to Europe, and to that extent are relieving the home capital of the country. Europe by this time is satisfied that a people who can carry on an immense civil war without the aid of a dollar of foreign money, and who are prospering in all the branches of industry as they never prospered before, have within them the elements of stability and responsibility, before which even the immense national debt falls into insignificance. There is hardly an individual of any party who will not admit that peace with an unbroken Union would find the financial credit of the national government higher in the estimation of the world than it has ever been before; and that the people, under the renewed impulse that commerce and all branches of active industry would receive, would never feel the oppression which the gigantic nation debt under other circumstances would impose. A peace with a divided Union involves national bankruptcy and domestic ruin. Peace with an undivided Union, renders certain a national prosperity and power, such as the world has rarely witnessed.

An Incident of the Battle of Chickamauga.

In B. F. TAYLOR'S correspondence of the Chicago Journal, we find the following incident of the battle:

One of the boys ran down to a little spring and toward where the enemy lay, for water. He had just stopped and swung his canteen, when tick—a rifle ball struck it at an angle and bounded away. He looked around an instant, and thought it was a chance shot—a piece of lead, you know, that goes at a killing rate without any malice prepense—and so, nowise infirm of purpose, he again bent to get water. Ping—a second bullet cut the cord of his canteen, and the boy "got the idea;" a sharpshooter was after him, and he went to the right about and double-quick to the ranks. A soldier from another part of the line made a pilgrimage to the spring, was struck, and fell by its brink. But where was the marksman? Two or three boys ran out, to draw his fire, while others watched. Crack went the peice again, and some keen-eyed fellow spied a puff of smoke rolling out from a little cedar, That was the spot, then; the rebel had made him a hawks nest—in choice Indian, a Chattanooga, in the tree, and drawing the green covert close around him, was taking a quiet hand at "steeple shooting" at long range.

A big, blue eyed German, tall enough to look over into the third generation, and a sharpshooter withal, volunteered to dislodge him, Dropping into a little run-away, that neared the tree diagonally, he, turned upon his back and worked himself cautiously along; reaching a point perilously close, he whipped over, took aim as he lay, and God and his true right hand "gave him good deliverance." Away flew the bullet; an instant elapsed, the volume of the cedar parted and like a big frog," as the boys described it, out leaped a gray-back; the hawk's nest was empty; and a dead rebel lay under the tree. It was neatly done of the German man grown. May he live to tell the story a thousand times to his moonfaced grandchildren.

A YANKEE TRICK.—Just before the Declaration of Independence, a Yankee peddler started down to New York to sell a lot of bowls and dishes he had made of maple. Jonathan traveled over the city asking everybody to buy his wares, but no one was disposed to purchase.

It happened that a British fleet was then lying in the harbor of New York, and Jonathan struck upon a plan of selling his wares. He got a naval uniform, by hook or by crook, (for his story doesn't tell where he got it,) and starting up town one morning asked a merchant if he had any nice wooden ware, as the commodore wanted a lot for the fleet.

The merchant replied that he had none on hand, but that there was some in town, and if he would send in the afternoon he would supply him with pleasure.

"Very good," said our naval officer, "I will call."

Johnathan now cut for home, by the shortest route, and he had scarcely doffed his borrowed plumage before down came the merchant, who seeing that Johnathan had sold none of his wares, offered to take the whole if he would deduct fifteen per cent, but Johnathan said he'd be gol darned if he didn't take' em home, before he'd take a cent less than the first price.

The merchant finally paid him down in gold the price for the wooden ware, which the naval officer never called for according to contract to take off his hands.

When James T. Brady first opened a lawyers office, he took a basement room which had been previously occupied by a cobbler. He was somewhat annoyed by the previous occupant's callers and irritated by the fact that he had few of his own. One day an Irishman entered. "The cobbler's gone, I see," he said. "I should think he had," responded Brady. "And what do ye sell?" he asked looking at the solitary table and a few law books. "Blockheads," responded Brady. "Begorra," resaid the Irishman, "ye must be doing a mighty fine business—ye have but one left.

A MISSISSIPPI JUDGE.—During the summer of 1838, a landlord was bro't before Judge Hawkins (who sat on a decayed stump in front of the hotel) on charge of selling liquor in quantities less than a gallon, being contrary to the law of the State. the process was commenced:

"Prisoner, are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty," the landlord replied.

"Prisoner," exclaimed the Judge, "you know that's a lie! I have drank in your house more than twenty times a day myself."

Among the victims of the late draft in this city was Sam, a graceful mentioned contraband who was given leave to leave the South last spring and become a free man "Norf!" Early in the spring he did chores at the Harington House. Later in the season he hoed gardens, got married and blacked stoves till they rivalled the gloss on his cheeks. Monday he was drafted, and Tuesday was served with a notice to be at the rendezvous within ten days along with his white bretherin, or be considered a deserter. He took the notice to a friend who read it and made him understand the nature thereof. And this is the way he took on:

"Wat—wat—wat d—d foolish ting am dis yeah? Ise a free man! Las spring dey send me up Norf and te'l me Ise a free man—dat de Linkum sojers had lib'rate me. Now wat am dis d—d foolish ting for? A friend of ours, from the Emerald Isle, tells the following good story about himself.

When but an idle boy, he was called up in a country school and the question suddenly propounded by the pedagogue: "Patrick, how many Gods are there?" Pat was not a distinguished theologian then, and years had made him no better very fast in such matters, but he promptly responded: Three sir!" Take your seat!" thundered the master, "and if in five minutes you don't answer correctly I'll welt you." The probationary period passed, and Pat taking the floor hesitatingly, stated the number of Gods at "five sir." He received the promised welting, sent to his seat and given ten minutes for consideration. The ten minutes was up, Pat was too, and shouted "There's ten, sir." He saw the ferule descending, and bolting out of the door, he cleared a five rail fence, and broke like a quarter horse across the field. Panting with exertion, he met a lad with a book under his arm, and with a look of one deserving the pursuit of knowledge under dificulties Where are you going?" asked Pat. "To school yonder." was the reply. "You are aye!" said Pat, quietly. "How many Gods are there?" One," answered the boy. "Well, you'd better not go down there. You'll have a hard time with your one God. I've just left there with ten, and that wasn't enough to save me from the darndest licking you ever heard of.

The Draft--Will it Come?

The President has, by proclamation, called for three hundred thousand more men to serve for a term not exceeding three years. Under this call Minnesota will be required to furnish, at least, three thousand men. In addition to this, we have, under the other call 1,207 making in all 4,207 men from this State. And the President assures us that "if this quota is not raised before the 5th of January next, the draft shall take place on that day."

We notice that vigerous efforts are being made in Winona and other counties to raise their quotas. And as the next draft will be made by towns—giving to each town full credit for all volunteers up to January 1st, they will, no doubt, succeed in their efforts.

If Blue Earth County desires exemption from the draft, the people have got to take hold of this matter in earnest, and do some hard work. The blow will fall heavily upon us, but the men must be forthcoming. The present opportunity, when such munificent bounties are offered .should not be lost.

Every able bodied man that can, should arrange his business, and enlist, without delay. Remember, the only question with you is whether you go willingly in a new regiment, in company with your acquaintances and friends, in a service for the protection of your wives and children, or go because you cannot avoid going, in one of the old regiments.

There is a vast difference between soldiering in Minnesota, with a good horse to ride, and a healthy climate, and frequent visits home, and trudging along through Virginia mud, carrying a heavy pack amid jeers at the "conscript."

The Labors of the Sioux Commission Ended.

The Sioux Commission, whose powers, by the law of Congress, expired on the 1st of December, 1863, by close attention to business both day and night, were enabled by the aid of their assistants, to close their labors a few days before that time. Having heard and audited nearly 3000 claims, and finished and sent their report to the Secretary of the Interior, in which report they favor an appropriation of a sum of about one and a quarter million of dollars to the unfortunate sufferers by the outbreak of 1862.

Some little idea of the amount of work performed by them can be formed, when it is considered that the testimony of the 3,000 claimants with their witnesses, averaging two or three at least to each claim, had, by the law of Congress, to be taken down in writing.—each standing independent of the rest. And in the auditing of them, there has been no jumping at the conclusion as to the amount of damage sustained by the several claimants, but each claim with its evidence, often quite voluminons, has been read over and due consideration given to it before passing judgment upon it. The powers of the Commission was somewhat limited. Some $200,000 00 only was placed at their disposal, and their awards exceeding that sum had to be reported to the Secretary of the Interior for his approval or rejection. The Secretary will probably approve of their action, and recommend in his report to Congress an appropriation covering the full amount of their awards. In disposing of the $200,000.00 for present relief, the Commission concluded that it was the intention of Congress to have it applied to the relief of the most destitute and necessitous cases Hence the hundreds of families who have been driven from their homes and dare not yet return, or whose homes have been burned or plundered, as in the counties of Renville, Kandiyohi, Mongehalia, Jackson, parts of Brown, the region of Fort Abercrombie, and some other localities, have been considered as coming under this class. While some other localities have also been awarded more or less of present relief, as at Madelia, on the Cottonwood, in a part of Butternut Valley, and a few other places. Had the appropriation been sufficient, we are assured that other parts of our County would have been remembered. As it is nearly all the claims presented from this county, have been reported favorably upon. All of the claims have been cut down more or less to correspond with the scale of prices fixed by the Commission for different commodities. The price of Rutabagas per acre, for instance in this locality, being fixed at $7.00, that of Oats at $10.00, &c. We think the people have to congratulate themselves on having had such a zealous, hardworking Commission. Of the members of the Board from this State, Col. Aldrich, those who know of his many years of faithful labor for the interests of his constituents in Congress, and of his eagerness always to befriend a Minnesotian, will not be surprised to learn that from the commencement of the sessions he has not been absent a single day; and has at all times fully appreciated the sufferings of our people during the Sioux outbreak. The other members of the Board have also been disposed to meet out full relief to our destitute settlers on the frontiers, and have labored diligently to complete their labors in time for the next Congress to act upon their awards to their claimants. And now that the Commission have done so well by our sufferers, we hope the next Congress, by the exertions of our delegation, will do equally right in the matter.

The Indian Supply Train.

WE fail to discover the motive of the editor of the Record in publishing false reports about the supply train, now that the election is over, and the train beyond the reach of his influence or that of his particular friends.

In his last issue he states that "the soldiers continued to annoy the train and instead of proving a guard to it as contemplated, the teamsters and civilians so far had to guard the wagons from the depredations of the soldiers." There is no truth whatever in his statement, and we assert that he has had no information from the train since it left Leavenworth on the 16th ult., which would warrant him in spreading such a report.

After Col. Crooks visited the camp on Saturday, the 14th ult., up to the time of crossing the Big Sioux on Monday, the 23d, there had not been any annoyance to the train by the soldiers; on the contrary they have taken hold heartily to help it along, and all that were needed were employed to drive the teams. Instead of "the teamsters and civilians so far having had to guard the wagons from the depredatinos of the soldiers" when the train goes into camp at night, a guard of soldiers is posted around the wagons, and no one is allowed near them. This was the order of Col. Crooks, and it is sufficient to say that it has been promptly obeyed. Of this fact we are informed both by letters, and by Mr. Fields, who left the train at Lake Shetek on the 20th ult, and also by Scout Solon Stevens, who left the train Tuesday morning, the 24th, just after they had crossed the Sioux.

Previous to Col. Crooks visiting the camp, a portion of the soldiers behaved very bad, having been instigated so to do, as they then confessed BY MEN IN THIS PLACE WHO ARE THE PARTICULAR FRIENDS OF THE EDITOR OF THE RECORD. OF THIS THERE IS POSITIVE PROOF, AS THE SOLDIERS STATED WHO THEY WERE AND WHAT WAS TOLD THEM, AND THE PROOF WILL BE READY AS SOON AS "HIS FRIEND" ARE READY TO MEET IT. The 'friends' of the Record will find that the attempt to break up a Government train, is somewhat of a serious undertaking, and followed with results not at all calculated upon.

As to the assertions of the Record that all the money expended here, was for the benefit of speculators, there is hardly a business man in town but what knows it to be a base falsehood. Our mechanics received a large amount of money; so did all the hotels, livery men, etc, and the merchants a much larger sum. Nine-tenths of the money expended here went into the hands of these men, and of the farmers for cattle.

The fact that the purchasing of these supplies in this place has been a benefit to this town and county is so apparent, that it is astonishing the Record should continue its course of falsifying and misrepresenting, unless it be to gratify personal malice.

A Deserved Promotion.

We are premitted to take the following extract from a private letter, received from Capt Thornton. It will be seen that he has been promoted to the position of Division Quartermaster, a fiting acknowledgement of his integrity and ability:

You will see by the place from which this is dated, that I have got a long way towards home. On the evening of the 6th inst we received orders to march at four o'clock the next morning. And from that time until yesterday, I have not had one hours rest beyond what was absolutely necessary. For three nights I did not sleep any, and at no time over six hours out of the twenty-four; I am worn out, but am in first rate health.

Our Division is composed of three Brigades, and a Pioneer corps. I have about four times the amount of labor to perform of that of Brigade Quartermaster, which is my proper command. I have four acting Quartermasters under me. So much for the glory of being Division Quartermaster. I wish some one else had it if it costs so much labor.

This is a beautiful country and before the war was highly improved, and Lagrange, even now, is a beautiful village. - We know of no strong force in the country since Chalmers was whipped at Colliersville by Sherman some three or four weeks ago; but guerrillas are scattered over the country. There are two regiments of loyal Tennessee cavalry at Grand Junction, two and a half miles east of here, and woe to the guerrilla who falls into their hands. These men have been so harassed and hunted that they have become desperate to a degree you can scarcely conceive. Squads of prisoners are being brought in almost every day.

I have not yet got all my train out here. There are some fifty wagons coming by dirt road; I think they will be in to-morraw.

Gen. Hurlburt, by order of General Sherman, is conscripting every man able to bear arms for the purpose of putting down the guerrillas. This order is creating an immense sensation among the semi-loyal men and the speculators in Memphis. You need not be told the order is popular with the army."

Intelligence from the Supply Train.

On Saturday last we received the following letter from Capt. Whitney, commanding the escort to the Supply Train. It was brought through by Mr. Stevens, the scout. When he left the expedition was 135 miles from the Agency. They have had fair weather, and expected to get through by the 2nd inst. Thus far it has been a perfect success:

CAMP KING, Nov, 23, 1863.

To the Editor of the Union:

We are on the west bank of the Big Sioux River. We found a rapid with about twelve inches of water, and a hard gravelly bottom which made an excellent crossing. We marched seven miles, and crossed the whole train by eleven o'clock A. M. The condition of the train is excellent. We have not abandoned a thing since we left the settlements. Our cattle can make from fifteen to twenty miles each day. They are in much better condition for the journey than the day we left Mankato. The route is fine—the weather capital. Not a man sick, among the two hundred and fifty soldiers and citizens.

All feel confident of the result, and that is, success. The distance from New Ulm by Col. Thompson's adometer, is one hundred and twenty miles, and we are over half the distance to the Winnebago Agency. I state these things because of the doubts expressed by the many at Mankato of our success.

I am sir yours etc.
JOS C. WHITNEY,
Capt. Comd'g Escort Missouri River.

This communication was received here, at two o'clock P. M. 27th inst, by my special scouts, sent out to Captain Whitney as extras. Too much praise cannot be given them for their powers of endurance and courage in going through. Names, Stevens and Ange.

J. T. AVERILL.
Lieut Col. Commanding Fort Ridgely.

A Negro Commits a Rape and is shot.

The Memphis Bulletin contains the following, dated Pocahontas, Tennessee, 19th.

Yesterday a private of company A. 1st Alabama (colored) Regiment—LawsonCamp—was out with a scouting party, and leaving the squad, proceeded to the house of Mr. Keith, about five miles from here, on the Ripley road and seeing his (Mr. K's) daughter Anna and her sister-in-law in the yard, asked if any men were about. They were alarmed and returned to the house, replying that they were alone. He followed them, and, when in the room, told the elder to leave, which she refused to do. Then he bade the younger leave. Both started; whereupon he followed them to the yard laid down the gun, and choked and threw down the younger one, Anna. Her sister-in-law started for the gun, seeing which he got up, took it, laid it down beside him, and seizing the younger, committed a rape upon her. Complaint was made—he was arrested, and tried by a court convened last evening. Col. Fielding 1st West Tennessee Cavalry, commanding post, approved the sentence, and ordered the execution to take place at 8 o'clock this morning but afterwards commuted the sentence to shooting. At the appointed time the First Alabama was drawn up, and after some pointed talk from Colonel Alexander, showing his intention to enforce the strictdiscipline, they marched out and the culprit was shot. Twelve muskets were detailed, one loaded with blank cartridge. Ten balls lodged in his body. He expired without a struggle, and bore his fate with a great deal of fortitude, not seeming to be affected at all. He has always been a bad, unruly man, and richly merited punishment.

HOW A MAINE REGIMENT GOT A SUPPLY OF STOCKINGS—The small British vessels running between here and the provinces furnished opportunities for smuggling, though this is done upon so small a scale that the loss to the Government is by no means commensurate with the risk of the smugglers. It is not customary for the inspectors to see very closely the discharging of the vessels, which are simply visited from time to time, one inspector frequently having the supervision of several of them. But on one occasion an inspector, suspecting something wrong, devoted his whole attention to the dischrging of one of these crafts. The captain was evidently uneasy—the work of discharging cargo went on slowly—every one seemed impatient but the importurbable inspector, who patiently watched the proceedings, sealing up the hatches when he went to his meals. Finally the captain, seeing that his detention in port was likely to be long and expensive, announcing that he had on board 500 pairs of stockings, which were forwarded by Union sympathizers in Nova Scotia as a gift to a Maine regiment! A grim smile lighted up the countenance of the inspector at this sudden development of Union sympathy in Nova Scotia, and the collector, in consideration of the munificence of the gift, consented to overlook the accidental omission of the importation on the manifest, and the Nova Scotians got credit for a degree of good feeling towards our Government which is hardly borne out by puidished advices from that quarter.— Boston Journal.

The Draft—the Draft. All day yesterday and this forenoon the Draft was the topic. On the streets, by the fireside, at the tea table and elsewhere people talked and wondered which way their luck would turn. There were anxious hearts in town this morning—there were sad faces for the wheel at noon would turn for good or evil. Many a wife prayed last night that her husband might be spared—many a poor man must to-night bear home the sad news, and prepare to go to glory or to death—and to leave behind those he loves. Well—such is war. And the end is not yet.—La Crosse Democrat.

TWO HORSES DROWNED IN THE RIVER —NARROW ESCAPE OF THEIR OWNER.—On Tuesday evening last Mr. Wm. Covert who had been to mill at Elk River with a load of grain, came up on the other side, and after hallooing some time for the ferryman to come over with his boat, concluded to hazard fording the river, notwithstanding the river was full of floating ice, and at least nine feet deep in some parts. Unhitching his team from the wagon he mounted one of the horses, and, harnesed together as they were, went into the river. One of the horses got his fore feet over the neckyoke, making it impossible to swim, and both were immediately so tangled up that they went under. Two men on this side put out in small boats, and after much exertion, succeeded in rescuing Mr. Covert, who was so nearly drowned as to be unable to stand, when brought ashore.

The horses were both drowned. One of them was a chestnut stallion, which was valued at $500. Mr. Covert's loss amounts to about $700.—Northern Statesman

THE LATEST NEWS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.

Army officers from Dalton Station to night report heavy cannonading heard since early this morning in the direction of Orange Court House. The firing was heavy and so continuous as to preclude the possibility of its being a skirmish. It was their opinion that a general engagement was in progress at the time they last heard firing, at 11 o'clock this forenoon.

Lee's whole force is entrenched between Gordonsville and Orange Court House.

Supplies are dispatched to Meade by a new route.

The weather has been frightfully cold since yesterday. The badly wounded left out last night and those to be left out to-night when they fall must certainly die. They fight without overcoats.

CHATTANOOGA, Nov. 30.

There has been no fighting in northern Georgia for the past two days. Our troops hold the country as far as Ringgold and Cleveland and to Tunnell Hill. The campaign is probably ended.

The fruits of the victory are 6,000 prisoners, 48 guns, 7,000 stand of arms and a large quantity of stores,

Our total casualties will not exceed 4,000.

CINCINNATTI, Dec. 1.

Bragg's whole force is reported beyond Dalton. Stragglers are still coming in.

Henry Andrews, of 124th Ohio, was sentenced to be shot January 8th for desertion.

Fifteen hundred Chattanooga prisoners arrived at Louisville last night. Guerrillas are very troublesome on the Cumberland river; boats are fired into, houses and citizens robbed and property carried off or destroyed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.

The Herald correspondent, writing at 4 PM. Friday, says:

It was anounced that Hill's corps, which had previously rested on the Rapidan west of the railroad was approaching on the center, and half an hour later heavy musketry was heard on the right, showing that the Third Corps forming that wing was engaged. Our casualties were few in the center. The only officer of rank at that time known to be killed is Lieut. Col. Hessier of the 72d Pennsylvania regiment.

The battle ground is in the wilderness with but little open country, consequently an accurate description of our position cannot be given, but it will be perceived having the enemy's fortified position on the left and right we can compel them to give battle if they intend to fight upon ground less unfavorable to us.

Jeff. Davis, owing to the unfavorable weather of Wednesday, did not review the rebel armies as he intended, as is said by the prisoners!

General Gregg's cavalry and batteries had a severe fight with the enemy's right wing of cavalry Thursday afternoon. We drove them back upon their infantry lines when we were compelled to fall back with loss said to be about 250 in killed. The 5th Corps coming up the rebels were in turn compelled to retreat.

About sixty were wounded in the 2d corps, five killed and seven mortally wounded.

On the right Gen. French, with the 3d corps, then advanced, encountered Ewell's corps before he connected with the center and after a fight held the position, but lost heavily. He however captured a large number of rebels.

The 6th corps was then thrown forward and filled the Gap between the center and right.

A train of the 5th corps advancing on the plank road was attacked on the flank by rebel cavalry who destroyed fifteen or twenty wagons and killed two men and several mules.

On Friday it was found that the rebels had fallen back from our center to two miles nearer Orange Court House, and the above intelligence is up to the evening of Friday, and was brought to Washington by a special messenger, who came near being captored by guerillas.

The additional information which has also come to hand to-night through another source states that the line was formed on Friday about noon, on the road leading to Orange Court House, and Gen. Gregg's cavalry on the left had a severe fight with the rebel cavelry, and drove them back upon our infantry, and then fell back upon our infantry supports.

DISCHARGED. Forty-nine men of Co. L, Minnesota Mounted Rangers, Capt. Davy, passed through this place on Tuesday morning, on their way home, their term of enlistment having expired. At the time they were mustered out at Fort Snelling, Companies A. B. C. D. E. G. and H. were also mustered out. After a few weeks respite Captain Davy will go to recruiting for the Cavalry Regiment, and the boys tell us that nearly all of them are going in with him. The Captain is very popular among his men, and they have confidence in his ability.

COMING HOME TO RECRUIT.—We are pleased to learn from our correspondent, "Now And Then" that Sergant Major Ira Smith, of Co. E, and second Lieut. H. R. Walker, of Co. D, 9th Regiment, will come home soon to recruit for their respective companies. They are probably on the way now and will be here in a few days. They will recruit in Blue Earth, Faribault, Nicollett and LeSueur counties, and hope to get sufficient to fill their companies to the maximum.

ST. CLOUD DEMOCRAT.—The Democrat comes to us this week with a new heading, and otherwise greatly improved. Its typographical appearance is better than it has been for years.

We might as well begin to look the draft square in the face, for our Uncle is getting a big stock of clothing on hand, and we shall soon have to wear it.

A GOOD STOVE FOR THREE DOLLARS.—One of the most economical cheapest, warmest, cosiest, little arrangement in the shape of a sheet iron Stove can be found at John F. Meagher's hardware store for three dollars, a sum insignificant compared to the comfort you'll receive from it these cold winter evenings. They are two feet long, two feet high, and two feet wide, and can be placed beside a cook stove, thus saving wood, and giving double the warmth. Read his advertisement, and go and buy one before it is too late.

The Atlantic Monthly for December, the last of the twelfth volume is received. We have glanced over its pages, and among the many articles of interest are, The Man Without a Country; The Great Air Engine; A Loyal Womans No; Sympathetic Lying; Letter to a Peace Democrat. Single subscriptions, $3.00. We will furnish the Union and the atlantic for $4.00.

BUY A WOOD MILL.—The Empire Wood mill which we advertise in another column, is a very cheap and useful institution. We saw one of them at work in Hastings while we were there, a year or so since, and it comes up to the description given in the advertisement. Mr. Etheridge, the General Agent, we have known for a number of years, and what he says can be relied upon. We learn that parties in town are already negotiating for one, and that it will soon be in use here.

DEMAND FOR GOLD.—The demand for gold is great but not equal to the demand for the celebrated Chemical Saleratus, especially where this Saleratus has been tried and where its worth is fully known. Try it and satisfy yourself. For sale by most merchants.

TINKCOM'S CORNER is as familiar as household words to every one in the valely of the Minnesota. But Mr. Tinkom has sold his interest in it, and it will be known by that name no longer. We are sorry to lose Mr. T. from our business men. Our business relations with him have always been pleasant, and he has dealt fairly with us at all times. We wish him success wherever he goes.

Ten dollars and fifty cents were received at the collection taken in the City Hall on Thanksgiving day. It was forwarded to the Sanitary Commission at Chicago for the benefit of sick soldiers.

PROGRESSING.—Messrs Ruegg and Howard inform us that they have about sixty names on their recruiting roll. They have only twenty five more names to get, and hope to get the full number before the first of January.

THE CONTINENTAL FOR DECEMBER.—The interesting reading matter in this monthly does not abate. "Was he Successful," written by R. B. Kimball, is one of the best papers we have read for a long time. The great American Crisis; The Nation; Reconstruction, and other articles written by able pens, render this number worth double its subscription price. Terms two copies, $5.00. John F. Trow, publisher, 50 Greene Street New York.

Professors Shaw and Andrews arrived in town on Friday evening last. They come among us for the purpose of teaching the young folks the art of penmanship, and judging from the interest manifested at a meeting held at Moulton's Hall on Monday evening, they will doubtless succeed in getting up a large class. Although the weather was stormy, a class of almost forty scholars was obtained, which we think may be increased to fifty. Professor Shaw has been engaged for eight years in teaching chirography—has made it a speciality—and is eminently qualified to teach that important branch of learning. He merits and will doubtless receive a liberal patronage at this place.—Whig.

SALE AND PROFIT.—A jolly Irishman and his better half hailing from the umbrageous shades of Corcoran, came to town a few days since, in an ox cart which was ladened with the most 'delightsomest butter.' Meeting one of our merchants who was proverbial for his slow buying, a dicker began. Soon the fair one displayed a little uneasiness at the slow progress made, whispered some cabalistic words in the ear of her leige lord. A boisterous "wo Buck gee up Bright," accompanied with a free use of his goad, set the oxen into a rapid run. The merchant now wondering stood aghast. No more was seen of the jolly Hibernian until the next day, when he called on the aforesaid merchant to close his dicker. A revelation displayed he fact that while he recieved a round price for his butter, he was plus a sixteen pound nugget in the shape of a fine but very young Irish baby. A remarkable proof of the rapid progress of events in Minnesota.

Brigham Young in a late address to the Mormons, said the present war is a "visitation from heaven upon the people because they killed the prophet of God, Joseph Smith. Sen.

PROGRESS.—The Rail Road to Anoka is progressing finely. The cars make daily trips to Manomin, and if nothing unforeseen occurs, the track will be completed to Anoka within four weeks. The iron is all on hand, and the work is being pushed along as fast as possible.—Northern Statesman.

On Monday morning last the ice was running so thick in the river as to stop the ferry boat from crossing. The passengers by Burbank's stages, with their baggage, were navigated across the river by Mr. Gallow, the ferryman in a skiff. Since that time the river has been full of floating ice.

SPERMATORRHOEA CAN BE CURED.—Dr. Rand's Specific cures Spermatorrhoea Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Loss of Power &c., speedily and effectually. Its effects are truly magical. A trial of the SPECIFIC will convince the most skeptical the merits. Price, $1 a box. Sent post paid to any address, by S. C. UPHAM, 403 CHESNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA. Circular sent free.

PULMONARY CONSUMPTION A CURABLE DISEASE.—A CARD.—The undersigned having been restored to health in a very few weeks, by a very simple remedy, after having suffered several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease, Consumption—is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure.

To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used (free of charge,) with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS &c. The only object of the advertiser in sending the prescription is to benefit the afflicted, and spread information which he conceives to be invaluable; and he hopes every sufferer will try his remedy, as it will cost them nothing and may prove a blessing.

Parties wishing the prescription will please address

BRANDRETH'S PILLS.—While Brandreth's Pills are so potent for good to diseased bodies, they are harmless as bread. The babe at the breast or the man of ripest years, and delicate females, are certain to receive an increase of health from the use of these pills blessed of Heaven.

It has been said by an able physician, that "this medicine always benefits and never injures." Wherein is the superlative quality. The Brandreth Pills have no power or action but upon impure humors in the blood. They seize only the impurities in and around the parts affected by disease; all parts involved in diseased actions are operated upon, and cleansed from all foulness, and reinfused with "Life" by the wonderful curative powers contained and inherent of the most justly famed BRANDRETH'S PILLS.

Millions of people, whose lives appeared to be at the last ebb worn out by fever's consuming fires, by consumption's insidious advances, by racking torments of inflammatory rheumatism, have been cured by the use of these pills. The persons are living witnesses, and thousands are residents in every city in America. Principal office, No. 294, Canal St., N. Y.

Sold by J. F. WICKERSHAM, Mankato and by all respectable dealers in medicine.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P Folsom in 1852, and by E D Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot. Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota,"

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860," approved March 8th 1861," which waver is inwriting and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.52, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

MANHOOD;

How Lost! How Restored!

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price, Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Valuable Lands for Sale.

BY direction of the Hon Secretary of the Interior, the undersigned will receive sealed bids for the purchase of any or all of the lands hereinafter described, they being among the choicest and best farming land in Minnesota.

These lands comprise what are known as the Winnebago Trust Lands in the State of Minnesota, and will be sold to the highest and best bidder in tracts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres each, under the provisions of a treaty concluded with the Winnebago Indians, April 15th, 1859, and an act of Congress, approved February 21st 1863, entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their Reservation, in Minnesota, for their benefit."

No bid will be entertained at a rate less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

In case a bid is accepted, the party making the same will be notified as soon thereafter as practicable. If within thirty days after such notice the party shall fail to make payment to the undersigned, the land for which such bid was made will be subject to sale to any other person.

Patents will be issued and transmitted to purchasers as soon after payment as the same can be prepared. Payments may be made either in cash or in the certificates of indebtedness of the Winnebago Indians, issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for the debt of said Indians, and secured to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said lands by the third article of the treaty above mentioned. The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. All bids must be sealed and addressed to the undersigned, Washington City, D. C. and endorsed "Bid for Winnebago Tract Land."

THE INDEPENDENT.

THIS weekly Religious, Literary, and Family Journal, edited by

REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER,

REV. JOSHUA LEAVITT, D. D,

And THEODORE TILTON,

Is issued in the same form, and at the same low price of

TWO DOLLARS

Per annum, notwithstanding the great advance in white paper.

It Affords its Readers:

Fair and thoughtful editorial discussions of the most important facts, occurrences, and interests of this nation, and of the world.

A comprehensive record of facts, men, and movements of the Religious World.

A full and careful weekly history of the progress of the rebellion.

Ample chronicles of the important general news, home and foreign,

Fair and careful accounts of new books; made on the express principle of serving as a safe-guide to buyers.

Interesting correspondence from Washington, from the West, from the army, from abroad.

Six columns a week of carefully selected Family Reading; being prose and poetry, suited to interest both the Old and the Young.

A full chronicle of the progress of business, and of the current prices of merchandise, produce, and live stock in New York city.

A carefully prepared commercial and financial article, embracing the latest and most reliable information in regard to the money market, trade, commerce, and business generally. In this department The Independent has secured a valuable reputation for fairness, boldness, and for discussing all secular topics from the highest moral stand-point.

A Dry Goods Report, furnished particularly for country merchants, a weekly report of the prices current in this city of all descriptions of domestic dry goods. The information thus furnished, so entirely reliable, cannot be found in any other periodical. We have the best of evidence on that point from all quarters. We are not permitted to give the names of the parties who make this weekly report to us, but will state that they are two competent merchants, with entirely different connections, and that they are well known throughout the United States, and have been for years. The prices given are the exact figures at which the several descriptions of goods are sold for NET CASH by the jobbing houses in this city on the day said report is made, viz., Wednesday of each week.

The balance of the purchase money is payable at any time within twenty years, at the option of the purchaser, if interest at seven per cent, per annum is annually paid in advance.

Interest to the first day of June, 1861, must be paid at the time of the purchase.

Persons purchasing lands upon which other parties have made improvements, will be required to pay the owner of the same the appraised value of the improvements, one half to be paid at the time of the sale, and the balance within six months thereafter, with interest at seven per cent. per annum,

In case the person occupying or improving the land has damaged the same, the appraised amount of damage will be deducted from his improvements and when the occupant is the purchaser, the damage will be added to the price of the land.

No lands will be sold for less than the appraised value.

Purchase money payable in specie and legal tender notes.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

HARPER'S

New Monthly Magazine.

Critical Notices of the Press.

The volumes Bound constitute of themselves a liberary of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.

The most popular Monthly in the world. —N. Y. Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People: and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each Number contains fully 144 pages reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good woodcuts: and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature. —Trubner's Guide to American Literature London.

No Magazine in Europe or America is so well known, none has half as many readers; and, we may safely say, none has received so large a tribute of admiration from the cultivated class, that delighted in a healthy, diversified, elevating periodical literature. It is the foremost magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

TERMS.

The papers of permanent value which have been published in almost every Number render a complete set of Harper's Magazine a desirable acquisition to public or private library. The Publishers can supply complete sets, or any number from the commencement. For Twenty five cents they will send any number, by mail, postpaid. Any Volume, containing six Numbers will be mailed post-paid, to any place in the United States within 1500 miles of New York, for two dollars and fifty cents. Complete sets, now comprising Twenty-five Volumes, will be sent by express, the freight at the expense of the purchaser, for one dollar and eighty-eight cents per Volume.

One copy, one year, $3,00: Two copies one year $5,00; Harper's Magazine and Harper's Weekly, one year $5,00

An extra copy, gratis, for every club of Ten Subscribers, at $2,50 each,

or, 11 copies for $25,00

Clergymen and teachers supplied at $2,50 a year. The Semi-Annual Volumes Bound in cloth, $2,50 per Volume. Muslin covers, 25 cents each Nett. When ordered sent by mail, eight cents additional must be remitted for postage. The Postage upon Harper's Magazine must be paid at the office where it is received. The postage is thirty-six cents a year, or nine Cents for three months.

SINGER & CO'S.

Letter "A" Sewing Machine.

WITH ALL HE IMPROVEMENTS.

IS the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality.

Poetry.

Love in Autumn.

All day with measured stroke I hear
From threshing floors the busy flail;
And in the fields of stubble near
Incessant pipe the speckled quail.

All golden ripe the apples glow
Among the orchard's russet leaves;
Southward the twittering swallows go
That sung all summer 'neath the eaves.

Across the fair horizon's line
In splendor autumn mists are drawn;
The grapes are purple on the vine,
The sunflower shines upon the lawn.

And streeched athwart the burning sky,
The spider's thread of silver white,
Like netted vapors to the eye,
Hang quivering in the noonday light.

A year ago to-day we stood
Beneath the maple's crimson glow,
That, like a watch-fire in the wood,
Gleamed to the yellowing vale below.

Calm was the day, without a breath,
And all-pervading stillness deep;
A calm that seemed the calm of death—
A silence like to that of sleep.

And only on the listnening ear
Through the wide-wood the hollow sound
Of dropping nuts, and sweet and clear
The spring that bubbled from the ground.

Close at our feet the brook slid down,
Past tangled knots of sedge and weed,
And under leaves of gold and brown,
To sparkle through the level mead.

A lock of hair—a ring—a flower—
The latter faded, old, and sere;
Mute records of that vanished hour,
Memories that my heart holds dear.

Like one who in a pensive dream
Sees long lost friends around his bed,
I, gazing on these treasures, seem
To hold communion with the dead.

The whispered vow—the lingering kiss—
The long embraces cheek to cheek—
The silence that proclaimed our bliss,
Beyond the power of words to speak

All seem so near—then home we went Through meadows where the asters grew.
While overhead the hues were blent
Of sunset with the melting blue.

O fire that paints the autumn leaf—
O calm that knows no quickening breath,
O winds that strip the ungarnered sheaf,
Ye are to me the types of death.

THE OIL PAINTING.

A STORY OF LIFE AS IT IS.

BY MARY W. JANVRIN.

CHAPTER I.

It was one of Mrs. John Horton's "evenings" and that lady, triumphant in a new set of diamonds, paced her drawing-room, awaiting the coming of her guests. Mr. Horton was yet down town at his counting-house, busy with day book and ledger—a hard, cold, avaricious man, too eager in the rush for gain to allow himself ease or leisure, submitting to no sway except the iron one of his equally cold, ambitious, and wholly, fashion-loving wife. Helen, their only daughter, and a faithful counterpart of her mother, was the only other occupant of the drawing-room.

This was her "coming-out night," and she had been duly prepared for the event by much worldly maternal advice.

"You are to dance with young Beals, of course, Helen," continued Mrs. Horton, after similar instructions for the evening.

"But, mamma, I do detest him so!" broke out Helen. His whole conversation is about his new carriage horses.

"O, never mind, my love. His father's worth half a million—and the horses are a splendid team, certainly. I shouldn't object to riding behind them any fine morning."

"But I should, if Ed Beals was to be my companion," retorted Miss Helen decidedly. "Money is desirable, everybody knows, but then one likes brains as an accompaniment; and all our set knows that he is not overburdened."

"Sarcasm is a dangerous weapon, Helen. You are to severe," blandly replied the mother. "After you have been in society awhile, you will learn that those persons who bluntly express themselves about everything and everybody they meet are never very popular."

"Then, for the sake or such a reputation, I presume I must admit Mr. Edgar Beals to be a gentleman of refined tastes and accomplishments—heaven save the mark!" laughed Helen. "But, pray, don't look so distressed, good mamma; I'll do the agreeable in my own house, believe me. "Whom have you next, you desire me to be particularly 'sweet' to?"

"Well, there are the Gales and the Daytons—all our wealthiest people: and the Harrimans—aristocratic and exclusive. Laurence Harriman is the best 'catch' in this city. You cannot object to him, Helen," said Mrs. Horton with an air of triumph.

"No, mother," was Helen's reply in a quick tone, and with crimsoning cheeks and sparkling eyes that showed her interest. He is a gentleman a woman might be proud to win—handsome, haughty, and rich enough to give his wife a position such as I should covet. You have educated me to love money, you know, mamma," she exclaimed with another laugh—"and I intend to make that one of the requisites in my future liege lord, though other qualifications must also accompany it. Harriman seems to be the bright particular star in my matrimonial sky on my first party night.

The girl was very young, very beautiful, and one would have said, looking upon her girlish figure and rounded cheeks only, that she was a novice in the ways of a hollow-hearted ambition-loving world, but the tutelage Helen Horton had received from her mother had not proved in vain; and, already, her young head, crowned with its braids of soft brown hair, had woven such dreams as many a woman who had walked life's path for twice her years was utterly a stranger to.

"I perceive that you understand yourself, my love," said Mrs. Horton with a gratified air; "and it pleases me to know that you hold the true view of these matters. Of course family, position, and influence, united to wealth, are better than the latter alone; and Laurence Harriman unites all these in himself. He is a gentleman both your father and myself would be proud to call 'son-in-law.' You are looking your best to-night, and cannot fail to make an impression. Ah, now I remember hearing it said that Mr. Harriman dislikes anything like an attempt at display or coquetry; so just govern yourself accordingly, my love."

'Leave me alone for playing the role of simplicity, mamma,' replied the daughter, coolly adjusting a fuschia in her braids before the pier glass. 'This dress is becoming, certainly. Rena has exquisite taste—how fortunate we took the girl home! she will be so useful this winter with my wardrobe.'

'Yes, quite a prize, love. Gives us the opportunity of doing a charitable thing in the eyes of the world, and saves the expense of a seamstress. Quite a piece of economy, these hard times.' said Mrs. Horton complacently. 'The poor thing will be thankful, of course, for a comfortable home, and, after you are settled as I wish to see you, I will give her a little society, and get her married off to some worthy person; for your father, though he hardly finds time to think of anything outside of business, has a few queer notions about this sister's child. But the bell rings.'

In another moment Mrs. John Horton and her daughter were in the first wave of the reception, whose full tide swept in as evening advanced.

To describe the party would be but a repetition of what every reader has experienced or can imagine—the crowd of guests, the crush of silks, the flash of jewels under the glare of gas, the meeting of acquaintances, or the introduction of some new comer in the social whirl, the contact of gloved fingers, the music, the songs, the dancing, the ices, the champange, the pleasant words that covered heart burnings or envyings, the flirting, the manoeuvering, the wearying—and, later, when bouquets had withered, and moss buds and fuschias had drooped in raven or sunny braids, and the dancers' feet had begun to lag, and all had grown utterly tired of the masquerade, so-called 'fashionable society,' then the cloaking and hooding, the tripping down the velvet-colored stairs, the roll of carriages, and lastly, when all had departed, the deserted rooms, where silence and darkness settled down over all.

So Mrs. John Horton's 'evening' came and went, as had other evenings when the tide of pleasure-seekers had swelled in and out of her elegant house: and she laid her tired head on her pillow; and her merchant husband—who had, at a late hour, mingled with his wife's guests a stranger in his own drawing-room, and not there on this evening but in honor of his daughter's advent into society—slept a weary, broken sleep, late into the grey morning, to dream confused, fragmentary dreams, in which the glare and glitter of the night's revel, the cost of his wife's diamonds, his beautiful daughter's triumphs, and the rise in stocks were mingled inextricably.

But not to Helen Horton—the young girl just launched on the sea of fashionable life—not to her had this night passed as had others. Hitherto, she had had but few glimpses of that life—to an occasional evening at the opera, or at a quiet party given by some girl-friend. The artful mamma had calculated too wisely to display her prize till the desired moment, and when she 'brought out' her beautiful daughter, whom she had hitherto secluded with success, it was with the same feeling that a lapidary produces to the full light of day and to a thousand critics the gem which, for years, he has been polishing to perfection.

And yet, when Helen laid her head upon the pillow in her luxurious chamber, too keenly triumphant and elate to feel fatigue of body, her young brain was not confused in that whirling mixture of gratified vanity and success, as most other girls' would have been. In her first hour of triumph Helen Horton was as cool as the most perfect woman of the world; and she lay, for a full hour ere she slept, counting over every token of homage that had been laid at her feet. Lastly, the roll-call of her worshipers completed, she crowned the list with the name before which all others were meaningless, and slept with the face of Laurence Harriman engraven in her heart and brain.

One other sleeper was there also beneath that roof, in a chamber far less luxuriantly furnished than John Horton's odly and petted daughter—but a few removes, even, above the servants,' and she had fallen into her peaceful maiden slumber hours since, while the music swelled from the rooms below, into which she had not been bidden, though she was the merchant's dead sister's only child, delicate, gifted, brown eyed, dusky-haired Serena Rivers.

CHAPTER II.

It was a late breakfast over which a handsome young man, of perhaps twenty-eight years, lounged in his room at Parker's. That he was somewhat wearied, probably of the vanities of this exceedingly vain world, might have been read in the air of indifference with which he sipped his coffee, and, anon, musingly contemplated the toe of his velvet slipper resting on the grate before him, behind which grate glowed a comfortable bed of coals whose radiance ought to have kindled a corresponding glow in any face that looked upon it.

But that our bachelor did not care to manifest much interest in any subject, whether his breakfast, the morning paper which lay unread upon the table, or the thick snowflakes that fell like a cloud of white plumes against the panes of his window, in that chill, leaden December morning, was further confirmed, by his pushing the breakfast service aside, leaning back in his chair, and straightway falling into the most idle of reveries.

And yet, this was a man, who despite his listless mood, in which you would think he was wearied with the weight of his own shapely white hands—could waken and kindle, and fire the hearts of others, as he had proved more than once in the legal forum.

It was in his present mood that women usually saw him in society—listless, ennuied apparently, waiting to be sought and pleased, rather than to seek and please—a man whom all courted, yet who courted none, save sometimes to take a sudden 'fancy' to some new debutante, and then, as suddenly, after she had become engulphed in the giddy whirlpool, to forsake her; but it was in that mood, when he was roused into action and replete with life, that men, only, saw him.

But on this particular morning of which we write, his revery was not destined to be of long duration; for a step sounded along the hall without, a tap came on his door, followed by the opening of the door itself, and a lazy 'Moring, Lorry!' broke upon the silence.

'Ah, good morning, Templeton!' exclaimed Laurence Harriman, rising, and cordially grasping the hand of the visitor, who, divesting himself of fur cap and collar, and gently shaking the fast-dissolving snow-flakes from his furred overcoat, sank into the easy chair that extended its embracing arms in close proximity to the grate, commencing conservation in the drawling tone peculiar to that class of young gentlemen who affect the fop and exquisite.

'Morning Lorry! Deuced wet—aw, for a fellah to be out; but the idea seized me—aw, to come round and ascertain how you find yourself after last night's smitation—aw. They all say you're in for it, deep, this time—aw!'

'Don't think I comprehend your meaning, Templeton,' replied Harriman laconically, affecting an indifference he did not exactly feel. 'Wasn't aware of any particular cause for the anxiety of my friends since I met them last evening.'

'Oh, come now-aw, don't play innocent in that shape-aw,' said Harry Templeton, with some animation. It's plain as daylight-aw, another flirtation on the tapis, and, this time, with quite the belle of the season-aw. The Horton is denced handsome-aw—quite uncommon in style—young, but with such repose of manner-aw! the fellahs are all raving about her and the women jealous as the duce-aw. For my part I prophecy who will bear off the palm-aw,' bestowing a meaning look upon his companion.

'Pshaw, Hal! you had better try our legal profession—you are excellent at deducing conclusions from exceedingly slight premises,' retorted Harriman. 'Miss Horton certainly is very beautiful young girl; and I, for one, am among her sincerest admirers. Remember, Hal, I say 'admirers'—you know I am not of that impressible class who speedily get beyond admiration into the quick sands of le grande passion. A very beautiful young girl, certainly. I was quite surprised that Madam Horton, so thoroughly worldly and heartless, could have cultivated such a perfect snow-drop in her home garden—a snow-drop, and yet a regal lily, too, the young girl seems to combine the simplicity and artlessness of an unhackneyed child with the ease and repose of a woman, Her manner is discretion itself! I can give Miss Helen credit for all the graces, you see; but pray, my dear fellow, don't set me down as her lover yet!'

By the conclusion of this speech, Laurence Harriman had resolved into his natural self again; and any little interest with which he might have been thinking of the new debutante had subsided into that feeling with which he usually discussed and approached the latest belles of society; so he mentally persuaded himself, for the time being, and so he convinced Harry Templeton.

Making Butter in Winter.

It is not an easy matter to make good butter during the winter months, especially when you have, as is usually the case, but few cows that are giving milk.

If the milk was as rich in butter during winter as it is in summer, there would seem to be no reason why it can not be extracted. The temperature of the house is under our control; so is the churn, the cream, &c. But the fact is, that in the majority of cases, the milk contains little butter. The good wife may be ever so skillful in her management, but if the butter is not there, no amount of care and labor on her part will produce it. If the butter does not "come," the fault is not hers. Let the cows be well fed and kept warm and comfortable, and there will be little trouble in churning.

Butter like fat, is derived from the food. If the food contains fat—or carbonaceous substances, like starch and sugar, they will produce fat—and these are not all consumed to keep up the animal heat of the body—the cow, if liberally supplied with it, will either increase in weight or give milk rich in butter. Good hay and a little corn meal or shorts, with a daily mess of potatoes and turnip parings and kitchen slops thickened with bran, will make as rich milk in winter as in summer—provided the cow is kept warm

An English lady who has had much experience in making butter, gives us the following hints in regard to her method of procedure in winter:

Where only a few cows are giving milk, skim the cream off every morning, and scald it by putting it in a tin immersed in boiling water, and letting it remain till well heated. If the cows are eating turnips, this will take away their unpleasant flavor from the butter. After scalding the cream put it in a crock, and add to it the cream each morning (scalding as before) till you have enough to churn, say a week. If kept longer the cream is apt to become bitter. It is not desirable to skim the milk for more than two days. The cream should be kept in a moderately warm room, or at least where it will not freeze. When ready to churn, scald your churn and pour in the cream while the churn is hot and churn immediately.

Real Courage.

Boys and girls, as well as men and women, are apt to sometimes mistake prudence for cowardice, and yet no two qualities can be more different.

"Pooh!" said a rough boy once to his more gentle cousin, "I do believe, John, you're afraid to go near that horse just because he isn't tied."

"There is no need of my going near him, Stephen," was the reply: "and there is danger of his kicking any one who teases him uselessly.',

"Ha, ha!" shouted Stephen, "you're a bravy, now, ain't you? The idea of being afraid of a horse!" and, with a taunting look at John, the foolish boy walked up to the grazing animal, and poked him with a stick. The horse gave an uneasy start, but continued pulling at the grass.

"See here!" exclaimed Stephen, growing bolder, "if you'll promise not to faint, John, I'll present you with a lock of his tail in a minute."

John didn't faint, but Stephen did; for, as he stealthily approached the horse in the rear, the animal bounded away, after performing a flourish with his hoofs that laid his tormentor in the dust.

John tried hard to restore Stephen to consciousness. He loosened his clothing, rubbed his hands and feet, bringing water in his cap from a pool near by, dashed it on the boy's face; but all in vain—there were no signs of life. The nearest house was their own home, a quarter of a mile distant. John felt that not a moment must be lost. He approached the now quiet horse, and leaping upon his back, rode swiftly, without saddle or bridle, to his uncle's house for help.

When, after a long illness, Stephen recovered, he was a wiser boy, and told his cousin he really believed the horse had managed to knock a little common-sense into him.

"And what a dunce I must have been, John," he added, "to fancy you were afraid of that horse!"

Ice House.

No farmer should be without an icehouse, and a supply of ice for summer use. It should be located near the dwelling-house, easily accessible, and so constructed as to afford perfect security to the contents. No one who has experienced the many important advantages of these structures, in not only furnishing ice for domestic use during the hot, sultry weather of summer, but in preserving meat, milk butter, &c., will be long without one. The cost is comparatively a mere trifle, and the filling may be done at seasons when there is ordinarily else to do. For twenty dollars an ice-house capable of containing a sufficiency of ice for a family of eight or ten persons, may be made and filled, and will endure for many years. There are many methods practiced in the erection of these useful structures, but as every one possesses his own ideas upon the subject, I shall suggest no rules, but leave every one to choose his own method; my object being simply to solicit attention to their value and utility on the farm.

HEART POWER.—A man's force in the world, other things being equal, is just in the ratio of the force and strength of his heart. A full hearted man is always a powerful man; if he be erroneous, than he is powerful for error; if the thing is in his heart, he is sure to make it notorious, even though it may be a downright falsehood. Let a man be ever so ignorant, still, if his heart be full of love to a cause, he becomes a powerful man for that object, because he has a heart power, heart force. A man may be deficient in many of the advantages of education, in many of those niceties which are so much looked upon in society; but once give him a good strong heart, that beats hard, and there is no mistake about his power. Let him have a heart that is full up to the brim with an object, and that man will do the object, or else he will die gloriously defeated, and will glory in his defeat. Heart is power, —Spurgeon.

JOHN BULL ON HIS BRAG—The other day a boat's crew of Yankee sailors visited the English frigate Medea, and were handsomly received by the British crew. Johnney took great pride in the superiority of their armament, remarking that they could easily capture Portland, referring particularly to the efficiency of the big Armstrong. "The h—l" quoth a Yankee Jack, "why, there's guns in that fort yonder that your gun wouldn't make a ramrod for!"

The effects of narcotic poisons seem to be destroyed by pouring cold water on the face and head. A girl, accidently poisoned in England with laudanum, had all the usual remedies administered with out effect, when cold water was applied, however, she breathed more easily and bled from the nose. The treatment with water being suspended she relapsed at once; being resumed she again rallied, and in sixty hours was completely recovered.

A Western colonel, in speaking of the fault-finding Copperheads, said they reminded him of the man who joined a Christian church and found fault with everybody and everything till he broke up the organization. He did the same in one or two other churches, till at last a deacon prayed that he might go to hell, for he felt assured that if he did he would break up that institution in about three weeks.

A CLERGYMAN in a church having put a notice in the clerk's hand stating that the services would be morning and evening, and morning and afternoon, alternately, honest Rogers improved upon and said that the services would be so to "all eternity."

There are three kinds of silence—the silence of peace and joy, the silence of submision and resignation, and the silence of desolation and dispair. Lovely are they whose delight is in the first: and most wretched and miserable are those who are driven to the last.

A man may be ever so poor, he may be ever so unfortunate; but he need never be hard up for candles so long as he makes light of his sufferings.

Music is sweetest at night. That's the great secret of the Nightingale's popularity.

Why are book-keepers like chickens? Because they have to "scratch" for a livliehood.

A lover is most eloquent when he talks to his sweetheart about marriage. Then his speech is ringing eloquence.

Growth of Methodism in the West.

They tell an incident of Dr. Eddy, the editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, a religious newspaper of the Methodist pursuasion, which shows the rapid growth of this region and of the church he represents. Going out from the city on one of our principal railroads, in company with another divine, as the train approached the first station he was asked by his companion the name of the place they were approaching. The Doctor gave it, and remarked casually that he "once dedicated a church there." As they came up to the next station the Doctor, being questioned, described that also, and added that he had "once dedicated a church there. At length when the train stopped at the sixth station, the accompanying divine straightened in his seat and asked:

"Well, Doctor, did you ever dedicate a church here?"

"Here!" the Doctor replyed, with a twinkle in his ministerial. "Here? Oh, yes, I dedicated two churches here!"

His amazed companion concluded to keep silent at the next station, so it was passed without question. But coming to the next point he could not restrain his curiosity, but said:

"Well, Doctor, how about dedicating a church here?"

"I was invited to dedicate a church here," replied the Doctor, "but could not come because that day I had an engagement to dedicate a church at the station we just passed."

A Tradesman Worsted.

A man some six feet three inches in hight, and of the herculean build, went into the place of one of the Worcester shopkeepers, and asked if they had got any whirlers—that is stockings without feet.

"No," said the shopkeeper; "but we have got some famous big and strong stockings, that will just suit such a man as you."

"Let's have a look at them," said the man.

The counter was immediately covered with a quantity. The working Hercules selected the largest pair and said:

"What's the price of them?"

"Four shillings and ninepence," was the rejoinder.

"Can you cut the feet off of them?" was the next query.

"Oh, certainly," said the shopkeeper.

"Then just cut them off," was the laconic direction.

No sooner said than done. The long shop shears were applied, and instantly the stockings were footless

"And what's the price of 'em now?"

"Price of them now!" echoed the "worsted" merchant, surprised beyond measure at the absurdity of the question; "why, four shillings and ninepence, to be sure!"

"Four shillings and ninepence! I never gave but one shilling and sixpence for a pair of whirlers, in my life;" and he laid the amount upon the counter.

"Well," replied the tradesman, chopfallen and fairly outwitted, and throwing the mutilations at him, take them and be off with you. You've 'whirled' me this time, but I'll take good care that neither your nor any of your roguish gang shall do it again, as long as I live."

SINGING.—It is a curious fact that while some birds refuse to sing if the cage is darkened, others have softer notes of song. And so it is in human existence. When the soul of one comes under the shadow of a great affliction, it has no longer the voice of melody. The resources and the heart of joys are gone. But another sits and sends up to God the purest tones of music, the loftiest strains of praise from the chastened spirit. It was thus with David, whose harpings are never so heavenly as when they raise from the depths of his sorrow. It is not strange that those are dumb when "the days of darkness come," whose songs of delight lived only in the glare of earth's fitful, transient splendor.—The Congregationalist.

An English rural clergyman preached a remarkbly fine sermon, and some of his parishioners said it ought to be published, and every man in the kingdom should read it. He was so much pleased that he sent to London to a leading publishing house and ordered it published, making his calculation for the edition on the families in England and Scotland.

At the end of six weeks he was nearly frightened to death by a bill making him debtor for a million or more sermons at a shilling each, some 50,000£, crediting him with ten copies sold and requesting him to remit the balance. He slept not that night but went up to London the next day, when the publishers relieved his agony by telling him they had printed only a hundred copies for which they would charge him nothing.—N. Y. Observer.

"I am transported to see you,', as the convict said to the kangaroo.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

The Weekly Union.

Mankato, Friday, Dec. 11, 1863.

The News.

Congress is now well at work. McPherson, of Pensylvania, was elected Clerk, and W. S. King, of Minneapolis, re-elected Postmaster of the House.

Notice has been given of a bill repealing the $300 exemption clause and also of an act making Gen. Grant a Lieutenant General.

The message was delivered Wednesday.

The siege of Knoxville has terminated, and Longstreet is retreating to Virginia.

The rebel Gen. Bragg has been removed, and is succeeded by Hardee, who is slowly falling back from Dalton with Braggs whipped men.

Minnesota Railroads.

St. Paul is laboring very hard to promote its railroad interests by giving a bonus of $250,000 to the Superior road. Much firing and cross firing has been going on between the Press and Pioneer on the subject. The former very strenuously urges the immediate building of a road direct from St. Paul to Superior in order to prevent the building of the Hudson and Bayfield, or the St. Cloud and Superior roads: while the latter thinks that these gratuities can be better invested in the Minnesota Valley road.

No one questions the vast importance that a railroad to the Superior Regions will be to St. Paul, or to the Minnesota Valley, when the connection is made But if St. Paul has any money she wishes to give away. she will increase her trade more by giving a portion of it to the Valley Road.

It will take two or three years to build the Superior road, and within a years time communication with St. Charles and Winona by the La Crosse line will be had, and thus an important step taken to secure the trade of Southern Minnesota. By the time the Superior road is built we shall have the Transit road through to Mankato, and our eastern outlet will be by that route. With the Valley road unfinished, how will St. Paul prevent our trade from passing over the Transit route. Milwaukee and Chicago have determined to secure this trade, and will not be outbid.

There is no use talking about the Superior road, and of using the Valley Road as a make-weight or cracker to the whip of visonary writers. The Minnesota Valley road is equally as important and neccessary to St. Paul as the Superior road, and if St. Paul has any desire to secure the trade of Southern Minnesota she will consult her future prosperity by not overlooking the Minnesota Valley road or neglecting to give it material aid.

The Speakership.

Many of our exchanges throughout the State have had something to say as to who will be the next Speaker of the House, and have expressed their choice of the three or four names brought forward. Of the names mentioned, are E. S. Youmans, of Winona, Jared Benson, of Anoka, and J. P. Kidder, of St. Paul. All worthy men and competent to discharge the duties of that very responsible position. We do not hesitate to say that Mr. Youmans is our choice. He is a man of ability, integrity, and firmness of character, and possesses qualities which fit him to preside over the deliberations of the House. Although a friend of Hon. D. S. Norton, he did not join that gentleman in his recent "bolt," but remained true to his party. We should be pleased to see him elected Speaker, and he will without doubt receive the full vote of Southern Minnesota.

Willingly or Unwillingly?---Take Your Choice.

We trust our citizens will see the importance of making greater effort to fill our quota under the first and last calls. This county will be required to furnish about one hundred men, with fifty per cent added. Why not raise this number from the several towns at once? Let each town ascertain the number required from that town, also the number of volunteers previously enlisted; and appoint committees, as they are doing in some of the Eastern States, to solicit subscriptions and otherwise promote enlistments.

If our citizens have been indifferent thus far, it is time they waked up, and began to show their earnestness. We must send men on our frontier as volunteers, or they will be taken out of the State as "conscripts" to fill our shattered regiments now in the field.

Other States pay large bounties, and if we would escape the horrors of conscription, our men must come forward at once, and those who cannot leave their business must pay liberally for such as can.

But to accomplish this we must not rely wholly on the efforts of one man. We must give him some substantial aid. Let our business men, each one of them, furnish an acceptable substitute for frontier service, or give twenty-five, fifty or a hundred dollars, as they are able to do, and we will insure recruits enough to clear the county from draft.

Commissions for the New Cavalry Regiment.

Governor Swift is determined that St. Peter shall not want for representatives in the new Regiment. He has already appointed the Surgeon and Quartermaster from that place, and given three recruiting commissions to persons who are at work in Nicollet County, and how many more he may have signed and ready for delivery, we know not.

Blue Earth and Faribault Counties have been wholly ignored, and none of the commissions applied for have been granted. We have as good and reliable men at work in these counties as anywhere in the State, and the fact that our interests have been utterly disregarded, and applications repeatedly rejected is evidence conclusive, that the Governor is devoting his special attention to home interests. A very laudable object, truly, and one which will cause him to be remembered in the future.

Had a commission been granted to Mr. J. R. Howard, when he first applied for it, Blue Earth and Faribault counties would have had to-day sixty men placed to their credit as against the draft, for as soon as a man is sworn in, he is already in the service, and we get credit for him. As it is now, Mr. Howard has a roll containing nearly names sufficient to form a full company, and not one of them can be placed to our credit.

Blue Earth and Faribault counties have done enough to entitle them to one or more officers, and when justice is accorded them by the authorities, there will be no trouble in filling our respective quotas. We trust the Governor will see matters in a right light.

Recruiting Officers for the 9th Regiment.

By a special order of General Schofield the following named officers and enlisted men of the Ninth Regiment are detailed on recruiting service from their regiment, and will report to the Superintendent of recruiting service in this State for instructions: Capt. A. M. Enoch, Company F; First Lieutenant Lyman Sherwood, Company C; Sergeants George Parker, Company I, and William G. Brown, Company K; Corporals C. D. Kingsley, Company B; Wesley Maxfield, Company E. John Burns, Company F; Amos Sutton, Company G; Privates Richard Barrows, Company A; Oscar L. Farner, Company C; Orlando F. Bryant, Company H.

Honor to whom Honor.

A Fort Ridgley correspondent of the Winona Republican, in speaking of the Supply Train to the Agency, relates the following in regard to Scout Solon Stevens, of this place:

Since writing the above I have seen Mr. Stevens and learned of the severe tramp he has had, and which should not be overlooked. He started from this post with Corporal Ange accompaning, some two weeks ago. Their horses gave out soon after they passed Lake Shetek, and from thence to the Sioux river and all the way back, both footed it. They left the train on Tuesday, and made the distance, 154 miles, in three days and a half. They were greatly fatigued. Mr. Stevens is well known as a brave and courageous scout. He speaks highly of the fortitude and endurance of Corporal Ange. Such men ought to be rewarded, and doubtless will be.

The Winona Republican says that Nellie, a daughter of Mr. Ely, had a narrow escape from drowning. She was in the act of stepping from the edge of the ice to a log in the river, and thence upon a raft moored to the shore, near the lower saw mill, when she suddenly slipped and fell into six feet of water. Fortunately she could swim, and after exploring the depth of the river for a moment she appeared on the surface, and saved herself by throwing her arms around the log. Some men engaged at the mill close by, observed her dangerous situation, and immediately went to her rescue. The young lady was not at all alarmed over her perilous situation, but greatly lamented the loss of her skates, which went to the bottom even more speedily than herself.

Remembrance at Home.

It is a pleasant thought to the soldier, that friends at home, still hold him in remembrance. And could those friends see the avidity with which he seizes on letters or packages sent from home, they would be amply repaid for all the trouble of writing and sending. I have been a soldier, and know, by experience, what pleasing sensations come over you when you hear the Orderly, or the one who has charge of the soldier's letters, or other articles, he may receive from home, say a letter, or a package, or whatever it may be, for you, and pronounce your name. O! how pleased you are! you go and seek some quiet retreat, and then con over its contents; and it will bring you back to your home once more. You will think of the many parting blessings that were bestowed on you when you left that dear home. It will bring back to your memory all the incidents of home life, and you say have I kept that promise made to my mother to be a good boy and read my Bible? and do I always thank God at night for watching over me through the day? Then the tears will spring to your eyes, and you will resolve once more to be a better man.

A soldier has a better chance of seeing the secret chains that bind his comrade's hearts to loving hearts at home, than those who have not seen camp life in all its different phases. Every now and then one will show you a picture, or tell you of his dear child who sends a message of love to his dear father, or shows to you a letter from a loving mother, or sister, full of earnest council, and tender sympathy, and love. Then it is that the soldier's heart is moved—the strong man is a child again. You will see the great tear glisten on his war worn cheek. and he will say, "I will be a better man, and try to meet them in Heaven. if it be my lot to fall in my country's service." Ah! war is not all pomp and glitter, and rolling of drums and gleaming of bayonets, nor is it the deadly conflict's gaping wounds of dead men slain. It has its quiet and tender side as well. And sometimes the most reckless, and most hardened man in sin and vice will open the secret casket of his heart, where he keeps in concealment a little treasure of love, and let you look upon the gem in all its loveliness. O, then, friends at home, who have dear ones in the army fighting for their country's liberties, write to them often, send them loving messages, and they will shed a bright light over their pathway. Then do all you can to encourage every feeling that will tend to keep gentle and pure the minds of your loved ones in the army, for remembrance is the cream, the golden cream of life.

The Arrest of Minnesota Soldiers for Doing their Duty.

A member of the 9th Regiment has written to the St. Paul Press a full account of the arrest of Co's. C. and K. of that Regiment, for rescuing a family of slaves from the clutches of their master who was trying to run them through to St. Louis. All honor to our brave boys for the noble deed. We copy the letter below.

In Prison at Jefferson City, Mo.,
November 28, 1863.

"I have this morning seen in a copy of your paper, bearing date the 21st inst, a piece written from Camp Brown, signed R. M. W., giving us commendation for the deed for which we are now in prison at Jefferson City, We are highly pleased to see the papers of our own State so highly commend us to the citizens of our own beloved Minnesota, for doing an act we believed only our duty as soldiers in the service of our country and our God, to do.

Of this deed I will proceed to give you a brief account. On the morning of the 12th at an early hour, a negro slave came into camp and reported that his wife and six children, and other slaves, amounting to eleven in all, belonging to a man then in the rebel service, were taken on the night previous by the son of the owner, who attempted to put them on board the cars at Sedalia, a station twenty miles above us on the railroad. but the troops at that station being informed of it by our informant, would not allow them to be put on the cars at that place, and their master asertaining this fact, escaped by going around Sedalia.

He again made the railroad at a small town six miles below Sedalia, called Residence. Finding no resistance there, he boarded them, as we were informed, to ship them out of the State.

The troops at Sedalia finding he had escaped them, sent our informant to let us know that they would be down to our camp at nine o'clock A. M. Being thus informed in presence of all the boys, forty-one immediately volunteered to proceed to release them as soon as the train should arrive. The boys soon fell into line, anxious to proceed to a deed we believed to be our responsible duty as soldiers to perform.

Our band of forty-one, composed of Companies C and K, 9th Regiment M. V. was headed by our ever generous and brave Sergeant F. Marchant. We proceeded to Otterville, a mile above camp, where we knew the train would stop as usual to take on passengers, and to our satisfaction we had to wait but a few minutes; when the train came up and stopped. Seeing the negroes on board, led by Sergeant Marchant, we boarded the cars and requested the negroes to step off the train. You may be sure they readily complied with our request.

At this period of our story a couple of men stepped up and asked our authority for demanding the slaves. They informed us that they were officers, but seeing nothing that we should recognize as officers, we felt in no way under their commands. Their overcoats hid their shoulder straps, if they had any. Our reply was that we had authority.

By this time the slaves were off the cars. We stepped off after them and the train then went on. The master did not make his appearance, which I think was safest for him. We waited a moment to listen to the conversation between our informant and his family. From his wife we learned that when boarding the slaves on the previous night her brother tried to make his escape. When his master shot him through the head three times. He was found that morning lying dead but a few paces distant.

For this act of humanity we were arrested that evening, and the next morning we were brought to Jefferson City and put in prison. We have been here two weeks on part rations and many have to buy a good share of their provisions, as enough is not given us to satisfy hunger.

We cannot learn that any charges have been perfered against us, and I see nothing to cause me to believe that we are as likely to be here for two months to come as we have been for the two weeks past.

Sale of School Lands.

Charles McIlrath, Esq., State Auditor, returned on Monday from his tour of School Land Sale, having been occupied just twenty-six days. The total amount of sales made in November is $156,000, of which sum there was paid as principal and interest $36,000. The average price per acre was $6.25.

Of the funds raised by this sale $15,000 are invested in State War Loan Bonds bearing 7 per cent. interest,—$20,000 in U. S. Bonds of 1861 bought at 97 1-2c, now worth $1,08, and the balance in U. S. 5-20's.

The whole amount of sales up to the present date, is $552,000, of which amount $126,000 has been paid in. The interest on the above sum, which can be divided among the counties for the year 1864, is $38,640.

Rating the entire school lands in the organized counties, at the average rate for which the sales last month were made, their aggregate value is $8,250,000.—St. Paul Press.

General D. H. Hill, of the rebel army, appended to a leave of absence this explanatory note: "Approved upon the ground that brave men of the army should be permitted to go home whenever practicable; otherwise all the children to be born during the war, and the usual period afterwards, will be the offspring of cowards at home who have substitutes and are otherwise exempt."

General News Items.

The Russian Admiral Lessoosky recently sent to the Mayor's office a letter containing $4,700, contributed by the officers of the Russian fleet as a present to the poor of New York city, to be expended in the purchase of fuel for them. The gift was accompanied by a few modest lines returning thanks, on behalf of the admiral and all the officers, for the kindness with which they had been treated by the citizens of New York.

At the recent election for Governor of Georgia the contest was very spirited, a determined attempt to defeat Gov. Brown. The vote shows that Brown had 36,558; Hill, 18,121; Furlow, 10,024—total vote, 64,704, For President the total vote was 106,365; so there has been a falling off of nearly 43,000, or nearly 40 per cent.

The foreign diplomatists at Washington are said to consider the occupation of Brownsville by Banks as one of the most important successes of the war, and calculated to lead to most important consequences in our foreign as well as domestic relations. It is considered as certain to bring the new French pretensions on this continent to a head.

Various Journals are discussing the suggestion of a call for 100,000 or 200,000 volunteers to take Richmond, and release our starving and dying countrymen held there as prisoners. If this work could be done at all, by this process, it could be done in three months after the crusades were landed on the soil of Verginia.

A regiment of colored troops, from Maryland, 1,000 strong, reached New York Wednesday evening, en route to New Orleans. They quartered at the Park Barracks, and met with no molestation! They sailed for New Orleans Thursday.

Congressional Proceedings.

Washington, Dec. 7.

House.—At noon Ethridge, Clerk called the House to order, and said he would proceed to call the roll of members; but of such members only, whose credentials show they were regularly elected in accordance with the laws of their State and the United States.

The Clerk then read the roll of members from all the States except Maryland, West Virginia, Oregon, Missouri and Kansas.

Mr. Stevens of Virginia desired that the credentials of those whose names were not on the roll be read.

The Clerk said he had placed on the roll the names of all those whose credentials bore evidence in accordance with the law passed by this House last March.

Mr. Washburne asked whether there were any contestants of seats.

The Clerk replied there were three or four from Missouri, one from Virginia, and one from Kentucky, as he recollected.

Mr. Stevens repeated his request.

Mr. Stiles, of Pennsylvania' asked for the reading of the act of March and the act was read as follows.

'An act of Congress regulating the the duties of the Clerk of the House of Representatives in preparing for organization of the House: Be it enacted. That before the first meeting of the next Congress, and every subsequent Congress. that the Clerk of the next preceeding House of Representatives, shall make a roll of the Representatives elect, and place therein the names of all persons and of such persons only whose credentials show that they were regularly elected in accordance with the laws of their State respectively, or the laws of the United States.

At the request of Mr. Stevens, the Clerk read the form of the credentials of the Missouri members, which he had ruled out for informality.

Mr Dawes offered a resolution that the names of the Maryland delegation be placed on the roll of the House and moved the previous question which was seconded.

Mr. J. C. Allen moved to lay the resolution on the table,

The question was taken on Mr. Allen's motion to lay Mr. Daw's resolution on the table, and was decided in the negative—yeas 73, nays 74 which caused applause from the galleries and on the floor of the House.

Mr. Dawes demanded a vote on his resolution, which was adopted, followed by applause. So the names of the Maryland delegation were placed on the rolls.

Mr. Davis, of Maryland, offered a resolution directing the names of the Missouri members to be placed on the rolls.

On motion of Mr. Garfield the credentials of the representative from Oregon were read, and that gentleman's name was entered on the rolls.

On motion of Mr. Pike a similar course, was adopted in regard to the member from Kansas.

On motion of Mr. Stevens the same course was adopted with regard to the names of members from West Virginia.

Mr. Stevens then asked that the credentials of the Louisiana members Messrs. Beal, Coltman and Baker, be read.

The credentials state that the election was held in accordance with the constitution and laws of Louisiana. and that said election was held on the 2nd of November last. The credential of the Louisiana members, are signed by G. L. Riddle Gov. of Louisiana.

Mr. Stevens moved that the names of the Louisiana members be stricken from the rolls.

Mr. Brooks said the House could elect a Speaker without the names of these gentlemen being stricken from the rolls.

Mr. Stevens protested against their admission, but in order to facilitate the organization of the House he would withdraw his motion for the present, and again offer it when the Louisiana members were to be sworn in.

The credentials of members from Virginia were read at the instance of Mr. Lovejoy, and a resolution was offered that these names be entered upon the rolls.

Mr. Washburn moved that the House proceed to the election of a speaker viva voce, which was agreed to.

Mr. Washburn nominated Mr. Colfax.

Mr. Pendleton nominated Mr. Cox

Mr. Ancona nominated Mr. Dawson.

Mr. Guder nominated Mr. Mallory.

Mr. Steele, of New York, nominated Mr. Stebbins.

Messrs. King and Blair, of Missouri wsre also placed in nomination.

Messrs. Pendleton, Dawson, Wadsworth and Pomeroy, were appointed tellers to conduct the election.

The House then proceeded to vote with the following result:

Whole number of votes 181; necessary to a choice 82. Colfax, 101, Cox, 42; King, 4; Mallory, 10; Stebbins, 8; Dawson, 12; Blair, 2; Stiles, 2.

The Clerk declared Mr. Colfax duly and legally elected. The announcement was greeted with vociferous applause.

Messrs Dawson and Cox were appointed a Committee to conduct the Speaker to the chair.

The Speaker on taking the chair delivered a briefeloquent and patriotic address, which was recieved with applause.

How to Mail Transient Papers.—Those who wish to mail transient papers, and other printed matter, should remember that the new Postal law requires that they should be enclosed in a wrapper in such a way that the paper, book, magazine, &c., can be easily drawn out for examination by the Postmaster, which he is required to do by law, to detect writing inside. Many persons do them up so securely that they cannot be got out except by tearing the wrapper to pieces. Now such documents are sent as letters, and the person receiving them pays double letter postage there on!

The law referred to is as follows:

And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General has authority to prescribe by regulation, the manner of wrapping and securing letter postage, not lawfully franked, so that the same may be conveniently examined by postmasters; and if not so wrapped and secured, the same shall be subjected to letter postage.

The instructions of the Postmaster General are "that all mail matter, (except letters and seeds,) must be so wrapped or envelopd with open sides or ends, as to enable the postmaster to examine the package without destroying the wrapper; otherwise such packages must be rated with letter postage."

The exchange of prisoners has entirely ceased, because the rebels refuse to accord to ours who fall into their hands in all cases the usages of civilized warfare. They have also acted with perfidy in many cases, in relation to their men paroled by us. One of the principle causes of the stoppage of the exchange however, is their treatment of colored prisoners of ours, whom they have used with the barbarity of heathen times—selling them into slavery and otherwise maltreating them. This, of course, has had effect in stopping recruits of colored men, a very important matter in the present stage of war. Falling in his attempts to have them treated as human beings, Mr. Lincoln himself has peremptorily ordered that no further exchanges should be made till this and other matters were settled on a fair basis. The President is determined that every man, black or white, who takes up arms for the flag shal be treated in all respects as such.

Negroes are being drafted in large numbers in Baltimore. The hotels are almost stripped of waiters.

Fort Porter, at Buffalo, was burned on Tuesday night. Nothing but stone walls are standing. It was situated outside ot the city limits. The fort was locked up as usual; no one was missed, nor had there been any fire within. The fire seemed to have originated in the room used for storing soldiers clothing. About $4,000 worth of this was in at the time, and all but one bale was consumed A box containing about 1,000 rounds of ammunition—all that was outside of the magazine—was also got out. The origin of the fire is not known.

A lion, belonging to a menagerie in Spain, lately achieved his independence by breaking through his cage. He killed three men, severely wounded twelve others, and was proceed- to exterminate the population, when he called at a butcher's shop, attracted by the meat that was already dressed. He ate and was caught.

The Way to Approach Richmond—Union Feeling there—A released Union prisoner writing to the Philadelphia Press says: "We have heard much about the approaches to Richmond, but by all means beware of the route by the Mechanicsville turnpike. The Virginia Central is a good way to approach, and the Lynchburg pike is also a good way, there being no battery at all on the south side of James river. The number of troops in Richmond is as follows: the City Battalion, 800 strong; State guards, 275: Tar-heel, or North Carolina Guards, 250; Militia, 1,600. One-half, or more, of the population of Richmond would be glad to see the Union troops enter the city. I heard Captain Maul, company E, City Battalion, say he did not believe he could get one of his company to fire on the Union troops if they were in Richmond. The North Carolina troops, to a man, say that they will not fire on the Union troops. Seven-eights of the militia say the same thing."

Enrollment List for Revisal.

CIRCULAR FROM THE PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL.

War Department,
Provost Marshal General's Office,
November 17, 1863.

[Circular No. 101.]

As complaints have been made that errors have occurred in the enrollment of the national forces, by the omission of persons who have been enrolled, and by the addition of names of persons, who by reason of alienage and for other causes, ought not to have been called upon, and as it is desirable that the Department should have such information as may be necessary in order to do full justice to all parties, it is hereby ordered,

That the Board of enrollment of each district shall have printed lists of names and residences of all persons enrolled in each sub district, prepared and exposed to public view, in at least five places in each sub district, and as many more as the Board shall deem necessary. The names shall be placed upon their lists in alphabetical order Public notice will be given by advertisements upon the lists of names and in newspapers, That any person who may appear before the Board and claim to have his name stricken off the list, if he can show to the satisfaction of the Board that he is not and could not be at time fixed for the next draft liable to millitary duty on account of

First—Alienage.
Second—Non-residence
Third—Unsuitableness of age.
Fourth—Manifest permanent physical disability

Persons who may be cognizant of any other persons liable to military duty whose names do not appear on the enrollment list are requested to notify the Board of Enrollment, who shall thereupon direct the enrolling officer of the sub-district in which the parties reside to ascertain the facts, and enroll the parties so reported, if they are found to be subject to enrollment.—

These may avail themselves of the privilege of appearing, as specified in paragraph first, as if they had been originally enrolled.

Boards of enrollment will use all diligence in the collection of necessary information, and making requisite notes to perfect the enrollment, will proceed as provided in paragraph one, until the 28th of December, 1863. after which no cases will be heard. As soon as possible there after, a list proposed corrections will be made out according to the printed instructions, and transmitted to the Provost Marshal General, for the purpose of correcting the lists on file.

JAMES B. FRY,
Provost Marshal General.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Enrollment of the First Congressional District of Minnesota, will be in session at Rochester, from the 2d to the 20th day of December, 1863, to hear and determine all causes for exemption enumerated in the above Circular from the Provost Marshal General's Office: Washington, D. "A THING OF BEAUTY IS A JOY FOREVER." —A handsome face, and a form of grace are always attractive to the eye, and nothing helps so much to improve the looks of man or boy, as a suit of fine clothes, purchased at S. RANDALL's Clothing Store, situated on Front street, opposite Bradley's store, where can be found good Winter Clothing, Hats and Caps, Undershirts and Drawers, and Gent's Furnishing Goods, at very low prices. He pays the highest cash price for Wheat. 19-1y*

A pressure of job work compels us to leave out of our paper this week nearly two columns of new advertisements. Most of them will appear next week.

Finch & Thurston are paying the highest cash price for hides.

HAYNE'S PATENT PORTABLE BRACE FENCE is on exhibition near the Clifton House. We shall notice it at length next week.

A GOOD SALE.—Wm Russell, of Sterling, last week, sold a quarter section of prairie land and twenty-eight acres of timber for $1,000.

The Town Treasurer has given notice that all persons who have not paid their Poll tax for 1863, must do so within twenty days or costs will be added thereto.

Next Monday David Lamb takes charge of the District School in West Mankato. His experience renders him a very competent teacher.

Charlie Heinze has appeared "officially" in to-days paper, and by reading his card you will see that he is prepared to wait on customers with promptness.

Notice Prael & DuBussoin's card in another column. They keep constantly on hand all kinds of Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, Groceries, Crockery and Hardware, and pay the highest cash price for wheat.

REMOVED.—Mr. Jone's Saddlery and Harness Shop is now in the rooms recently occupied by the UNION office. He is prepared to fill all orders entrusted to his care.

WAR MEETING.—Arrangements are in progress to have a War Meeting in town next Tuesday evening. That's right. Bring out the cannon, and let us renew the stirring times of 1861.

Business in town has not been very active during the week. The bad roads have prevented the farmers from coming to market with their wheat and other products. The price of wheat to-day Tuesday, is 70 cents.

WHO HIT HIM?—The Record is as snappish as a bear trap because some "unprincipled scoundrel" has been calling its editor a secessionist. When the shoe pinches, oh, how it hurts. Bet lightly on your "lying and stealing" brother.

NEW FIRM.—H. P. Christensen has taken into partnership with him his brothers C. S. C. and J. P. Christensen, and will hereafter do business under the firm of Christensen & Brothers.

Mr. Kilgore has got his drug store open, and his goods are neatly arranged for the inspection of customers. He solicits custom from those at home and abroad. Mr. K. has had a number of years practical experience in the drug business, and is thoroughly competent to compound prescriptions.

A NEW CHURCH.—The friends of the Congregational Society of Sterling are earnestly engaged in getting subscriptions for a church. They have over three hundred dollars subscribed, and intend to build a Church edifice worth six hundred dollars. It is a worthy enterprise and we hope they may succeed.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—The following sales of real estate were made during the past week; Henry Wittrock sold to George W. Hurd the S. hf of N. E. qr of Section 4, town 108, N of Range 26 W.—eighty acres, for $700. Mrs. Betsy Wallingford sold to C. R. Mims lots three and four in block forty-four, for $100 each.

We notice that quite a number of letters are placed in the Post office from time to time, having upon them one, two and five cent Revenue stamps instead of postage stamps. People should have in mind that Revenue stamps placed upon letters for postage are worth no more than so much blank paper, and that such letters are thrown aside for non-payment.

EXEMPTIONS FROM DRAFT.—In our advertising columns this week will be found a circular from the War Department, in regard to posting up enrollment lists for revisal, and showing the manner in which exempts must proceed in order to have their names stricken from the list. We are informed that Captain See is having the names of all those enrolled in his each county in his district printed. Those for Blue Earth will be ready in a day or two.

FARIBAULT COUNTY.—Quite a number of men from this County have already enlisted in Howard's Company, and others are coming forward almost daily to join a service intended wholly for the protection of our frontier.

The rumor current in town that Lieberg is going to move away is not true. He says he is bound to stay in Mankato, and shave all the people he can.

A CLASS IN GERMAN.—Mr Thoms is getting up a class for the study of the German Language. It is a good thing and the time spent in acquiring a knowledge of it will not be thrown away. He is succeeding well.

TRUTH WILL SUCCEED.—This fact needs no new proof, but it has one in the success of D. B. DeLand & Co's Chemical Saleratus. It has been introduced only a few years and yet we see it taking the place of all other kinds in the market. Would a bogus article do this?

At the Owatonna term of Court there were eleven town site suits, all of which were decided in favor of the settlers.

Bloodhounds are used in the South by slaveholders and rebels, to hunt slaves and conscripts; but we were unaware that our forces used dogs in fighting the rebels. It appears however, that the 91st New York volunteers, in the fight at Irish Bend, was assisted by a pet dog, which did the full duty of a soldier in the hottest of the engagement, and captured a rebel. The 91st was heavily pressed by a whole brigade of rebels, when the command was given to charge the enemy. That regiment dashed forward at double quick, driving the rebels before them pell mell. The dog joined in the charge, leading his regiment some distance, and, as the rebels were obliged to scale a fence in their flight, was soon on their heels. He made for one of them, whom he seized by his rags, and there held him until a member of the 91st came up. The rebel though a private, refused to surrender his musket to anybody of lower rank than himself. He was captured by a dog nevertheless.

MEMPHIS, Dec, 5.

Gens. Chalmers and Lee commanding the Rebel forces at Moscow and Lafayette on the Memphis & Charleston Railroad, yesterday noon burned Lafayette and some small bridges on the road. We repulsed them at Moscow.

Col. Hatchs' Cavalry followed their retreat and forced them to another fight, four miles out and again repulsed them. Between 20 and 30 of their dead were found on the field. Among them 3 officers. Their loss probably reached a hundred.

Our loss was three killed 48 wounded, 41 missing.

Col. Hatch of the 2nd Iowa, commanding the Brigade was seriously, though not dangerously wounded, the ball piercing through the leg.

The telegraph is working to Corinth to-day, and the Railroad will be working to morrow.

At this writing 5 P. M., firing is heard in the direction of Moscow.

The contest for Speakership ceases to be exciting. Colfax has it all his own way. He goes into caucus with about 85 votes pledged.

Hawkins Taylor of Iowa has the start for Doorkeeper, and D. P. Brook of California, the inside track for Postmaster.

The chief contest now is for Clerk. Green Adams of Kentucky, McPherson of Pennsylvania, Fessenden of Maine, and Buffington of Massachusetts are prominently mentioned.

The man who courted an investigation, says it isn't half so good as courting an affectionate girl.

THE FRENCH CROWNS.—A letter from Rome makes the following singular statement: "Emperor Napoleon has long been completed, and that there is another made for the Empress Eugenie, both masterpeices of the goldsmith's art. The affair of coronation of the Emperor and Empress again occupies the thoughts of the Courts of Paris and Rome, and it is principally sanctified by the Holy Father; but the latter, beset by the champions of the Duc de Bordeaux, has not yet been able to overcome his scruples. To obtain this object, the Pope has just been offered the restitution of his two provinces—namely, the Legations—if he will decide on going to Paris to crown the Imperial couple. This point is much discussed at the Vatican.

A RICH LEGAL PROCEEDING.—A novel proceeding recently took place at the session of court in Warren county, Pa., which proves that the dry desert of the law is now and then enlivened by some oasis of fun not laid down in the chart of Coke and Littleton. The members of the bar of that county presented to the court, Judge Johnston presiding, a petition asking the court, in consideration of the fact that legal business had become dull, to select two members of the Warren bar to attend to the business of the profession, while the rest of them should be assigned some respectable and useful employment, and that employment outside of the bar for the support of the two who should remain. The matter was taken under consideration.

Punch "invents" sometimes. His latest thing in this way is the anecdote he tells us of Paul Redford. It seems, according to the old hunchback, that on each occasion of the Princes going to the Adelphi to see 'Leah,' he has been moved to tears by the charm of Miss Batemans excellent acting. On this being mentioned to Paul Redford he exclaimed.—Perfectly true to nature, my boy—what can you expect from Wales but blubber?"

MRS. WEKEFIELD'S NARRATIVE OF INDIAN CAPTIVITY has just been published and is now ready for distribution. It is a neatly printed book of 54 pages, and gives a full narrative of the sufferings she underwent during the six weeks of her captivity. Price 25 cents, or mail 28 cents. Address J. H. Tibbetts, Shaopee, Minnesota.

Editors inserting the above, with this notice, and sending a copy of the paper containing the same, marked, to the Shakopee Argus, will receive a copy of the work by return mail.

A LETTER from Chattanooga states that on the 10th inst, a flatboat while crossing the Tennessee with the equipage of the 33d regiment New Jersey volunteers, sprang aleak and sunk. Thirty-six of the crew were saved, and five were lost, as follows. Patrick Delaney, company B; Louis Wilte, company I; Oscar Lathrop and Theodore Drake, company, C and one other, all from Newark.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS.—While Brandreth's Pills are so potent for good to diseased bodies, they are harmless as bread. The babe at the breast or the man of ripest years, and delicate females, are certain to receive an increase of health from the use of these pills blessed of Heaven.

It has been said by an able physician, that "this medicine always benefits and never injures." Wherein is the superlative quality. The Brandreth Pills have no power or action but upon impure humors in the blood. They seize only the impurities in and around the parts affected by disease; all parts involved in diseased actions are operated upon, and cleansed from all fulness, and reinfused with "Life" by the wonderful curative powers contained and inherent of the most justly famed BRANDETH'S PILLS

Millions of people, whose lives appeared to be at the last ebb, worn out by fever's consuming fires, by consumption's insidious advances, by sacking torments of inflammatory rheumatism, have been cured by the use of these pills. The persons are living witnesses, and thousands, are residents in every city in America. Principal office, No. 294, Canal St, N. Y.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A, M, in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P Folsom in 1852, and by E D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds ($\frac{2}{3}$) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota,"

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors, at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th, 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.32, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Valuable Lands for Sale.

BY direction of the Hon. Secretary of the Interior, the undersigned will receive sealed bids for the purchase of any or all of the lands hereinafter described, they being among the choicest and best farming land in Minnesota.

These lands comprise what are known as the Winnebago Trust Lands in the State of Minnesota, and will be sold to the highest and best bidder in tracts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres each, under the provisions of a treaty concluded with the Winnebago Indians, April 15th, 1859, and an act of Congress, approved February 21st 1863, entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their Reservation, in Minnesota, for their benefit."

No bid will be entertained at a rate less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

In case a bid is accepted, the party making the same will be notified as soon thereafter as practicable. If within thirty days after such notice the party shall fail to make payment to the undersigned, the land for which such bid was made will be subject to sale to any other person.

Patents will be issued and transmitted to purchasers as soon after payment as the same can be prepared. Payments may be made either in cash or in the certificates of indebtedness of the Winnebago Indians, issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for the debt of said Indians, and secured to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said lands by the third article of the treaty above mentioned. The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. All bids must be sealed and addressed to the undersigned, Washington City, D. C., and endorsed "Bid for Winnebago Trust Land."

REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER,
REV. JOSHUA LEAVITT, D. D.,
And THEODORE TILTON,
Is issued in the same form, and at the same low price of

TWO DOLLARS

Per annum, notwithstanding the great advance in white paper.

It Affords its Readers:

Fair and thoughtful editorial discussions of the most important facts, occurrences, and interests of this nation, and of the world.

A comprehensive record of facts, men, and movements of the Religions World.

A full and careful weekly history of the progress of the rebellion.

Ample chronicles of the important general news, home and foreign,

Fair and careful accounts of new books; made on the express principle of serving as a safe-guide to buyers.

Interesting correspondence from Washington, from the West, from the army, from abroad.

Six columns a week of carefully selected Family Reading; being prose and poetry, suited to interest both the Old and the Young.

A full chronicle of the progress of business, and of the current prices of merchandise, produce, and live stock in New York City.

A carefully prepared commercial and financial article, embracing the latest and most reliable information in regard to the money market, trade, commerce, and business generally. In this department The Independent has secured a valuable reputation for fairness, boldness, and for discussing all secular topics from the highest moral stand-point.

A Dry Goods Report, furnished particularly for country merchants, a weekly report of the prices current in this city of all descriptions of domestic dry goods. The information thus furnished, so entirely reliable, cannot be found in any other periodical. We have the best of evidence on that point from all quarters. We are not permitted to give the names of the parties who make this weekly report to us, but will state that they are two competent merchants, with entirely different connections, and that they are well known throughout the United States, and have been for years. The prices given are the exact figures at which the several descriptions of goods are sold for NET CASH by the jobbing houses in this city on the day said report is made, viz., Wednesday of each week.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood: and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

PLEASE CALL AND EXAMINE, OR SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

HARPER'S

New Monthly Magazine.

Critical Notices of the Press.

The volumns Bound constitute of themselves a liberary of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier.

The most popular Monthly in the world. —N. Y. Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People: and the popularity it has acquired is merited. Each Number contatns fully 144 pages reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good woodcuts: and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature. —Trubner's Guide to American Literature London.

No Magazine in Europe or America is so well known, none has half as many readers; and, we may safely say, none has received so large a tribute of admiration from the cultivated class, that delighted in a healthy, diversified, elevating periodical literature. It is the foremost magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Bulttmore.)

TERMS.

The papers of permanent value which have been published in almost every Number render a complete set of Harper's Magazine a desirable acquisition to public or private library. The Publishers can supply complete sets, or any number from the commencement. For Twenty five cents they will send any number, by mail, post-paid. Any Volume, containing six Numbers will be mailed post-paid, to any place in the United States within 1500 miles of New York, for two dollars and fifty cents. Complete sets, now comprising Twenty-five Volumes, will be sent by express, the freight at the expense of the purchaser, for one dollar and eighty-eight cents per Volume.

One copy, one year, $3,00: Two copies one year $5,00; Harper's Magazine and Harper's Weekly, one year $5.00

An extra copy, gratis, for every club of Ten Subscribers, at $2,50 each, or, 11 copies for $25,00

Clergymen and teachers supplied at $2,50 a year. The Semi-Annual Volumes Bound in cloth, $2.50 per Volume. Muslin covers, 25 cents each. Nett. When ordered sent by mail, eight cents additional must be remitted for postage. The Postage upon Harper's Magazine must be paid at the office where it is received. The postage is thirty-six cents a year, or nine Cents for three months.

SINGER & CO'S.
Letter "A" Sewing Machine.
WITH ALL THE IMPROVEMENTS.

IS the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful, substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, etc,, of the very best quality.

THE OIL PAINTING.

A STORY OF LIFE AS IT IS.

BY MARY W. JANVRIN.

CHAPTER II.

'Deuce take me, my dear fellah,' remarked that gentleman admiringly, 'if I can understand how it is you stand so high in the good graces of the women–aw! You never do anything in general to please 'em, only now and then to stand god father to a pretty fledgling–aw, and then, when you drop off, you manage to bring away their good graces and all that sort of thing, and leave 'em all your friends–aw. Deuced if I can understand it–aw! But I did think, at last, you'd found the right one–aw. Every body spoke of your being 'taken' so, last night; and 'pon my honor, Lorry, I didn't see but your time had come–aw!'

'Come, Hal, let's change the subject,' said Harriman good naturedly, 'and what say for a walk with me down to my office?' rising as he spoke, and divesting himself of dressing-gown, preparatory to drawing on his walking gear. 'I've got the knottiest case coming on shortly. By-the-by look at this exquisite thing I bought at Williams' and Everetts' yesterday,' pointing to a sketch in oils upon the walls—a small oval picture, leaning down from its space between two of Landseer's startlingly faithful animal pieces. 'Do you know that I am wholly in love with this painting? It is simple, you see—only a country landscape, 'The Homestead'—this old farm-house, with the Honeysuckle and roses, and these two magnificent elms in the foreground—but there is heart in it. And I have got it in to my head, that a woman's graceful fingers painted it—also, that there is a history to it. Somehow, it haunts me, and though it's here in my room, it follows me to my office in business hours. They could not give me the artist's name, only the initials—'S. R.' are here in the corner.

By this time, they had gained the door of Harriman's room; and soon were down stairs, out on the slippery pavement.

'Pon my word, that was a pretty little picture, and quite interesting–aw. You're a queer fellah, Lorry, fishing up pictures, and then romancing about them–aw. Never saw any thing in pictures that took my fancy particularly–aw; can't go country, trees, and all that sort of thing so well as life in old Boston; and I'd rather look at a pretty ballet girl than all the landscapes you can buy–aw. By-the-by suppose we slip into the Academy to night, to see Booth in King Richard–aw. He's deuced fine–aw!'

'Agreed! but won't you go down to my office?' asked the young lawyer, as his companion paused at the foot of School street.

'Not to day, my dear fellah; believe I'll go up town and make a few calls–aw. Morning–aw.'

'Good morning, then,' echoed Harriman, briskly walking down Washington street with an energy one who had seen him an hour earlier, would not have given him credit for.

CHAPTER III.

'It is perfectly unaccountable, Rena, how you have managed to be so long in doing the dress. Helen must have it to wear this evening, and here are the sleeves to make and the trimming to be put on. It never can be done in season!'

Mrs. John Horton's voice had a tone of asperity, such as she would have used in addressing a dilatory sewing-girl, instead of her husband's niece, Rena Rivers. But, little by little, had she effected her purpose of crowding that young girl into that position; and Mr Horton only busy with his own business cares, knew nothing of the true state of affairs under his roof. He only met his niece at table with the rest of the family; and the fact of her being in mourning for her mother, was given as excuse that she did not mingle in the society into which his daughter was now constantly drawn.

'The dress shall be ready in season, aunt. Helen shall not be detained a moment by its completion,' was the quiet reply of the girl, taking up the rich silk from the arm of a chair in the chamber alloted as her own room.

'Well, I hope it will. Helen has set her mind upon wearing it this evening at Miss Marlboroughs. I thought you would have ample time on it, or I would have employed Miss Henderson. Helen herself would come in, and help arrange the trimming, but it wearies her eyes to do anything of the kind; and then, she hasn't your taste, child. You do seem to have a natural knowledge of these things—and I only wonder how you acquired it in your country home. Don't pray, let Helen be disappointed in the dress, if you have to hurry; you can rest afterwards,' urged Mrs. Horton, leaving the chamber.

Going direct to her daughter's elegant dressing-room, where that young lady was indolently curled up in the depths of a large arm chair, listlessly turning the leaves of Madame Demorest's latest 'Mirror of Fashion,' she exclaimed:

'I cannot imagine what that girl finds to employ her time about. Your dress is not finished yet! But she promises to have it done, though I had to speak quite sharp to her. This comes of having ones poor relatives in the house. I really thought we could dispense with Miss Henderson altogether; but Rena does not seem to accomplish the works he did the first three months she was here.'

'She shall get the dress done for me to night. Not one step do I go to Mrs. Marlborough's without it!' said Miss Helen, cooly and decidedly. 'But you see to it, mamma. you've a way of getting those things out of Rena, you know; and it saves me the trouble. I'm not going to worry; its only two o'clock, and she's got all day, and till nine this evening; and she's a rapid sewer. I'll venture that I wear it to-night. Won't you order the carriage, mamma? I want to drive round and take in Florence Dayton, and go down to Hovey's. They are opening some superb spring silks,' and the selfish girl tossed the periodical on the table, and began her preparations for morning shopping.

In the room Mrs. Horton had left—a room scantily furnished, with a cheap chamber set and overlooking the back yard—Rena Rivers took up the rich dress to be worn by her cousin that evening to one of the latest, but most brilliant reunions of the closing season; and, with a pale face, and a bitter expression upon her exquisitely chiselled, but tightly-compressed lips, commenced plying the needle. For several minutes she sewed in silence, her lips tightening, and a hard expression gleaming in her large brown eyes; then suddenly she flung down the dress, and rising, commenced pacing the floor, venting her thoughts in hasty words of indignation.

'Is this always to continue? this to be my life here—my Uncle John's wife's and daughter's sewing girl? Am I to be kept immured in this chamber, day after day, employed only to minister to their selfishness and heartless vanity? Is this the home to which I came, expecting at least some love and consideration? Oh, mother, mother, that you were not under the grave-sod, or your child was at rest by your side!' and she gave vent to a passionate burst of tears.

Minutes passed ere the girl regained her calmness; but when she had returned to her sewing, she sat with thoughtful eye and busy brain, revolving a project which, more than once of late had crossed her mind.

Two or three exquisite paintings, products of her own mind and hand, graced the walls of her little chamber, otherwise destitute of all ornaments; and carefully hidden in the closet, was a box of unfinished sketches, into which, in former days of happy leisure in the distant farm-house among the blue hills of her granite home, where she had grown up heart to heart with nature in her grandest moods of beauty, the girl had woven some of her own golden creations. For Rena Rivers had been an artist; and though she had carefully refrained from displaying her talents to the worldly relatives among whom her lot had lately been cast, her prudent aunt had not been slow in turning her niece's native sense of the fitness of form and colors to a practical use, in the getting up of her own and her daughter's wardrobe.

'It may come to that, after all,' said Rena decidedly, looking up at the little paintings. 'I cannot endure this servitude much longer; and at any rate, if I earned ever so little, I should be free. I think I could find a sale for my paintings—I did very well with the copy of the dear old homestead,' and here the tears came into her eyes, as she gazed up at one of the paintings—a country farm-house, with honeysuckles and roses about the windows, and two magnificent elms keeping their sentinel guard before the door—'and I think I could sell enough pictures to pay for a little room somewhere, and support myself. There must be enough wealthy people in this great city to help me live—and I cannot stay here, for it would kill me. I used to tell mother, that perhaps I should support myself some day by my pictures, but she never, never thought this would really come!' and here the tears again filled the beautiful brown eyes, and blinded her at her work.

An hour passed; during which the sharp click of her needle through the thick silk, or the rustle of its sheeny folds, alone broke the silence; and then came the clear quick peal of the bell, as though rung by a strong, impatient hand, echoing even to the back chamber where the girl sat. In a few minutes a domestic opened the door, and said,

'Miss Serena, a gentleman who comes here often is in the parlor, and wants to see you. I told him Mrs. Horton and Miss Helen had gone out and he seemed sorry not to see some one of the family; and so I told him Mr. Horton's niece was in. Will you please go down?'

'Is my Aunt Sarah out? I did not know it,' asked the girl, rising.

'Yes, she and Miss Helen went down town, shopping, most an hour ago,' replied the domestic.

Rena paused a moment, to brush her silky brown hair, and assure herself that her neat mourning dress was presentable, for it was something of an event to her to be summoned to meet any visitor under her uncle's roof. Presently she stood in the sumptuous parlor, to find herself face to face with a tall, handsome gentleman who stood before one of the paintings, but turned to meet her as she entered.

'Mr. Horton's niece, I believe?' he said enquiringly, with courteous manner.

'Miss Rivers,' replied Sena, modestly, but without shyness; for she possessed rare native grace of demeanor. 'The girl said you wished to see me as the family are out?' she continued.

'Yes. I called to see Miss Helen or her mother; and, finding both out, was about leaving, regretting I could not leave a message without danger of the girl's mutilating it, when I was told that Mr. Hortons niece would take my errand. But I was not aware, before, that Miss Helen had a young relative staying with her. You have not been in town long?' he added, with interest which might be read in the gaze that dwelt upon the girl's pure, pale face, her wealth of dusky hair, and slender figure.

'Five months. This has been my home since last November. My bereavement will explain why I have met no guests under my Uncle John's roof,' she replied quietly, glancing down to her black dress, while a shade of sadness spread like a wave over her countenance. 'But your message, sir? I will deliver it. Who shall I say called, sir?'

Her calm, sweet voice recalled the gentleman from his abstraction.

'I beg your pardon,' he said with a little confusion, unwonted in his manner. 'Please say to your aunt and Cousin Helen that Mr. Laurence Harriman regrets that a telegram just received calls him to Chicago to-day on very important business. I was under engagement to escort Miss Helen to the morrow night's opera; but as this business trip cannot be postponed, I stole a moment, to call and make my excuses with my good-byes.'

'I regret that you could not have delivered them to my relatives instead of me,' said Rena, as she bade him good morning at the door of the parlor.

'But I have gained the pleasure of a new acquaintance because of your aunt's and cousin's absence—and I trust we shall meet again,' gallantly replied Harriman, bowing himself in to the hall.

Rena went up to her room, and mechanically took up her work once more.

'And this is the Mr. Harriman of whom I have heard Mrs. Horton and Helen speak so often? He will marry Helen, of course. They speak of him as almost engaged to her. He said we should meet again. I wonder if he likes paintings? I noticed he stood before that copy of one of Rosa Bonheur's in the parlor.'

And, as Laurence Harriman, Esquire, descended the marble steps and walked rapidly down the pavement from Mr. Horton's mansion, he soliloquised something after this fashion:

'Quite a discovery! This lovely young girl in that house five months—and I never heard it before. Ah, my Lady Horton, that's one of your plots. Not in society, of course—her mourning is sufficient excuse for that; but all those quiet evenings I've spent there, 'quite one of the family,' as my lady has often said, and they not to mention, even, that Mr. Horton had a niece in the house. Can Helen be a party to this? Can she fear the attraction of this sweet little wood-violet beside her more regal charms? If I thought so!" but the scornful curve of Harriman's handsomely cut lip was more expressive than words would have been. 'Well, I am booked for a more constant visitor at the Hortons than ever!' he added, as he hastened along.

Coming from Court street where he had been into his office for a moment, he came suddenly upon the merchant, Mr. Horton, just coming out of State.

'Ah, glad to meet you, Mr. Horton! Just been up to your house to leave word that a sudden business dispatch takes me to the West by the evening train, thus preventing my fulfilling an engagement to the opera to-morrow evening with your daughter. Mrs. Horton and Miss Hellen were not at home—but, by the way, I met a charming little niece of yours. You mustn't keep her so secluded; but give her a dip into our society. In mourning, I know, but too much is injurious to the most modest flower.

'Ah, yes; sister Serena's child—glad you met her—wonder you havent before. She's shy, my wife says. So You're off on business. A prosperous trip, Harriman: good-bye!' was the merchant's characteristic answer, as they parted.

After Mrs. Horton's and daughter's return from their shopping expedition as they sat at lunch, Rena entered the dining-room.

'You needn't have come down! I ordered your lunch sent up to you—for I knew you wouldn't have much time to spare from your sewing!' said her aunt imperiously.

'I beg your pardon, Mrs. Horton, but I have an errand to Helen,' replied Rena, with composure, though stung to the quick by her aunts insolence. 'Mr. Laurence Harriman was here, and left word that, being suddenly called to the West on business, he must be excused from his proposed attendance upon you to the opera to-morrow night.' Looking straight at her cousin.

'Well, Ann could have done the errand,' said Mrs. Horton, with asperity. 'How came you—' she paused here.

'Ann knew nothing of it, beyond to tell the gentleman of your absence, and then to mention that one member of the family was in—and that, Mr. Morton's niece—upon which he called for me,' replied the girl. 'So I have faithfully delivered his message. That is all.'

'You! you go down into the parlor to see Mr. Harriman! I should like to know what business you have to—

'Helen, my love, you forgot this was caused by Ann's stupidity,' said Mrs Horton soothingly to her daughter, who had burst forth in this beautiful tirade upon her cousin. 'You can go now,' to Rena, 'but remember in future, that it is Ann's business to wait upon the door and receive all messages for the family!' with meaning emphasis upon the two latter words.

Pale as death under this additional insult, Rena bowed with a haughtiness of gesture that would have done honor to a queen, and swept from the apartment. Again in her chamber, she sat down to her work, pushing aside the tray containing her scanty lunch the servant had taken up. She did not break forth into the weak refuge of words, but her nostrils dilated and quivered as do those of a young blood horse under the lash, and her lips were so painfully sent a rigid white line was fairly defined about them. At dinner she did not go down; and only when evening fell, and after the gas had been lighted in her room, and she had shaken out the last fold of the silk dress she had finished, and carried it to the large dressing-room where Mrs Horton and Helen were sitting—only then did she speak since she had received their insults.

'The dress is finished, madam; and I will take this opportunity to add, that I have put into it, the last stitch I shall ever set under my Uncle John's roof.'

She spoke startingly clear, and looked very white and firm.

'Very well; and what do you intend to do for a living, I would inquire? Sit with folded hands, and view those pictures on the walls of your room, as I have observed you to do for quite a space of time, whenever I have come upon you unawares?' replied Mrs. Horton sarcastically.

'How I earn my living is no concern of yours, since I refuse to accept it longer in my Uncle John's house, as yours and Helen's slave!' answered Rena in those same clear, and firm tones, as she left the apartment.

'Did you observe how she always 'says my Uncle John's house'—as though it were not mine or yours equally? You do not think she would dare leave us, Helen?' asked Mrs. Horton, a little nervously. 'Your father would make a pretty fuss.'

'I'm sure I neither know nor care. Don't bother me with the artful little piece!' snappishly exclaimed the elegant young lady. 'She's getting above her place, I should think with this day's doings!'

'Yes, indeed, I should say that also,' echoed the mamma. 'Just to think of your fathers saying, at dinner, that he met Harriman this morning, and he called Rena 'a charming little thing,' or something like it. I really believe your father was fool enough to be flattered by it; he always did think too much of that country sister of his, this girls mother. I wish she would leave us. If we could only get her out of the way without your fathers knowledge, for he'll be insisting upon her coming into the parlor next—though, Thank heaven! he's home so little I could manage that. If she should go off to earn her own living, I'm not sure but it would be cheaper in the end to have Henderson back.'

Suffice it, that sooner than she had expected, the tide turned as Mrs. Horton had desired it. Within two days, without word to her uncle, Rena Rivers left the house, leaving no clue of her future home and both Mrs. Horton and Helen succeeded in pursuading him that this step had been taken by an ungrateful girl, who had thus forfeited all further claim upon his kindness.

This event was very artfully introduced in conversation at one of Mr. Marriman's early visits on his return when he alluded to having met Mr. Horton's niece: and that lady flattered herself that the affair had terminated.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

AN AFFECTING SCENE.—James Southerland, who has been on trial at Indianapolis for four days, on charge of killing Reddy A. Small was acquited on Thursday. His wife and three children were in court at the time. After the announcement of the verdict there followed a scene, says the Indianapolis Journal, not often witnessed in a court room. The prisoner that was—a prisoner now no longer—fell upon his knees and lifted his eyes toward heaven, and uttered an earnest prayer of thanksgiving and praise to God whose justice and mercy had been so wonderfully manifested in him. The prayer was irresistibly eloquent, and when the Amen was pronounced, Amen came back in response from every part of the room, and there were tears in every eye. All rose to their feet; the acquitted man advanced and took each juryman by the hand with a fervent 'God bless you! You have saved an innocent man from shame and disgrace you have taken a foul stain from my name. God bless you!' And to the prosecutor, whose conduct in case commands admiration of all for fairness and honesty, he gave a cordial 'God bless you!' The old white-haired father, whose firm trust had supported the son in the dark hours of trial, now melted in tears of joy that his son was acquitted of guilt, and his own good name retained untarnished. The Judge, wiping his eye of tears that had come unbidden, ordered the Sheriff to adjourn the court

Letters to Soldiers.

A RETURNED soldier, making a report to a religious society said:—I wish to speak of one way in which you can do great good to your soldier friends in the army. Write to them many letters. I am a sergeant, and so I have had much to do with the mails of our regiments. I know that when mail arrives, every man looks for a letter. All are looking. They want to hear from home. They think they ought to be remembered. And when the mail comes in, bringing no letters from loved ones at home, I have seen men become exasperated under the bitter disappointment, and take to gambling and drinking, and any thing to kill time. They will do these things out of spite. They will say, 'Our friends at home care nothing for us, and they must not blame us if we care nothing for them.' And so they will attempt to drown their sorrow in the indulgence of some kind of vice. If you could know how much good, kind, Christian letters from fathers mothers, and brothers and sisters, and wives and sweethearts, do to soldiers, in comforting, restraining and encouraging them, I think you would not be slow to write such letters to them. Oh! if you would save them from ruin write many letters. Then they feel that your eye is upon them, and they are restrained from falling into many sins."

ORIGIN OF THE CLINTON GRAPE.—I have never seen any account of the origin of this well known variety in the Horticultural journals, and send it to you thinking you might perhaps think it worthy of a place in your columns. It is from the Elmira Advertiser.

'The well-known 'Clinton Grape,' which is described in the fruit books with no account of its history, originated in the horticultural amusements of a student of Hamilton College.—This original Clinton Grape vine is now growing over a tall elm tree on the east side of Dr. Curtis's house, formerly the residence of Dr. Noyse, on College Hill. It was planted there in 1821 by Hon. Hugh White, of Cohoes, who was then a junior in the College. He had planted a quantity of grape seed, two years before in his father's garden in Whitsboro. Out of the hundreds that came up from this planting, Mr. White selected one that looked promising, and planted it east of Dr. Noyes' house, with whom he then boarded. This seedling vine proved to be a rampant grower and wonderfully productive. Since his graduation Mr. White has been a worthy member of Congress, yet there is no act of his public career ever brought him more satisfaction than the planting of that seedling grape vine.—J. W. C. in Gardner's Monthly.

'Where's my wife!' inquired our friend Nil, on returning home early one evening, and missing his better half.

'She has gone to bed with the toothache,' was the reply of some member of the family.

'Well,' said the indignant Nil, 'if she had rather go to bed with the toothache than to go to bed with me, let her go!'

And he forth settled himself to the perusal of the latest war news.

The Winter at Washington.

It is more than whispered that the federal capital is to be gay beyond all precedent during the coming winter. To be sure, says a New York cotemporary, a formidable hostile army is nearer to it than Waterloo is to the capital of Belgium, and it may be that the boom of cannon will startle the revellers at Washington as the salvos of Quarter Bras startled Wellington at Brussles. But what of that? As Mark Tayley observes, there is nothing like being 'jolly.' Mrs. Lincoln's term of mourning is near its close, we believe, and it is anticipated that the executive mansion will be the scene of a series of the most brilliant entertainments ever given in this country. A new aristocracy has sprung up during the progress of the war, and its members, are anxious to air their 'fine new honors.' Besides the tame prigadiers and colonels who prefer lingering near the center of patronage, and sunning themselves in the smils of beauty to risking a course of steel, lead and saltpeter, there are the contractors with their wives and families enough of themselves to form a peerage. To be sure, these people have not the air and bearing of the habitues of the White Mouse in Mrs. Madison's time, but they are richer, and if you double plate pinchback with gold, it is only by the ring of it that the bogus basis can be detected. There is a thing like jolity in the midst of civil war. The carnival of fashion will serve to prevent the public mind from dwelling too seriously on the carnival of death. While tens of thousands of brave men are periling their lives to defend Washington why should not Washington dance? Set to, partners!

AN INVITATION TO DINNER.—It was observed that a certain covetous rich man never invited any one to dine with him.

"I'll lay a wager," said a wag, "that I get an invitation from him."

The wager being accepted, he goes the next day to the rich man's house about the time he was to dine and tells the servant he must see his master immediately, for he can save him a thousand pounds.

"Sir," said the servant to his master, "here is a man in a great hurry to speak with you; he says he can save you a thousand pounds."

Out came the master.

"What is that, sir?—can you save me a thousand pounds."

"Yes, sir, but I see you are at dinner—I will go away and call again."

"Oh, pray, sir, come in and eat dinner."

"I shall be troublesome."

"Not at all."

The invitation was accepted.—When dinner was over and the family retired, "Well, sir, to your business. Pray, sir, how am I to save one thousand pounds?"

"Well, sir, I hear that you have a daughter to dispose of in marriage."

"I have."

"And you intend to portion her with ten thousand pounds."

"I do."

"Why, then, sir, let me have her, and I will take her with nine thousand."

The master of the house arose in a passion and kicked him out of doors.

TEA TASTING.—Few of our readers are aware that tea tasting is reduced to a regular profession, one which is as certain death to a man as the continued practice of opium eating. The success of the tea broker or taster depends upon the trained accuracy of his nose and palate, his experience in the wants of the American market, and a keen business tact. If he has these qualities in high cultivation, he may make from twenty to forty thousands dollars per annum while he lives, and die of ulceration of the lungs. He overhauls a cargo of tea, classifies it, and determines the value of each sort. In doing this he first looks at the color of the leaf, and the general cleanliness of it. He next takes a quantity of the herb in his hand, breathing his warm breath up on it, he snuffs up the fragrance. In doing this he draws into his lungs a quantity of irritating and stimulating dust, which is by no means wholesome. Then, sitting down to the table in his office, on which is a long row of little porcelain cups and and a pot of hot water, he "draws" the tea and tastes the infusion. In this way he classifies the different sorts to the minutests shade, makes the different prices, and is then ready to compare his work with the invoice. The skill of these tasters is fairly marvellous, but the effect of the business on their health is ruinous. They grow lean, nervous, and consumptive. At the end of a hard day's work they feel and act as fidgety as if they had the hysteries.

An old widower says, when you pop the question to a lady, do it with a kind of laugh, as if you were joking.—If she accept you, very well; if she does not, you can say you was only in fun. Masculine and feminines who have planted helpmeets underground seem to know a thing or two.

The School Meeting.

We were pleased to notice the interest manifested at the School Meeting last Tuesday evening, by so many of our citizens. Heretofore all attempts of the kind have seemed to prove abortive, but the unanimous action at this meeting shows that our citizens are getting awakened to the importance of building a school house, on such a scale as will meet the wants of our rapidly increasing population. A very competent committee consisting of Messrs. Wampler, Seward, and Lytle was appointed to examine and report a plan for a school house at an early day.

A resolution was also offered by J. A. Williard and carried unanimously to the effect that the Legislature be memorialized at its next session for the passage of an act authorizing the district to issue bonds for an amount not exceeding $8,000 for the purpose of building a school house, said bonds to be payable in from four to eight years, at an interest of not more than ten per cent, per annum.—the interest and one-eight of the principal to be paid annually."

Such a feeling of unanimity in favor of a school house that will be ample in its accommodations, and an ornament to our town, argues well for the success of the project. The day of indifference to the educational interests of Mankato has gone forever. We shall rever o this matter again.

RELEASED.—Several of our citizens it will be remembered among whom was Isac Roat E. C. Howard and M. ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Letter from the Ninth Regiment.

HEADQUARTERS 9TH MINN. VOLS.
CAMP BROWN, JEFFERSON CITY Mo
December 5th. 1863

To the Editor of the Union:

Companies A. B. E. and I are under orders for Rolla, and will probably leave on the morning train, under command of Capt. H. B. Strait.—Capt. S. has had command of the six companies now at this post, for several weeks.

Col Wilkin is in command of Sub-District No. 1. of Dist ict Central Missouri. Capt. Skaro is commandant of the post of Jefferson City, and Capt. Wellman at Lamine Bridge, Lt. Col. Marsh, Capt. Dane and Lieut. Clark have removed to Sedalia, where they are dilligently examming into the alleged outrages perpetrated upon citizens by soldiers. Lieut. Keysur is also on special duty in this city as a member of a military commission.

Capt. Barrett of Co. G. has been promoted to a Coloneley of a Negro Regiment, and is ordered to Memphis for duty. He is a faithful energetic and efficient officer.

Dr. Dixon has been appointed Asst. Surgeon of the Regiment vice Dr. Dewey resigned, and reported for duty on the 3rd inst.

The health of the Regiment is very good.

Two commissioned officers and an enlisted man from each company are now en route for Minnesota to obtain recruits for the Regiment. Corporal Wesley Maxfield of Co. E. will visit Mankato and vicinity, and will be glad to have those who desire to enlist in an old Regiment give him a call. There are some who prefer to join the older organizations. To such Mr, M. will give a cordial welcome, and can guarantee that the 9th stands A No. 1 with the highest military authority in this Department. The Orderly bearing and efficiency of the men has already become proverbial. Read the testimony and see if it is possible to color the picture to highly. Capt. LEVI BITCHARD Inspector General for Central Missouri, makes use of the following language in his report.

"Inspected Companies A. B. D. E. F. and I. 9th Minn. Vol. Inf'ty, at Jefferson City, October 25th."

"This is a most excellent Regiment The Field, Staff and Company officers are, I think with scarcely an exception, a most efficient set of officers. Colonel WILKIN is deserving of high praise for the unremitting vigilance he has exerted to make his command efficient."

"To give the general idea of the qualities of this Regiment in a very very few words, it is only necessary to say, the camp is their home and they "try to make it what it should be."

"I am informed by Col. Pound commanding the Post, that no complaints are made against them by the citizens, a circumstance so unusual that it deserves to be mentioned. All drills and parades, are regularly attended to.

The following endorsement from Maj. Gen. Schofield upon the back of the report speaks for itself:

HEAD QRS. Dept. of Missouri.
ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28th, 1863.

Respectfully referred to Brig. Gen. E. B. Brown, commanding Central District of Missouri for his information. The report of the Inspecting officer of Central Missouri of a highly complinientary character, only reiterates the many favorable reports that the Major General commanding the Dept. has already concerning the superior efficiency, energy and high military bearing and character of Colonel Wilkin and the officers and soldiers of his most excellent Regiment; for all of which the Major General commanding, desires upon this occasion, to tender his sincere thanks and commendations to Colonel Wilkin, his officers and men."

The enlistment of negroes goes briskly on, as soon as mustered in by the Provost Marshall they are sent by rail to Saint Louis, the general rendezvous for colored recruits. A force of several thousand can be raised in this State.

It is really refreshing to contemplate the returning loyalty of the slave-owing Missourians. They are now. as they always have been loyal to the core. In view of the traveling proclivities of this species of property, these men prefer a three hundred dollar certificate and now begin to urge the "unbleached Americans," to go forth and battle for truth and humanity.

NOW AND THEN.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
December 3rd, 1863.

The following extract from Special Order No. 514 of the War Department will indicate the steps taken in the direction of a much needed reform.

Messrs. James C. Wetmure of Ohio, Gardiner Tufts, of Massachusetts, W. Y. Sellock, of Wisconsin, A Chester of Illinois, and J. C. Rafferty of New Jersey are hereby constituted a Board of Inspectors, whose duty it shall be to inspect from time to time, the Government General Hospitals and Military Prisons in the Department of Washington under such special instructions as shall be given by the War Department."

The character of the gentlemen composing this Board is sufficient guaranty that their duties will be faithfully performed and there is no doubt that much good will be done, and that soldiers in hospital and their friends at home will have reason to be grateful to these gentlemen.

While, in general, our hospitals are most admirably conducted, the inmates receiving as much care as their great number will permit, and comparatively little complaint is heard, yet all in charge of men in these institutions are not what they should be and it will often happen that soldiers are made to suffer unnecessarily.

Heretofore it has been difficult for private citizens to bring cases of manifest hardship and sometimes injustice to the attentino of the proper authorities owing to the immense amount of labor which the officers have had to perform. This is now remedied for it is made the duty of this Board as Hospital Inspectors to inspect every hospital in the Department of Washington at least once a month "as to their general order and cleanliness, as to the efficiency faithfulness and humanity of the surgeons and other attendants." They are to inspect particularly the management of the kitchen, the condition of stores and supplies both as to food and clothing, the nature of the cooking, the quantity and quality of rations, to receive complaints of patients as to grievances and give them a reasonable hearing and investigation, and if any just ground for complaint be found or any reform needed, they are to apply for the remedy to the Surgeon in charge. If that does not accomplish the end they are to report the facts directly to the Secretary of War.

As Prison Inspectors—They are required to inspect the Military Prisons in this Department at least once a month as to their general management, order and cleanliness; to observe as to the efficiency, fidelity and humanity of the officers in charge—to see whether the prisoners are as well cared for with regard to rations, beds, clothing, fuel and other accommodations for comfort and decency, as is consistent with the fact of imprisonment and the necessities of proper discipline.

In this connection I know they will be the means of effecting a much needed retorm. It has been a source of a great deal of complaint that men are imprisoned without a chance of being heard, and that arrested deserters are treated with unnecessary severity. While it is not the object in the appointment, nor the purpose of the Board to shield traitors and deserters from just punishment yet our Government desires that justice should be done to all and in this show her entirely dissimilar even to the rebel government.

It is made the duty of this Board to inspect the records of the Prisons, and see that against the name of every person admitted there is a clearly written statement of the offence for which he is committed, and if from time to time, persons are found imprisoned for a long period without an official hearing, or who appear to have been overlooked by the proper military authorities, or with regard to whom there is evidently some error in the charge, they are to report such case with a clear statement of the same to the Secretary of War.

The Gold Speculators of Gotham.

The editor of the Metropolitan Reporter is after the Jeff Davis gold gamblers of Wall street with a very knotty cudgel. Just hear him.

Persons of long experience in Wall street have for some time been aware of a decided reinforcement of the ranks of the speculators in gold. Few of the faces to be seen daily in the crowd in Exchange Place but are strangers recently attracted to the arena of speculation. Many ask who these new men are, but few are able to answer the question. The original speculators in gold have nearly all disappeared, and the new men are strangers. They are all believers in a future depreciation of the currency, and they are all bitter enemis of the Administration. They are mostly refugees from the Border States—men of such doubtful loyalty as to be found in those regions: St. Louis merchants too well known as avowed rebels to remain at home, New Orleans Union men who hath taken the oath of allegiance—with reservation, residents of Louisville, Memphis, and in some instances, persons from the out and out rebel States. These men would all take the oath of allegiance after every meal, if they thought it would benefit them, and would chuckle over the defeat of Rosecrans before the holy Book they had kissed was dry. They are a bad set of men; they wear the mask of loyalty and profess to abhor the rebellion, but secretly they hate our free institutions, and hope for the success of the nation's foes. They will earn and make all the money they can here, but would do their best to destroy the country whose liberal institutions afford them so many advantages. In any other country they would not dare to show their faces in public, and would be constantly under the eyes of the police. Here they live at our best hotels, appear openly in Change, and use their position and the money they make lor the benefit of their rebel friends. Their wives and daughters establish kitchens on David's Island to furnish luxuries to the rebel wounded, and smuggle to persons about to be exchanged, percussion caps to enable them better to shoot our brothers and sons. The city is crowded with these detestable characters, and it is about time that they were exposed to the honest scorn of loyal people. Foes on the battle-field we can respect but traitorous sneaks who eat their bread and butter among us, while all their sympathies are with the foes of the nation, are entitled to no higher feelng than contempt.

Our Course in this War.

We have been denounced in every State in rebellion against the American Government, as a traitor to the South, as the enemy of our native land, and as a vile Abolitionist, aiding the cause of oppresion and murder. We expect still to be denounced by that class of villains who, have failed to realize what they expected when they urged on the rebellion And who of them has not been disapointed in their villainous expectations? But we regard their censure as a high order of praise. We have gone in for the maintenance of the laws of the United States, the suppression of this causeless and wicked rebellion, which has devastated the South, and sent thousands to the graves that ought now to be filled with the rotten carcasses of the leaders who brougt it on. We have gone in to perpetuate the liberties which our patriot fathers fought and bled to secure, and we are proud of the part we have acted, and only regret that we were able to do so little in so great and good a cause. Had it been in our power, we should have consigned to graves of infamy every traitor by whom our country has been beleagured, And even now, we say let measures be adopted by the Federal Government, and its friends and agents, that will intensify and deepen the wholesome fear which, East, West, North and South, has begun to blanch the brazen faces of the Judases who embarked in the now exploded, but disgraceful and infernal crusade!—Brownlows Whig.

Gen. Halleck's Report.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.

The report of the General-in-Chief is a very lengthy document. It is mainly a summary of military operations since his annual report refering to the army of the Potomac.

The General says Burnside's proposed change of base was not approved of by him. Burnside therefore concluded to cross his army by the fords or the upper Rappahannock and then move lower to seize the hights of Fredricksburg, while a small force was to be sent north of the river to enable the government to re-open the railroad. His plan was assented to but not approved. Burnside, instead of crossing the Rappahannock by fords as he expected to, marched his whole army down to the north bank of that river. Lee's army in the mean time moved down to the south bank of the river.

At this time it was fordable a few miles above town and Sumner asked permission to cross and occupy the Hights, but was refused, and no attempt was made to effect a passage till December 11th, when Lee's army had been concentrated. The defeat which we suffered soon after resulted it is alleged, from neglect to forward pontoon trains from Washington, whereas the pontoons were not at the time in the army of the Potomac delay was unavoidable, and on the investigation of matters. Burnside pronounced it so.

Speaking of matters in the department of General Grant, General-in-Chief says it has been alleged Grant positively disobeyed the instructions of his superiors. It is hardly necessary to remark that Grant never disobeyed an order;—moreover, he has never complained that the Government did not furnish him all means and assistance in its power to facilitate the execution of any plans he saw fit to adopt.

The General suggests as the rebel army lives upon the country through which it passes, the federals do the same as it facilitates rapidity of movement. Our commanders in the rebel States hardly ever find supplies, and in the border States it is difficult to distinguish between real friends and enemies.

In regard to Sutlers, he says the entire abolition of the system would rid the army of much, and the nuisance of Sutler's stall and booths in camp. It would improve the discipline and efficiency of troops in many ways, and particularly by removing from the camps prolific evils of drunkenness. It is not difficult for Sutlers to act the part of spies, informers, smugglers and contraband traders.

The General thinks a Court Martial too cumbrous a proceeding for the battle field, and suggests some more speedy punishment. He suggests that the Inspector General's Department be merged in the Adjutant General's Department.

He recommends several reformations in relation to the organization of Regiments, Brigades and Corps.

He claims that the cartel for the exchange of prisoners has been violated in relation to colored soldiers.

TRUE eloquence I find to be nothing but the serious and hearty love of truth; and that, whose mind soever is preserved with a fervid desire to know good things, and with the dearest charity to infuse the knowledge of them into others, when such a man would speak, his words, like so many nimble and airy servitors, trips about him at command, and in well ordered files, as he would wish, fall abruptly into their own places. —Wilton.

Among the recent appointments is that of Lysander Mill, Esq., of Thomaston, Maine, to the position of District Attorney of Idaho. Mr. Mill is a lawyer, and was formerly captain in the 20th Regiment,

The President has yielded to the demand made by the Loyal League Representatives; General Schofield has been removed and ordered to report at Washington.

Senator Wilkinson gave notice of his intention to ask leave to introduce a bill granting pensions to those who were wounded in the late Indian massacres in the State of Minnesota.

A Letter from Morris Island says the rebels are working very hard on Sullivans Island, increasing their works, and shelling Forts Gregg and Wagner.

Rebel iron-clads occasionally showed themselves, but always careful to avoid fight. The rebels are said to be very savage, and do not spare our men when they catch them,

Reconnoisances were made from the fleet and much reliable information obtained by our forces.

Senator Bayard of Delaware, never having taken the anti-rebellion oath required by the act of last session, was informally reminded of the fact by the Vice-President to-day, and requested to say whether he was prepared to take it. He replied in the negative, adding that if the Senate, by a formal vote, required him to take it, he should resign.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
BITTERS.

A pure and powerful tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and bowels, Cures, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes. Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetters Stomach Bitters. This popular preparations contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants. It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, Hostetters Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard. In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehensions of an attack. escape the scourge, and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health, within a few days by the use of Hostetter's Bitters. The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic and hence it works wonders in cases of Dispepsia and in less confirmed forms of indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless aperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs: Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous attacks, Lowness of spirits and fits of languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes. The agony of bilious colic, is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally restoring to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented. As a general tonic. Hostetter's Bitters produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and debility and decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-inforce and re-establish them. Last but not least, It is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements, present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day. No family medicine has been so universally, and it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as Hostetter's Bitters. Prepared by Hostetter and Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere. 23

HELMBOLD'S.
Genuine Preparations.

COMPOUND Fluid extract Buchu, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Watery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflamation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, of abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of power.
Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves, Trembling,
Horror of Disease. Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face
Pallid Countenance

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the Patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases"

"Insanity and consumption." Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess the records of the insane aslyums. And melancholly deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which Helmbold's Extract Buchu invariably does,

A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females—Females—Females—In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex. whether arising from indiscretion Habits of Dissipation, or in the decline or change of life. "A THING OF BEAUTY IS A JOY FOREVER." —A handsome face, and a form of grace are always attractive to the eye, and nothing helps so much to improve the looks of man or boy, as a suit of fine clothes, purchased at S. RANDALL's Clothing Store, situated on Front street, opposite Bradley's store, where can be found good Winter Clothing, Hats and Caps, Undershirts and Drawers, and Gent's Furnishing Goods, at very low prices. He pays the highest cash price for Wheat. 19-1y*

Sickness and death among our friends has rendered necessary the performance of other than editorial duties this week.

Martin Conroy has lost a span of horses, for which he advertises and offers a liberal reward.

We call attention to the card of Mrs. Oglesby in this week's paper. She will soon receive a large lot of choice millinery goods, of which when received, she invites a careful inspection by her numerous patrons.

Wednesday evening's mail from St. Paul was unable to cross the river at St. Peter, and therefore obliged to lay there over night. The next morning, in crossing on the ice at the lower ferry, the horses broke through in water about twelve feet deep. They were extricated with much difficulty.

The annual moving of the benches, desks, stoves and other traps of the Mankato School District took place last week, and the same are now located for a season in the lower town, in Bigler's Hall and in the building next north of the Germania House

The benches &c having got some what rested after their rough handling consequent upon a change of location, and having become reconciled to their new quarters, the school machinery went into operation. Monday of this week under the guidance of Mr. Ferguson and the Misses Parsons and McKinney. Before the close of the second day of the session the several school rooms were all uncomfortably crowded with juveniles of various ages and sizes, and yet there are a great many parents who have not, but are intending soon to send their children to the district school. How they can all be accommodated is a question, unless one squad stands out in the cold while the others are receiving instruction. Now, with the best of teachers what great improvement can parents expect in their children, when the latter are uncomfortably huddled together in small ill ventilated school apartments, where, from the necessity of the case, any proper classification of scholars is impossible.

Ladies' Fair.

We are requested to state that the next meeting of the Ladies Sewing society will be held at the house of J. R. Brink on Tuesday afternoon next. The mite society in the evening at the same place. The sewing society have, during the last few weeks, made a great many fancy and other articles which they propose to offer for sale on Christmas Eve, perhaps at the Hall in Leech's building. Also a Christmas tree in connection with the fair. Besides the articles for sale the society will give a supper. The price of admittance has not yet been definitely fixed, but a ticket of admission will entitle the holder of it to a free supper.

The object of the society is to procure means to furnish and fit up the Presbyterian Church which will be erected in the spring.

We hope our citizens will be liberal in their attendance and in their purchases for a worthy object.

We are requested also to state that a committee of the society will call upon the ladies of the town probably Saturday or Monday next to solicit such aid for their supper as the ladies in their generosity and good will may be willing to give.

For the Union

Leaves have their time to fall, and flowers to wither at the north wind's breath, and stars to set; but thou hast all seasons for thine own oh. Death. Inscrutable are the ways of Providence, yet faith should teach us that unqualified submission to every decree of Heaven is a duty which all should most earnestly strive to obtain; remembering that the hand of our Heavenly Father has sent the affliction. A lovely amiable child has been taken, the youngest of a family circle hitherto unbroken, the darling of a mother's heart, the cherished flower so soon withered on earth, yet to bloom beyond the fadeless shores of time, where we hope to rejoin our loved one. Oh, blessed truth, may it bring comfort to the anguished hearts of the mourners, A dear little sister has been removed from the home to which the brother fondly hopes to return. The light of her presence has gone out, the music of her voice is hushed, and every breeze sighs a requiem for the departed. A playmate has been taken from her companions, who was beloved by all; long will she be remembered by them as they drop the warm tear of affection. She is not lost, but sleeps to awake when a voice shall come, saying "I am the Resurrection and the Life." F. E. W.

THROW IT TO THE DOGS.—If every housewife will throw her cheap, worthless kinds of saleratus and soda to the dogs and use only the Chemical Saleratus, there will not be so much yellow, heavy bread and biscuit to be seen, and consequently not so many dyspeptic, ailing persons. Get a paper and if it does not suit your money will be refunded.

Last year one million hogs were slaughtered in Chicago, worth $10,000,000. The number this year will be of twice that value.

YOUNG MENS LYCEUM.—There will be a meeting to-morrow evening at City Hall for the purpose of organizing a Lyceum. All who are interested in the undertaking are invited to be present, and help get up a good society.

MARRIED.

In Chicago, on the 3rd inst. by the Rev. R. W. Patterson, EPHRIAM MINER, of St. Joseph, Mo. and Miss AMANDA P. STOEK of Mankato.

IN Garden City, on the 12th inst., by S. C Clark Esq., ROBERT HOY, and Miss URSULA BECK both of Shelbyville.

At Judson, on the 8th inst. by Rev B. Y. Coffin, Mr CHARLES L. TIDLAND of Judson, and Miss EMILY. A. MORRILL, of Mankato.

The happy couple will accept our thanks for a beautiful wedding cake. Charley has learned a Morell which we trust he will cherish through life. Our best wishes attend them

DIED.

In Vernon, on the 14th inst., the wife of Ches[illegible]

IN Mankato, on the 15th inst, Hattie C. youngest daughter of R. J. and Marie E. Sibley, aged 14 years and 15 days.

Hattie has gone from among us. She was one of the most promising children of Mankato, but a short time ago. She was full of life and animation and in fact posessing one of those free and untrammeled spirits that always calls forth the admiration of those who love the simplicity and innocence of childhood. In the days of her association with us, she was regarded by the writer, and many others known to him, as the bright gem of the family. But for the last two years she has suffered what none but those in like circumstances can tell, and all her sufferings were endured with such patience and fortitude as to reflect beauty and gentleness—the type of the sweet spirit dwelling within. How soon the brightest flowers wither and die, and how chilling are the blighting winds of earth,

'But though earths fairest blossoms die,
And all beneath the skies is vain,
There is a brighter world on high,
Beyond the reach of care and pain,'

And from that land by faith we hear,
Farewell father and mother dear,
I am not dead but singing here;
Released from earth—toils and pains,
I sing with saints in heavenly strains.

Enrollment List for Revisal.

CIRCULAR FROM THE PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL'S OFFICE,
November 17, 1863.

[CIRCULAR NO. 101.]

As complaints have been made that errors have occurred in the enrollment of the national forces, by the omission of persons who have been enrolled, and by the addition of names of persons, who by reason of alienage and for other causes, ought not to have been called upon, and as it is desirable that the Department should have such information as may be necessary in order to do full justice to all parties, it is hereby ordered,

That the Board of enrollment of each district shall have printed lists of names and residences of all persons enrolled in each sub district, prepared and exposed to public view, in at least five places in each sub district, and as many more as the Board shall deem necessary. The names shall be placed upon their lists in alphabetical order Public notice will be given by advertisements upon the lists of names and in newspapers, That any person who may appear before the Board and claim to have his name stricken off the list, if he can show to the satifaction of the Board that he is not and could not be at time fixed for the next draft liable to millitary duty on account of

FIRST—Alienage.
SECOND—Non-residence
THIRD—Unsuitableness of age.
FOURTH—Manifest permanent physical disability

Persons who may be cognizant of any other persons liable to military duty whose names do not appear on the enrollment list are requested to notify the Board of Enrollment, who shall thereupon direct the enrolling officer of the sub-district in which the parties reside to ascertain the facts, and enroll the parties so reported, if they are found to be subject to enrollment—

These may avail themselves of the privilege of appearing, as specified in paragraph first, as if they had been originally enrolled

Boards of enrollment will use all diligence in the collection of necessary information, and making requisite notes to perfect the enrollment, will proceed as provided in paragraph one, until the 20th of December, 1863. after which no cases will be heard. As soon as possible there after, a list proposed corrections will be made out according to the printed instructions, and transmitted to the Provost Marshal General, for the purpose of correcting the lists on file.

JAMES B. FRY,
Provost Marshal General.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Enrollment of the First Congressional District of Minnesota. will be in session at Rochester, from the 2d to the 20th day of December, 1863, to hear and determine all causes for exemption enumerated in the above Circular from the Provost Marshal General's Office: Washington, D. BRANDRETH'S PILLS.—While Brandreth's Pills are so potent for good to diseased bodies, they are harmless as bread. The babe at the breast or the man of ripest years, and delicate females, are certain to receive an increase of health from the use of these pills blessed of Heaven.

It has been said by an able physician, that "this medicine always benefits and never injures." Wherein is the superlative quality. The Brandreth Pills have no power or action but upon impure humors in the blood. They seize only the impurities in and around the parts affected by disease; all parts involved in diseased actions are operated upon, and cleansed from all foulness, and reinfused with "Life" by the wonderful curative powers contained and inherent of the most justly famed BRANDETH'S PILLS

Millions of people, whose lives appeared to be at the last ebb. worn out by fever's consuming fires, by consumption's insidious advances, by sacking torments of inflammatory rheumatism, have been cured by the use of these pills. MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book "E" of mortgages. on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18. 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P. Folsom in 1852, and by E. D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota,"

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th, 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.32, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863. at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Valuable Lands for Sale.

BY direction of the Hon Secretary of the Interior, the undersigned will receive sealed bids for the purchase of any or all of the lands hereinafter described, they being among the choicest and best farming land in Minnesota.

These lands comprise what are known as the Winnebago Trust Lands in the State of Minnesota, and will be sold to the highest and best bidder in tracts not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres each, under the provisions of a treaty concluded with the Winnebago Indians, April 15th, 1859, and an act of Congress, approved February 21st 1863, entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their Reservation, in Minnesota, for their benefit."

No bid will be entertained at a rate less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

In case a bid is accepted, the party making the same will be notified as soon thereafter as practicable. If within thirty days after such notice the party shall fail to make payment to the undersigned, the land for which such bid was made will be subject to sale to any other person.

Patents will be issued and transmitted to purchasers as soon after payment as the same can be prepared. Payments may be made either in cash or in the certificates of indebtedness of the Winnebago Indians, issued by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, for the debt of said Indians, and secured to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of said lands by the third article of the treaty above mentioned. The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved. All bids must be sealed and addressed to the undersigned, Washington City, D. C, and endorsed "Bid for Winnebago Tract Land."

REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER,
REV. JOSHUA LEAVITT, D. D.,
And THEODORE TILTON,

Is issued in the same form, and at the same low price of

TWO DOLLARS

Per annum, notwithstanding the great advance in white paper.

It Affords its Readers:

Fair and thoughtful editorial discussions of the most important facts, occurrences, and interests of this nation, and of the world.

A comprehensive record of facts, men, and movements of the Religious World.

A full and careful weekly history of the progress of the rebellion.

Ample chronicles of the important general news, home and foreign,

Fair and careful accounts of new books; made on the express principle of serving as a safe guide to buyers.

Interesting correspondence from Washington, from the West, from the army, from abroad.

Six columns a week of carefully selected Family Reading; being prose and poetry, suited to interest both the Old and the Young.

A full chronicle of the progress of business, and of the current prices of merchandise, produce, and live stock in New York City.

A carefully prepared commercial and financial article, embracing the latest and most reliable information in regard to the money market, trade, commerce, and business generally. In this department The Independent has secured a valuable reputation for fairness, boldness, and for discussing all secular topics from the highest moral stand-point.

A Dry Goods Report, furnished particularly for country merchants, a weekly report of the prices current in this city of all descriptions of domestic dry goods. The information thus furnished, so entirely reliable, cannot be found in any other periodical. We have the best of evidence on that point from all quarters. We are not permitted to give the names of the parties who make this weekly report to us, but will state that they are two competent merchants, with entirely different connections, and that they are well known throughout the United States, and have been for years. The prices given are the exact figures at which the several descriptions of goods are sold for NET CASH by the jobbing houses in this city on the day said report is made, viz., Wednesday of each week.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

New Monthly Magazine.

Critical Notices of the Press.

The volumns Bound constitute of themselves a liberary of miscellaneous reading such as cannot be found in the compass in any other publication that has come under our notice.—Boston Courier

The most popular Monthly in the world. —N. Y. Observer.

We must refer in terms of eulogy to the high tone and varied excellences of Harper's Magazine—a journal with a monthly circulation of about 170,000 copies—in whose pages are to be found some of the choicest light and general reading of the day. We speak of this work as an evidence of the American People: and the popularity it has acequired is merited. Each Number contains fully 144 pages reading matter, appropriately illustrated with good woodcents: and it combines in itself the racy monthly and the more philosophical quarterly, blended with the best features of the daily journal. It has great power in the dissemination of a love of pure literature. —Trubner's Guide to American Literature London.

No Magazine in Europe or America is so well known, none has half as many readers; and, we may safely say, none has received so large a tribute of admiration from the cultivated class, that delighted is a healthy, diversified, elevating periodical literature. It is the foremost magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more enterprising friend, than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant (Baltimore.)

TERMS.

The papers of permanent value which have been published in almost every Number render a complete set of Harper's Magazine a desirable acquisition to public or private library. SINGER & CO'S.

Letter "A" Sewing Machine.

WITH ALL THE IMPROVEMENTS

Is the best and cheapest and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines. This Machine will sew anything, from the running of a tuck in Tarlton to the making of an Overcoat—anything from Pilot or Beaver Cloth down to the softest Gauze or Gossamer Tissue, and is ever ready to do its work to perfection. It can fell, hem, bind, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can fell, hem, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter "A" Family Sewing Machine may be had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is, as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case, which, when opened makes a beautiful substantial, and capacious table for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—plain as the wood grew in its native forest, or as elaborately finished as art can make them. The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality,

THE OIL PAINTING.

A STORY OF LIFE AS IT IS.

BY MARY W. JANVRIN.

CHAPTER IV.

A YEAR went by; and one fine, sunny morning late in March, with the group of connoiseurs and dillentanti who found leisure to patronize and appreciate those creations that are not connected with the brokers and exchangers of State street and its vicinity, and who stood in the rooms appropriated to the annual 'Artists' Exhibition'—with that group, stood our friend, Laurence Harriman.

And yet, not alone were they present who visited paintings or purchased them from a love of Art solely; it was quite 'the fashion' to throng the picture galleries; and Mrs. Horton and her daughter Helen—Miss Drayton, the intimate friend of the latter young lady—Mrs. and the Misses Beals, with their erudite brother, whose predominant passion, still, was his love of fast horses—and our quondom acquaintance, Harry Templeton, gentleman of leisure and cultivated moustache—all met, and mingled with the throng of visitors.

The ladies of the party studied the catalogue, then scanned and criticized the paintings through their opera-glasses, the gentlemen divided their time between the pictures and the ladies—Templeton flitting from one to another, with a drawling complaint for all—Beals remaining as a fixture beside Miss Horton, commencing a conversation with some remark about a painting, and ending it with the customary eulogy of his 'span' and an invitation to ride behind them 'out to Brighton' the next morning, which invitation the lady curtly refused, wondering vexatiously why Laurence Harriman would never have done scanning that little picture away in the corner, snugly tucked in between two large marine pieces.

'What can be so remarkable in that little thing Mr. Harriman is studying so long? Let us go over and see, Florence,' she said; and straightway she and Miss Dayton had crossed to his side.

'We have come to aid you in your criticisms, Mr. Harriman,' she said sweetly. "What are you looking at? Let me see'—turning to her catalogue.

'No 44—The Homestead. Country landscape, with farm house, and elm trees. Artist, Serena Rivers,' said Miss Drayton, referring to the catalogue which she held. 'An exquisite thing, truly, Mr. Harriman!' levelling her glass at the picture.

'It is not the merits of the little gem that strikes me now—though one must acknowledge them at a glance, but the singularity of the circumstance, that, over a year ago, I purchased, at a picture store in this city, a faithful counterpart of this painting—a copy, I should say, since the colors were fresher than these.—Only the initials, 'S. R.' were attached to mine; here, we have the whole name, 'Serena Rivers.' Who knows the artist? That picture has haunted me ever since I had it; and I must know something of its painter.'

'I'm sure neither of us can enlighten you, Mr. Harriman,' replied Miss Horton, in very sweet and careless tones—'some fictitious name, probably—these artists use such till their pieces are known. Do come and see this splendid copy of one of Rosa Bonheur's. I must have it as a mate to one we have at home.'

'If there are any horses in the painting, Mr. Beals will be likely to become your rival for its purchase,' retorted Harriman, with a quiet smile as he followed her, 'unless, indeed, you consent to share its proprietorship with his other 'turn-out,' and his heart into the bargain,' he added meaningly.

'You ought to know better than to dream that I would share anything in life in common with the person referred to,' replied Helen Horton, with an expressive glance from her beautiful eyes, and a low tone intended to be very confidential.

Harriman's sole reply was a gallant bow; had the time and occasion been any other, I doubt if he would have been betrayed into any tender avowal. Admire Miss Horton as he had done—and, for the past year, he had been her very devoted cavalier—he had never committed the irretrivable act of making a declaration. In that year, though Helen had begun to despair, her mother had not yet given over the siege; and constantly urged her daughter on to fresh endeavors.

'Well, my love, I thought Harriman was unusually attentive this morning,' said that worthy lady as they were again in their carriage, driving homeward. 'Mrs. Beals remarked it; and said the probabilities were, that I should soon call him son-in law.'

'Mother, for heaven's sake don't repeat any of that fool's gossip!' broke forth Helen, hoarse with passion. 'Do you know what I saw at the Exhibition rooms this morning? What, but Rena Rivers,' picture of her old farm-house home—that painting that hung on the walls of her chamber—with her name attached; and Laurence Harriman has had a copy of it for more than a year, and is crazy to know the artist. She is in this city somewhere, supporting herself by painting, and he will search her out. We must be before him—find her ourselves, and coax her back to us; or induce her to go off into the country somewhere, where he can never find her. I declare, I shall go mad with vexation, if that girl wins' what, for one year and a half, I have been trying to do in vain!'

'Rena Rivers! her picture in the Artists' Exhibition. Harriman interested in her!' gasped Mrs. Horton pale with apprehension. 'You have the right plan my love. We must find her and remove her from your path. That she should turn up again now! There seems to be a fatality about that girl. Your father must never know that we have track of her Helen.'

There was a fatality, certainly, in the events of that morning, for hardly had Harriman, after handing Miss Horton and her mother to their carriage, returned to stand again, in fascination, before the painting, before a gentleman who had been near him all the morning accosted him.

'I think I heard you say you would like to know the artist who executed this little gem?' he said. 'Perhaps I could be of service to you, Mr. Harriman, for I believe I have the pleasure of addressing that gentleman?'

'That is my name, sir,' replied the young lawyer animatedly. 'And you are—'Giles Bradshaw, Artist,'—as he read a card handed him; 'ah, I am happy to make your acquaintance in bodily guise, sir, as I did mentally, long ago, through your pictures. So you can introduce me to this young lady artist?'

'How do you know she is a young lady, Mr. Harriman?' abruptly asked the artist, with a quiet smile irradiating his benevolent, middle aged, and intellectual face.

'I beg pardon—I do not—that is—but I had a fancy—' replied the young lawyer somewhat embarressedly.

'Oh, no harm committed,' laughed the artist. 'And I don't mind telling you that she is young, and beautiful as she is talented; only when you come to see her at my house and studio, No. 27 D—— street, don't admire her too violently, lest those who have a prior claim to her grow jealous. With this proviso, I should be happy to see you there, at this hour to morrow, if it suit your convenience.'

'Perfectly,' said Harriman, 'but pray tell me if this young lady is—' but here he hesitated, conscious that his impatience had betrayed him.

'Neither my wife, sister, nor daughter; but a very dear pet, whom my good partner and I found struggling against the world, with a large share of talent, but very few helpers. A lonely orphan, we took her into our home, encouraged her, and helped her dispose of her pictures; and I felt very sure that God will not allow either of us to die the poorer for it.'

'No; nor will your earthly friends, either,' said the young lawyer, warmly shaking the artist by the hand, adding, 'I shall be only too happy in visiting you to-morrow.'

What need to prolong the sequel? We are not of those authors to believe their readers wholly destitute of imagination, and, hence, painfully elaborate a conclusion.

Will it not be sufficient to add, that, at their first meeting, Laurence Harriman recognized his chance acquaintance of over a year agone, of whom he had often thought with interest—and that during the lapse of the golden weeks during which he frequented often the artist's home, he came to know all Rena Rivers' past history, and that brief, yet painful episode of her life of servitude under her Uncle Horton's roof.

During this period, his visits at John Horton's mansion had ceased altogether; what, then, was his indignant surprise, to hear, one evening from Rena, that she had received a visit from her aunt that morning, who came with protestations of friendship upon her lips—'they had so regretted her hasty flight—had long been in search of her—would she now return, and be a sister to Helen, and her own child?'

'And what did you say to her, Rena?' asked Harriman.

'I thanked Mrs. Horton for this, and all past favors; but declined her kindness, since I was shortly to go to my own home—as your wife,' she replied with a happy blush.

'A fitting answer, darling. We can now afford to 'forgive and forget' them, in our own approaching happiness,' said Harriman, with a tender caress.

Of course there was the usual amount of wonder over Laurence Harriman's marriage—and doubly that, when Helen Horton became Mrs Edgar Beals within the month; but one happy pair heard nothing of it all, though they must have had some faint conception of the desperation which had driven the mortified girl to madly wreck her happiness in wedding a man she despised. Harriman and his beautiful young wife were away on their bridal tour to the White Hills, and a visit to the dear 'Old Homestead' the husband had first seen in his gifted Rena's 'Oil Painting.'

Ten Rules to be Observed in making Butter.

In making good butter, there are several nice operations to be gone through with which require an eye to cleanliness, forethought, and some little experience:

1. On milking clean, fast, yet gently, regularly twice a day, depends the success of the dairyman. Bad milkers should not be tolerated in a herd; better pay double the price for good ones.

2. Straining is quite simple, but it should be borne in mind that two pans, about half full each, will produce a greater amount of cream than the same milk if in but one pan; the reason of this is the greater surface.

3. Scalding is quite an important feature in the way of making butter in cool weather; the cream rises much quicker, the milk keeps sweet much longer, the butter is of a better color, and churns in one-half the time.

4. Skimming should always be done before the milk becomes loppered; otherwise much of the cream turns into whey and is lost.

5. Churning, whether by hand or otherwise, should occupy forty to fifty minutes.

6. Washing in cold, soft water is one of the preserving qualities of butter, and should be continued until it shows no color of the milk by the use of the ladle; very hard water is highly charged with lime, and must in a measure impart to it alkaline properties.

7. Salting is done with the best kind of ground salt; the quantity varies according to the state in which the butter is taken from the churn—if soft, more; if hard, less; always taking the taste for the surest guide.

8. First working after about twenty-four hours, is for the purpose of giving the butter a greater compactness.

9. Second working takes place at the time of packing, and when the butter has dissolved the salt, that the brine may be worked out.

10. Packing is done with the hands or with the butter mall; and when butter is put into wooden vessels, they should be soaked two or three days in strong brine before using.—After each packing, cover the butter with a wet cloth, and put a layer of salt upon it; in this way the salt can be removed at any time, by simply taking hold of the edges of the cloth.

Butter made in this way will keep any length of time required.—J. C. Adams, in Genessee Farmer.

The Vermont Scoundrels.

Some few years ago, a pair of villanious brothers, Rev. Z. C. Graves and Rev. J. R. Graves, emigrated from Vermont to Ashtabula County, Ohio, the Joshua R. Giddings county and although it is an Abolition District, the Graves went so far beyond the usually taught doctrines of abolition, the sympathizers there with the South burned down the building in which they were teaching school, and sent them South!

Z. C. Graves put himself at the head of a female school in Winchester, Tennessee, and became so intensely pro slavery as to teach the young girls to hate the Yankees, and as late as 1863, prayed to the Lord, in his public exercises, to scatter the Yankee army, to send disease among them, and to visit their leaders with death!

The County borders on Alabama, had voted to secede, and attach itself to Alabama, in 1861, in the event Tennessee declined to go out, and this scoundrel of a Baptist preacher was one of the leading spirits in this movement?

The other brother J. R. Graves, was publishing a divine paper when he was driven out of Buell's army, and went to Richmond and obtained authority to raise a regiment and arm it with pikes. What a set of turncoats, hypocrits, scoundrels and cowards have headed the rebellion, from the beginning!—Brownlow's Whig.

DON'T TATTLE.—Children, do not talk about each other. Dont call one of your school mates ugly, another stingy, another cross behind their backs. It is mean. Even if they are ugly, stingy, or cross, it does you no good to repeat it. It makes you love to tell of faults—it makes you uncharitable—your soul grows smaller—your heart loses its generous blood when you tattle about your friends. Tell all the good you know about them, and carry the sins in your own heart, or else tell them to God, and ask him to pardon them. That will be Christ like. If any body says to you; 'Oh that Mary Willis did such a naughty thing!' call to mind some virtue that Mary possesses and hold it up to her praise. For your own sake learn to make this a habit.

The most sublime dependence is on Divine Providence.

The Best Climate for Sheep.

We were recently talking to a Western New York farmer who now resides in Wisconsin, and he remarked that sheep did much better in Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota than in Western New York, because the climate was not so moist and changeable. There can be little doubt that he is right in this opinion.

Sheep can stand cold weather without injury if it is dry. Sudden changes and cold rains are very injurious. We have often heard it remarked that the South-western States on account of their comparatively milder climate must be very favorable to sheep raising. We think this is a mistake. In fact it is found by experience that sheep require shelter quite as much in the Southwest as in the North. The weather though not as cold is more changeable, and the sheep frequently get thoroughly soaked to the skin. In this condition a cold, raw wind and a damp soil must certainly carry off much of the heat which is necessary to the well-being of the sheep. The natural heat of the body of sheep (105°) is much higher than that of horses and cattle.—This heat is kept up by the consumption of food (or burning of fuel) in the lungs, etc., of the animal. To prevent this heat from flying off, the sheep are provided with a good warm coat of wool. To be effectual, however, the coat must be kept dry. In a cold, dry climate, if the wool gets a little wet on the outside it is soon frozen, and this acts as a coat of mail, with a good warm lining of dry wool inside, so that the heat from the warm body within does not fly off. It is said that the Scotch Highlanders in olden times when exposed during the frosty nights, wet their plaids before lying down to sleep, and by holding them a short time from their bodies they were frozen in a stiff, hard board, sufficiently thick and impervious to defend them from the cold. The slight coat of frozen wool acts in the same way. And it is for this reason that the steady, cold winters of Vermont, and of the extreme Northwest, are so favorable to the sheep raising.

The Darkey and the Deer.

The good steamer "In" was coming down the beautiful St. Clair, when a noble buck was seen swimming across ahead of her. To lower away a boat and give chase was only the work of a moment, and with a stout line he was taken by the antlers, and safely brought upon the steamers deck. A good deal of admiration was excited by his fine proportions, and among his admires was the cook, a goodly specimen of "Afric's clime," who imagined that, from the docile appearance of the animal, he was quite a sheep. He therefore undertook to caress him, and to lay his hands upon his haunches, when he was astonished by a vigorous kick, that laid him sprawling upon the deck. Nothing daunted, however, Cuffy thought he might succeed better by the head; but the deer liked this no better, and made a butt that laid the poor darkey out again, and opened an ugly gash on his woolly-head. This was too much of a good thing; so Cuffy, when he recovered himself, stood at a respectable distance and eyeing the old buck said: "Now look a here, Mister Doe, I don't kno' whose dee you is, or who you bel ng to, but if you do dat ar' agin dare'll be wenzon on board dis boat, as sure as you live!"

TWO WEDDINGS ON A RAILROAD TRAIN.—The novel performance of celebrating the nupitals of two loving couples took place on the Southwest branch of the Pacific railroad on Sunday the 15th instant. The passenger train started from Rolla at the usual hour, with the bridal parties and a host of friends on board. The polite and affable conductor, Mr. Allen, who has been for a long time on the road, was in his element.—After the train got under motion, the party of the first part—Mr. Dobney Carter—was married to the amiable and blushing Miss Mary Dunivan all of Rolla. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. D. Gadly, at half past ten A. M, It was mentioned as somewhat singular that this was the first time in his life that the reverend gentlemen who tied the loving twain in the holy bonds of wedlock was over on board of a railroad car. At half past eleven A. M. Mr. J. N. Dunnivan, Sheriff of Phelps county, and the father of the young bride mentioned above, was married to Miss Mary E. Campbell, while the train was still at the rate of twenty miles an hour.—St. Louis Union.

MAKE A BEGINNING.—Remember in all things that if you do not begin you will never come to an end. The first weed pulled up in the garden, the first seed in the ground, the first shilling put in the savings bank, and the first mile traveled on a journey are all important things; they make a beginning and thereby a hope a promise, a pledge an assurance that you are in earnest with what you have undertaken. How many a poor idle, erring, hesitating outcast is now creeping and crawling his way thro' the world who might have held up his head and prospered if, instead of putting off his resolutions of industry and amendment, he had only made a beginning.

Little Frankie Brag.

Many whose letters I now hold in my possession, as tokens of sympathy with my labors, will remember little Frankie Brag, the boy of fifteen, who fought valiantly in the ranks at Donaldson—one of the bravest of Birgis's sharpshooters, and whose answer to my question in regard to joining the army was so well worthy of good record. He replied to my question thus: "I joined Mrs. ——, because I was so young and strong, and because life would be worth nothing to me unless I offered it to my country."

How often have I thought of that noble child's reply when I have seen strong, able-bodied men turning away from their duty, reluctant to even admit that they were called upon, and contrasted his patriotism with theirs.

Poor little Frankie? Far away from every kindred soul his blanched lips pleading but for one boon in his last hour. I saw him die! I can never forget the pleading gaze of the violet eyes, the broad brow from which ringlets of light brown hair were swept by strange fingers bathed in the death-dew, the blue lips giving on their pitiful wail for "some one to care for him, some one to love him" in his last hours!

I came to his side, and he clasped my hand in his own, fast growing cold and stiff "Oh, Mrs. S——, I am going to die and there is no one to love me!" he said sobbingly. "I did not think I was going to die till now, but it can't last long; If my sisters were only here! but Oh, I have no friends near me now, and it so hard!"

"Frankie," I said, choking down the sobs I could hardly suppress, "I know it is hard to be away from your relatives, but you are not friendless. I am your friend, Miss Smith and the kind doctor are your friends, and we will take care of you. More than this, God is your friend, and He is nearer to you now than either of us can get. Trust Him, my boy, He will help you."

A faint smile struggled over the pale, suffering features. "Oh, do you think he will?" he asked. Then as he held my hands closer, he turned his face more fully toward me and said wistfully, My mother taught me to pray when I was a very little boy and I never forgot it. I have always said my prayers every day, and tried not to be bad. Do you think God heard me always?

"Yes, most assuredly. Did he not promise in his good book from which your mother taught you, that He would always hear the prayers of his children? 'Ask and ye shall receive. Dont you remember this? One of the worst things we can do is to doubt God's truth. He has promised, and he will fulfill. Don't you feel so, Frankie? He hesitated, and then answered slowly, "Yes I do believe it. I am not afraid to die, but I want somebody to love me,"

The old cry for love—the strong yearning for sympathy of kindred hearts. It would not be put down, and his last hour was bitter with unsatisfied longings.

'Frankie, I love you poor little boy; you shall not be left alone. Is not this some comfort to you?" I asked?

"Do you love me? Will you stay with me and not leave me?" He replied eagerly, Oh, don't leave me!"

"I will not; be comforted," I said "I will stay as long as you wish;" and, stooping, I kissed the pale forehead as if it had been that of my own child or brother. A glad light flashed over his face, and he cried out suddenly: "Oh, kiss me again! That is given like my sister! Dear Mrs. S—— kiss me again! Miss Smith, won't you kiss me too? I don't think it will be as hard to die if you will both love me."

Miss Smith bent over him to fulfill his request, the tears raining over her honest face. Then I sat down and drew his poor little head against my breast. He was but a child, reader, dying in a strange land, amongst strangers, and pleading vainly for the loved ones. Could I do anything else? But why ask? Such an action need no explanation or apology. No woman with a heart to feel or pity could do otherwise.

It did not last long. With his face nestled against me, and his large blue eyes in perfect conciousness upon me to the last moment, he breathed out his young life in the greatest agony and pain. He suffered terribly, and it was with a feeling of relief that I saw the last spark fade and the flame of existence go out. This child in years, with a man's thought and courage, was at rest; and breathing a silent prayer for those far away who were waiting and watching for the news of the boy-brother, I composed the cold limbs and closed the beautiful eyes for their eternal slumber. He was buried in the hospital cemetery, and a loving comrade of his transmitted the sad news to his friends. This task was spared me.

Old Abe's Valentine.

The following is going the rounds of the press. We don't vouch for its accuracy, but it's a "good thing:"

We hear that our worthy President recently received a valentine lately in the shape of a picture of the American Eagle, with a financial allusion. The Bird of Freedom appeared to be engaged in picking up gold coin while at the end of the bird most remote from his head there was a pile of "Green backs" into which this coin seemed to have been mysteriously transmuted.

The President who takes such things philosophically, and always acknowledges a practical hit with grace and good natured cheerfulness, went to his Secretary of the Treasury, to exhibit his bird, in order that the latter might enjoy the joke with him. Mr. Chase however was not disposed to take the matter in the same spirit as the President did; but appeared to be much out of humor at this hieroglyphical attack upon his department of the Government. In tones in which there was evidently a slight admixture of irritability, he remarked to the President that he would like to know who had made unwarrantable attack upon his financial management of the affairs of the nation—that he feared that some of his subordinates had got up this libel upon him, and that he would give a hundred dollars to know who had done it. The President, whose question asking proclivities are well known, said that offer seemed liberal; "but, Mr. Chase," said he, "before I shall make up my mind on this subject, will you allow me to ask you one question?" "Certainly," replied the Secretary, "I merely wanted to understand," said the President, "at which end of the bird you propose to pay?" "Et tu Brute?" responded the head of the Treasury Department. "If I am thus the subject of ridicule, I must renew my application to be relieved from my duties as Secretary. "O, never mind! never mind! Mr. Secretary," said the President, "We can soon remedy all these difficulties. All we have to do, after we have suppressed this rebellion, is to turn the bird end for end, and let the Gold and "Green backs" remain just as they are, and all will come out right." The Secretary, restored to good humor, agreed not to resign unless Seward did.

FIVE THOUSAND MILES FOR ONE.—A bill has been introduced into congress for constructing a canal, about three fourths of a mile long, which will open a continuous inland communication of 5,000 miles. By connecting Big Stone Lake and Lake Travers with a canal, a Mississippi steam boat can pass through the Minnesota and Northern Red rivers to lake Winnepeg, a distance of 700 miles. Then traversing the lake, which is larger than Lake Ontario, it can pass up the Saskatchewan river 700 miles to Edmonton House near the Rocky Mountains, and 5,000 from New Orleans. The region between St. Paul and Lake Winnepeg is said to be very fertile, and capable of sustaining a dense population.

NEARLY SKUNKED.—The Copperheads have well nigh skunked in the Iowa Senate. They will have Senators from Dubuque county, and one from Alamakee.—three in all and no more. The army vote has placed Jackson, Davis, Appanoose, Decatur, and Wayne counties in the Union column. A three-legged stool of small dimension, located in an obscure portion of the Senate Chamber, will hold the Butternut dignities from Dubuque and Alamakee. English, Duncombe, Neal, and Jhonson will not be there to look glum as thunder-clouds over any future federal victories like that of Donelson. Jennings, Knoll and Grey will, however, be there to represent the inconceivable insignificance of an exploded party.

An old fellow who had become tired of his life, thought he might commit suicide, but he did not wish to without first forgiving all his enemies. So, cogitating with himself, he at last removed the noose from his neck, saying: "No—'twont do—can't. I never can nor will forgive old Noah, for letting the copperheaded snake into the ark. The nasty varmints have killed over two thousand dollars worth of my cattle, and when he and I meet, I know that there'll be a general fuss. See if there won't."

A lady was the other day entering the railroad cars when they had just begun to move, and she missed her footing and fell. She was caught by the conductor and one or two others and dragged upon the platform of the cars. When she got her breath she exclaimed: "Oh! I hope I shall not come so near missing Heaven!"

Mankato, Friday, Dec. 25, 1863.

War Meeting at Judson.

At a special meeting of the legal voters of Judson township held Saturday evening last, at the School house, for the purpose of determining some plan by which to fill up their quota, under the President's call for troops, Captain Dickerson was chosen Chairman, and John Goodwin, Secretary.

It was moved and carried that we vote a tax of one hundred dollars, to be paid to recruits, provided said recruits enlist before January 1st.

It was voted that one-third of this tax be paid this year, and the balance on the following year.

It was also voted that this tax should be levied on all taxable property in the township, and that the town board should levy, and the Town Treasurer collect the same.

The property of all volunteers is to be exempt from levy for this tax.

The Town Board were authorized to issue orders on the Treasurer in favor of volunteers, and that they proceed to assess the said tax as soon as it can be ascertained how many have enlisted and been mustered into the service.

The meeting was largely attended, and great enthusiasm prevailed. Judson is sound to the core, and determined that no draft shall be made there.

The Draft.

We have no doubt but that this County will be clear of the draft. So prompt and hearty a response to the call is worthy of note. It may be possible that some towns in the county will fall behind their quota, but the towns of Mankato, Lime, South Bend, Judson, and Butternut Valley have furnished more than the number required. But an overplus in one town will not help any delinquent township. Every town stands on its own bottom and if it falls short of its quota, will have to make a few revolutions in the Marshal's wheel at Rochester. Wake up then gentlemen, and don't rest until you are sure you are in out of the cold——draft.

The President's Message.

We intended last week to publish a portion of the Message and Proclamation, but private business prevented. In to-days paper will be seen interesting portions of it. We look upon it as an able paper, void of high sounding words; the honest thoughts and sentiments of an honest man, given in plain words to honest men. We think his plan of re-construction one that he has carefully studied, and that he puts it forth not as an experiment, but as the proper one to bring about the desired results.

* * *

Among the Senate Committees, we notice that Mr. Wilkinson is chairman on Revolutionary Claims, and second on the Committee on Territories, and Indian Affairs, which in the absence of the chairman would make him chairman.

Senator Ramsey is on the committees on Patents, and Post Office and Post Roads.

On the House Committees we notice the name of Representative Windom as chairman on Indian Affairs, and Mr. Donnelly on Post Office and Post Roads, and also on Expenditures in the Interior Department.

Mr. Windom has asked leave of the House to introduce a bill to amend an act entitled an act granting homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain, so as to extend the benefits of said act to Soldiers in the service of the United States, and to provide greater facilities for compliance with the provisions of said act.

Senator Wilkinson at Work.

We notice in the Daily Globe, which contains full Congressional reports, that our Senator from this District, has gone to work with his accustomed energy, and presented the memorial of A. J. Campbell, praying for relief under the second article of the treaty with the Sioux Indians made June 19, 1858; which was referred to the Committee on Indian affairs.

He also presented additional papers in relation to the claim of Richard G. Murphy late agent for the Sioux Indians, praying relief for certain vouchers erroneously given; which, with the papers already on file, were referred to the committee.

In pursuance of previous notice, he has also asked and obtained leave to introduce a bill to extend the act of Congress granting pensions to persons wounded in the Indian massacres in Minnesota in the years 1862 and 1863, which was read twice by its title, and refered to the Committee on Pensions.

Our Railroad matters have not been forgotten by him, and as preliminary to future action, he has given notice of his intention to ask leave to introduce a joint resolutions relative to a certain grant of land for railroad purposes in the State of Minnesota.

> Yesterday's Onion is a fair sample of the boasted loyalty of its publishers. Not a word about the President's message or Proclamation or a single syllable to arouse the patriotic impulses and encourage enlistments in response to the President's call for men to fill the depleted ranks of our brave army. Though half a dozen war meetings have been held in our county during the past week, not a word of comment or approval is thereby elicited from the patriotic Onion.

We call attention to the above extract as a sample of the fair and honorable manner in which the editor of the Record conducts his journal. We stated last week that we were unable to perform our usual editorial labor on account of sickness and death. Our readers are aware that we had the entire charge of the Post Office during the latter part of the sickness in Mr. Sibley's family, and the making up of the mails in the evening prevented our attending any of the various meetings of the week. We also had an unusual amount of job work to do in our office. Mr. Wise was well aware of these facts. The notice we gave, of itself, was sufficient to give him that information, and thus to take advantage of the absence of editorial matter, and publish the above, shows him to be as unfair and dishonorable as he is base and unprincipled. We like to deal with an honorable and generous cotemporary, but from an editor who has not an impulse in his nature to do right, or the courage to look you straight in the face, and who is constantly prating about his loyalty lest his readers should forget and take him for what he really is, Lord deliver us.

The County Printing.

The Record's conscience does not rest easy on the subject of county printing. He has been in severe labor trying to hunt up some "bone of contention," and has finally discovered a mare's nest, with a secret in it as big as his bump of honesty! (Honesty? Pshaw! He's no more use for honesty than a dog has for side pockets.

He says "that there is a secret movement on foot to do away with the present fair and equitable manner of disposing of this matter, and to return to the old system of giving it to a party favorite at from three to five times the prices now paid."

This "matter" so difficult for him to digest, we care but little about, not sufficient even to spend the time necessary to write this article. But we take the opportunity of saying a few words for the benefit of the Record.

We are not aware of any "secret movement on foot" and we say, moreover, that there is none concocted either by the Board or any person in the county. It would not be surprising that there should be, as the people of Blue Earth are convinced that the loyal and the patriotic impulses of the Record are but cloaks, put on, the better to get his bread and butter, and that the sooner he is "shut" of sucking the county teat, even though he gets his milk at "ratting" rates, the better it will be for the honor of the county.

The fortunes of the UNION have not so far waned as to depend upon the county printing for its support. Its "life and vitality" are secured by free will offerings given by a loyal public to a loyal paper for sustaining right and condemning wrong; for pursuing a straight-forward honorable course, which every honorable conductor of a public journal should pursue, and not for dealing in billingsgate, hypocrisy, demagoguism, misrepresentation, and falsehoods vile as the small pox, that have characterized this infamous sheet which boasts so much of loyalty.

"We labored hard for three years;" yes, indeed. So long as your party had a majority in the county Board you claimed the printing as a right, and at prices accorded by law; but so soon as your "fortunes waned" your labor pains of political juggling commenced and lasted for three years. You labored and brought forth a mouse.

We believe that when a political party is in power, the perquisites and emolments should be given to the exponents of that party, to those who aided in the election of its candidates, and not to an adversary, or even a portion of it to an adversary who with one hand is stabbing at the nations heart, and with the other holding up the hypocritical cloak of loyalty to cover his multitude of sins.

It is immaterial to us how the county printing is disposed of. We have not received over two dollars of it since we came here, and are not depending on it for support. From our short acquaintance with the commissioners, we are inclined to believe they will do right in the matter.—Whatever disposition they may make of it, the Record cannot quarrel with us over it.

For the Union.

A CARD.

The following article appeared in the editorial columns of the Record, of the 19th inst., and the subscriber presumes that he is the person intended.

> Last week a subscription paper was circulated in this town for the purpose of soliciting money to aid in recruiting the quota of mankato under the pending call of the President for men. The paper was first presented to our principal business men, each in turn subscribing liberally. It was next taken to the holder of a Federal office worth about 2,500 annually—one of the fathers of the Union League, and a bleating howling demagogue, who constantly boasts of his own patriotism, while he calls in question that of his neighbors—and reader how much do you suppose that this quintessence of 'loyalty' contributed? Not one cent; yes he emphatically said that he would give nothing, as he had paid his tax to help sustain the government, which we believe is only the income tax levied upon his salary of 2,500. Suppose every body adopted the policy of this Federal officer—who will not enlist himself nor contribute of his abundant means to enable others to do so—and what would become of the Government which now gives him an annual income of 2,500? Such hypocracy is deserving of the severest condemnation.

It might have been more manly for the Editor of the Record to have used my name, but as bushwhacking is his style of editorial warfare he pursues the rules governing that notorious class.

In replying to the above article I wish first to say, that heretofore Capts. Dickinson, Rice, Tourtellotte, Dane, Slaughter, Potter, and other gentlemen have recruited companies, or parts of companies here, without receiving so far as the writer is aware any special aid from the public. So Messrs Ruegg and Howard have been recruiting for weeks.

It seems entirely proper that those gentlemen wishing commissions sho'd pay their own expenses, as none of the money that is thus used goes for the benefit of the private soldier.

Then again, in common with many other citizens, I am in favor of the bounty being raised by a tax and for this reason—all have to bear a share of the burden.

There are other ways in which the charity of the private citizen can be better expended—the sanitary commission are constantly calling for funds—aid should be rendered to the families of those who are fighting in the ranks.

The article in question says: "The paper was first presented to our principal business men each in turn subscribing liberally" which is not true. Isaac Marks refused to subscribe (as did others) saying that he was not subject to the draft; in fact, if my recollection is not at fault, there were no subscriptions on the paper when I saw it, except those of men in the first class, and even J. J. Porter who drew up the paper, and has two or three boys liable to conscription put down "not one cent." He has but a small family dependent upon him, and while day laborers can earn a dollar and a half a day, he ought to have given something, that is, taking the Record for his gospel.

The Editor of the Record, was neither grieved nor angry at my refusal to subscribe, his language shows that; but if afforded him an opportunity to make a bitter personal assault upon me and ostentatiously ventilate a little cheap patriotism.

Possibly the late turn of the Provost Marshal's wheel at Rochester has awakened, not his patriotism, but his fears, that the operation may be repeated, and then how it WOULD look for a knight of the golden circle high up in the degrees to shoulder arms for his country and against his friends.

It is all very well, Mr. Wise, to talk of patriotism; but the man who, as conductor of a public journal, will allow one of the most important laws passed by the last Congress—one vital to the very existence of the government, to be stigmatized as infernal in his columns, will have to satisfy this community as to his loyalty otherwise than by professions.

In this particular case no one will believe in his sincerity, for since the memorable canvass of 1860 when said editor "conquered his prejudices" very few have had confidence in the heartiness of his profession, and least of all, of his patriotism.

The public remember that although the editor of an insignificant sheet yet so far as his influence went he prostituted the noble mission of the press, the "Fifth Estate" of the land to base interest, and what, in the language of a witty Justice, the lightning of heaven could not accomplish, bread and butter did. After a most excruciating season of political balancing, which made him the laughing stock of the whole community, he flung principle, friendship, everything to the dogs, and avowed his determination to go for Douglas, inasmuch as most of his subscribers were in favor of that candidate, and yet, such a chap talk about hypocricy in others! Why, his gum-elastic, gutta-percha, india-rubber conscience is covered fathoms deep with the article, and as to demagoguism, the small arts of the demagogue is all the genius the fellow possesses.

The readers of the Union must pardon my plainness of speech, but really it does not seem possible to do justice to the subject without it.

This "Hundred days" was a solemn time for the Record man. Had he not been imported from Superior expressly to rejuvinate the dilapidated Democratic party, to establish an organ whose wishes should be obeyed as implicity as ever were Cezar's, and now with his mental and corporeal constitution, torn to fragments, yea, verily, those outward adornings with which since the days of good old mother Eve, art has been wont to embellish nature, his new clothes rent assunder by the violence of contending factions, "all, all was lost," even honor, and yet the gay world laughed on like the boys and the frogs, what was death to him was sport to them.

Ah me! since that time the editor of the Record has been a changed man; grown permaturely old, his failing faculties render him an object of pity.

The public will undoubtedly be at a loss to account for his repeated assaults upon the writer. It is partly due to the garrillity of age, but mostly to other causes.

Unfortunately for the editor of the Record, owing to the paucity of his ideas he is unable to grace his editorial columns with the scintillations of wit, the flash of genius, or the logic of the schools, and therefore drops to the level of the gossip and tattler, and fills his paper with billingsgate and second hand slander.

One reason, and probably the principal one why the editor of the Record goes so far out of his way to make personal attacks upon the writer, undoubtedly is, that he took a somewhat active part in the arrangements whereby the Union newspaper was established by Mr. Slocum.

After the decease of the talented and lamented Hensley, the Independent ran down under the management of Mr. Gunning, much to the pecuniary benefit of the Record, doubtless. It was thought important to have a reliable, loyal paper, and my desire to promote the interest of the family of Mr. Hensley, which were left in my charge prompted me to do all that I could in the furtherance of such an object. Mr. Wise's nice little arrangements were all spoiled, as the Union made rapid strides in public favor, and soon left the poor old Record far behind, thus enbittering his old age, with the recollection of disappointed hopes.

The writer might, with great propriety call in question the right of the editor of the Record to dictate as to his private charities, and with regard to the amount he receives from the Government, as his office is not a salaried one, Mr. Wise knows nothing of the truth whereof he affirms so majesterally.

As to what the editor of the Record may say of the writer he is perhaps as indifferent as "any other man" for after all, Mr. Wise, my actions must abide the arbitrament of time and the judgment of my fellow citizens.

JOHN N. HALL.

ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Letter from the Ninth Regiment.

FORT WYMAN, NEAR ROLLA, Mo.,
Friday, December 11, 1863.

To the Editor of the Union:

It is a damp day, it having rained a portion of the time, and as we are in camp, you know we have but little to do, but guard duty, on such days; but these days are generally well improved by a soldier, for it gives him an opportunity to write to his friends and relatives, who are at home in comfortable houses, and know but little of the vicissitudes of a soldier's life. So I will take this opportunity to write a few lines to the UNION, and through its columns let our friends know where we are, and what we are doing. Last Monday morning we were ordered to march; we left our camping ground about 7 o'clock in the morning, and marched to the depot, and at 9½ o'clock were on the cars en route for this place. We arrived at Franklin Junction in the morning; switched on to the south-west branch of the Pacific Railroad, and at one o'clock in the morning arrived at Rolla, after daylight we marched to this Fort, where we are encamped. This Fort, I understand, was built by order of General Fremont; it is a quadrangular earthwork, with bastions on each corner, on which are mounted four thirty-two pound cannon; on two of the corners in the ditch which surround the fort, are log houses, strongly built, with loop holes for muskets which range so as to sweep the ditch; at the entrance there is a draw-bridge hung on a pivot; in the center is a square log house, which contains ammunition. There are about a dozen prisoners in the fort, mostly rebels. We are encamped near by.

I think this is the roughest country I ever saw. I will not except even old New England. Rolla is about the size of Mankato, and is quite an important place, it being a depot for south-western Missouri, and the terminus of the south-west branch of the Pacific Railroad. Everything is very high here. We have not seen the sun since we arrived here; it has not rained any until today, but it has been cloudy all the time. The weather has not been cold and the ground is not frozen.

There are a good many refugees in this vicinity. They are a class of beings to be pitied, they have been been driven from their homes, and plundered of all their valuables; and now they are found near the towns in miserable log huts, which they have been allowed to build. The men seem to be all gone, being either killed or in the army I suppose. Nearly all of our company have fireplaces or stoves in their tents, so that they can be quite comfortable.

Captain Strait of Co. I, is in command of our detatchment, which consists of Companies A, B, E, and I.

I do not know as I can write any thing more this time that will be of interest, so I will close.

Yours Respectfully,
DIXIE.

SENATE.—Mr. Grimes asked to be excused from further service on the Committee on Naval Affairs. After a brief conversation against granting the request, the Committee, saying the services of the gentleman were very important at this time when there was a necessity for a reform in the Navy Department, further consideration upon the subject was postponed until Monday.

Mr Howe presented a memorial from citizens of Wisconsin, asking some action to be taken, with a view to the amendment of the Constitution to prohibit slavery in all the States and Territories.

Mr Wilson, from the committee on military affairs, reports back with amendments the bounty law, also the bill amending the enrolling act, with amendments, one of them repealing the $300 clause, and as to that he had very serious doubts.

Mr. Dixon offered an amendment exempting clergymen from the draft. Amendments were offered and ordered printed.

Mr. Sumner's resolution for a new rule requiring Senators to take the oath of allegiance prescribed by the act of Congress, before entering upon their duties was taken up.

Mr. Saulsbury said that his colleauge (Bayard) was the only one to be affected by the order, and he had a right to ask that the question involved should be referred to the committee on judiciary.

Mr. Saulsbury then made a motion to that effect.

Mr. Trumbell opposed the motion.

Messrs Johnson and Collamer could not see that any evil could result from refusing it as proposed,

Mr Bayard said he was unwilling without the decision of the Senate to take oath. He wanted their decision on the views against the constitutionality of the oath, but he could take the oath as readily as any member of this body.

Messrs McDougal and Powell advocated the reference to the Committee.

Mr. Teneyck could see no good to result from the reference, as the Judiciary Committee are of the same opinion now as when they reported the act.

The Senate refused by eleven majority to refer the resolution to the Judiciary Committee. Without concluding the subject, the Senate went into executive session, after which it adjourned.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 21.

A special to the Democrat from Fort Smith, Arkansas, of the 20th says:

An attack was made on the outpost at Fort Gibson on the 17th, by Standwith's forces stated at 600. He was repulsed and fell back, taking a part of his forces across the Arkansas river, below Fort Gibson, moving north east.

The 3rd Wisconsin Cavalry had just returned from a successful reconnoisance southward. They went within 35 miles of Red River. Finding the enemy had changed his position since last advices, they were unable to proceed further. Their return was a constant skirmish for over a hundred miles, strong bodies of the enemy being posted at all cross roads to intercept them. They cut their way through some places and evaded other posts by taking blind mountain passes. Their loss was trifling.

Among the prisoners captured is the notorious Hardy Lane, who boasts having killed over a hundred Union citizens with his own hands.

Information was received that two-thirds of Kirby Smith's force was preparing to attack Little Rock, the balance anticipating that McNeil's forces wanted to be drawn away to reinforce Steele, are to fall on Fort Smith.

A communication from the Choctaw Chief, McCurtain, says the Choctaws will not rejoin Cooper. He desires an interview with McNeil, and says his tribe are disposed for peace. Our advance headquarters are at Waldron; fifty five miles South of this. We frequently push down towards Washington, constantly annoying Price's left flank.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.

A gentlemen who has resided in Richmond during the past five years, and who recently reached this city, left Richmond December 5, furnishes the following:

The garrison of the city and forts number about 3,000 men, who are principally employers of the Government. They are armed with Belgian rifles. The fortifications consist of several lines of entrenchments, earthworks and rifle pits besides forts. The forts are sparely manned. The number of guns mounted on all the works is quite inconsiderable compared with their exteat.

At the time our prisoners planned an escape, Union men of, Richmond were aware of the intended effort and would have joined the priseners had they succeeded. From the armory at Richmond and the works at Fayetteville, N.C., about three hundred guns per week are turned out. All these guns are rifled at the Tredegar works.

Their heavy guns are hooped and the work of thus improving them is going on. Arrangements are being made by which they hope to make 2,000 rifles per month. The principal powder manufactory in Augusta, Georgia. The loss of stocking machinery at Fayetteville would prove irrepairable. Early in the war, and until very late in the war, the style of projectiles adopted by our government was received from Washington, and in some cases their manafacture commenced in Richmond before made here.

Our informant says the prices current under quote everything. Flour quoted at $75 per barrel actually sells at $125, and other things in proportion.

The arrival of the French corvette for the purpose of attending to the removal of French property had created considerable feeling among merchants, and the people, and loud objections were made to its being given up unless the French would raise the blockade. All hopes of foreign intervention had died out.

The refusal of England to allow the rams to sail creates much indignation inasmuch as the rebel authorities had been sent gold in advance to pay for them.

South Carolina is openly denounced in the streets, with devout wishes that the State might be sunk.

The people are very anxious for an exchange of prisoners, and thought the cessation was a plan adopted by our Government to prevent them from filling their army.

The systematic starving of our men is spoken of as being a policy to compel us to resume exchange,

J. I. C. COOK, publisher of the State Banner, Bennington, Vt., says: he was attacked with the DYSPEPSIA, and suffered so severely from it, that not a particle of food could be swallowed without occasioning the most uncomfortable sensation in his stomach. For five years he suffered from this dreadful complaint; when he used BRANDRETH'S PILLS. The first box did not seem to benefit him much, but the second produced a change and by the time he had taken six boxes, a complete cure was effected. He says; "My dyspepsia was gone, and my experience of an early death vanished."

☞SHAKE AND BURN!—This is the life of agony endured by the sufferer from Fever and Ague. He wanders like an uncertain shadow, never knowing what moment he may be prostrated, and therefore disinclined to give any serious attention to business. This is the condition of thousands in town and country. It is no exaggeration to say that Fever and Ague kills more people than any twenty other diseases in America. For a sure and speedy cure of this terrible affliction, we take great pleasure in recommending HOSTETTERS STOMACH BITTERS, which have already achieved a wide reputation for rapid and powerful effects in renovating the system prostrated by this disease.

THE

Singer Sewing Machines.

Our LETTER A FAMILY SEWING MACHINE is fast gaining a world-wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the cheapest and best and most beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Guaging, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch, which is the best stich known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work.—While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

"A THING OF BEAUTY IS A JOY FOREVER." —A handsome face, and a form of grace are always attractive to the eye, and nothing helps so much to improve the looks of man or boy, as a suit of fine clothes, purchased at S. RANDALL'S Clothing Store, situated on Front street, opposite Bradley's store, where can be found good Winter Clothing, Hats and Caps, Undershirts and Drawers, and Gent's Furnishing Goods, at very low prices. He pays the highest cash price for Wheat. 12-1y*

A Merry Christmas to you all.

The Post Office will close to day at 9 o'clock A. M., and open again at 5 P. M.

Mr Stine has closed his daguerrian gallery, and enlisted in the cavalry regiment.

A GOOD PRESENT.—Heckman has a fine assortment of jewelry from which to select a present for your friends.

THE communication on Railroads received some time since, we will try and find room for next week.

Advertisers should bear in mind that the UNION has a larger circulation than any paper in the Minnesota Valley, and is a good medium in which to advertise.

SIX WEEKS IN THE SIOUX TEPEES.—The publishers will accept our thanks for a copy of this work, which we have read very carefully, and found quite interesting.

Mr. Mullen tells us that there will be no draft in Watonwan County. She has furnished nearly all the men called for from her sparse population.

Maj E. H. Smith is on a visit to his home in Sycamore, Ill. having been called there by the severe illness of his mother. When he returns he will fit up the rooms occupied by Jason Wickersham.

QUARTERLY MEETINGS.—Rev J. O. Rich, Presiding Elder of this district, will hold quarterly meetings as follows,—Glencoe, Jan 2d, St Peter the 9th LeSueur, the 16th Cleveland, the 25th; and Mankato, Jan 30th.

The card of Messrs Lewis & Frisbie will be found in to-days paper. They have a large and well assorted stock of drugs and chemicals, and books and stationery of all kinds, and have reduced their prices so low that it is a wonder to us where their profits come in. Give them a call, and buy one of those beautiful Albums for your wife, sweetheart, or friend. It is not every day such bargains can be had.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT.—We are pleased to learn that Dr. McMahan, of this place, has been appointed Examining Pension Surgeon. He was recommended by Senator Wilkinson. It will be a great convenience to soldiers, who may be applicants for Pensions, as it will save them a journey to St. Paul.

We have received Peterson's and Godey's Magazines for January, and find them as usual very interesting. The superb fashion plates and steel engravings are unequaled, and the variety of embroidery, and other patterns make them both attractive and instructive. What better present to make a friend on New Year's day, than a years subscription to one or both of these excellent magazines.

THE LADIES REPOSITORY.—Those who have read the Repository for the past year, will hardly make up their minds to do without it the coming one. A religious magazine, filled with useful entertaining and instructive reading matter, it ought to be on the center table of every family in the land. It is published simultaneously in New York, Cincinati, and Chicago, at $3,00 per annum. Subscriptions can be handed to Rev. Thomas Day.

We have partly in type a full list of all volunteers, from this County who have enlisted since the war began. We shall try and get it ready for our next issue.

Mr. Allen of Winnebago City, informs us that Faribault County will furnish nearly a full company for the Cavalry Regiment. All honor to Faribult, for she has done well.

Finch & Thurston will get "taken in out of the wet" one of these days, for selling groceries so low. People don't like to get so much for so little money. It isn't natural.

OH! OH!!—Toys for girls and toys for boys, that will make you laugh and increase your joys; toys so curious and so funny, you can have them all for a little money; toys a plenty, of every kind, can be found to day at Charlie Heinze.

THE RURAL ANNUAL.—This valuable pamphlet, which can be had for twenty-five cents, contains a vast amount of information, which every farmer ought to know. Send twenty-five cents to Joseph Harris, Rochester New York, and you will get a copy by return mail.

THE MILK IN THE COCOA NUT.—The Record stated last week that a Mr. Kramer, of Danville, had offered to pay $25 to each man volunteering from that town. A little investigation will show the cause of this sudden flow of extra patriotism. Nearly two-thirds of the quota of Danville will be drafted from the first class men, and four of the Kramers are enrolled in this class. That accounts for the milk in the cocoa nut.

A communication from Garden City on Professor Shaw's Writing Class is crowded out.

A case of small pox passed through town on Wednesday last.

HAYNES' PORTABLE BRACE FENCE.—We would call the attention of farmers and land owners to this fence, which has been thoroughly tested and found to be just the thing needed by every farmer.

It is constructed of panels made by means of braces, two inches wide, three eighths thick and four feet and four inches long, interlaced diagonally and nailed to top and bottom rails made of stuff one and one-fourth inches thick and three and a half inches wide; the standard is of the same thickness as the rails, seven inches wide at the bottom and three and a half at the top, into which the bottom rail is inserted. The panels are so united together that the fence may be thrown into a zig zag position, which insures great firmness without entering the ground. It is so constructed that it can be opened at any desired point as readily and easily as a gate.

The expense of materials is only about two thirds as much as an ordinary board fence. By using the bench or mould invented by the Patentee the construction of this fence is made very simple and easy.

A VISIT TO THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—By invitation of the School Directors, and in company with them, the Superintendent, Mr. Wise and Mr Porter, we paid a visit to our public schools last Tuesday, in order to see the accommodations, and note the progress of the scholars, and the government of the teachers.

The first school, kept by Miss Clara McKenny, is in the rooms on the second floor of the building adjoining Germania Hall. Here we found about fifty scholars closely packed together in two nine by twelve ill-ventilated rooms totally unfit for any such purpose, and affording the teacher scarce room enough to get around. Though but slightly acquainted with Miss McKenny, we judge her to be a good teacher, prompt and thorough, and at the same time kind to her pupils.

On the first floor of the same building, Miss Josie Parsons, has under her charge nearly fifty scholars, intelligent and eager to learn. Her Schoool room affords no better accommolations than those above, and we were surprised to see her manage her class so admirably. Her pleasant way of imparting instruction gains for her the love of all her scholars.

In Biglers Hall, away in lower town, Prof Fergnson has charge of fifty or more scholars principally adults. He has a large room, and somewhat better accommolations there than the other teachers. Yet none of the rooms are what they should be. Mr. Ferguson is an able teacher and keeps good order. We passed an hour here very pleasantly. Some remarks were made by the Superintendent, Mr. Freeman, after which we came away, fully convinced that a good beginning had been made by the School Board, competent and efficient teachers engaged, and that progression was the order of the day.

The necessity for a public School building was never greater than at the present time, and we are glad that the subject of education is becoming one of interest to the citizens of Mankato. The day is not far distant when we shall have a graded School house, that will supply our educational wants.

CAPTAIN ELECTED.—At a meeting of recruits held in City Hall Wednesday evening, R. F. Slaughter, Esq., of Mankato was unanimously elected Captain of the company from this County.

DEPARTED.—Capt. Slaughter's company started for the Fort Yesterday morning our streets presenting a lively appearance for some hours before they left. Flags were run out, cannons fired, and drums beat. The large Republican flag was not run out from the fact that a portion of the rope had been taken away, and could not be found until too late. All honor to Blue Earth for giving nearly a full company, without the aid of commissioned officers.

ENLISTMENTS IN BLUE EARTH.—War meetings throughout the county have been the order for the last two days and the work of recruiting for the Cavalry Regiment has gone bravely on. The various men who have been recruiting, have succeeded in getting the names of eighty-five persons. On Wednesday evening a meeting of volunteers was held in City Hall for the purpose of completing arrangements preparatory to starting for the Fort, and it was a decidedly enthusiastic gathering. The Mankato band was present, and discoursed martial music.

SOLD OUT.—Messrs Mims & Wanmack, recently sold out their stock of goods to E. H. Smith & Co., who in turn disposed of the stock to James R. Tinkcom.

Mr. T. understands how to drug the people with dry goods and groceries. He is selling "smiles" very cheap and throwing his goods in Give Jems a call.

Mr. Heinze has taken up a stray cow to which the attention of the owner is called.

NOTICE.—Bishop Whipple will preach in the City Hall Tuesday evening January 5th, at 7 o'clock.

PUBLIC INSTALLATION.—The Masonic fraternity will have a public installation of officers Monday evening next after which, a supper for them selves and wives.

CAPITAL.—The citizens of Madelia are very patriotic. They had twelve men to furnish for the draft out of eighteen, and nine enlisted in Capt. Stees' company of the 6th. The wife of one declared she wouldn't sleep with her husband if he was drafted, and like a sensible man he went and enlisted. Another came with her husband and wanted to enlist with him, but the Captain had to throw out the baby. There was only one man left in the town fit for service, and he an old bachelor. The ladies formed a procession, visited him in a body, and presented him with a petticoat. He has left the town, and the ladies are filling all the public offices themselves Here's our ☞ ladies.

GLEASON'S LITERARY COMPANION.—This valuable Literary Weekly will commence a new volume January 1st 1864, in grand style, with new type an entire new dress throughout. The "Literary Companion" is an elegant, moral and refined miscellaneous Family Journal. Its columns are devoted to Polite Literature, Wit and Humor, Prose and Poetic Gems. An unrivaled corps of writers and artists have been engaged for the coming year, and several new and popular features will be introduced. Each number will be beautifully illustrated. In size the "Literary Companion" is some fifteen hundred square inches, forming a mammoth weekly of sixteen octavo pages. Terms only $2 a year. Sample copies seen free. Published weekly by F. Gleason, corner of Tremont and Broomfield Sts., Boston, Mass.

SUPPORT HOME MANUFACTURE.—There is a strong prejudice against articles of American manufacture, and justly, too, in many cases, but not so with DeLand & Co's Chemical Saleratus. This is the best article in existence for cooking purposes, yet many families are using English soda, when this saleratus is much better, and by using it you are patronizing home production. For sale everywhere.

The President's Message.

THE REBELLION ONE YEAR AGO.

When Congress assembled a year ago the war had lasted nearly 20 months and there had been many conflicts on both land and sea with varying results. The rebellion had been pressed back into reduced limits, yet the tone of public feeling and opinion at home and abroad was not satisfactory. With other signs, the popular elections then just past indicated uneasiness among ourselves, while amid that was cold and menacing, the kindest words coming from abroad were uttered in acents of pity that we were too blind to surrender.

Our commerce was damaged greatly by a few armed vessels built upon and furnished from foreign shipyards, and we were threatened with such intentions from the same quarter as would sweep our trade from the sea and rise our blockade. We had failed to elicit from European Government anything hopeful upon this subject.

The Emancipation Proclamation, which was issued in September, was running its assigned period to the begining of the new year. A month later the final proclamation was issued, which included the announcement that colored men of suitable condition would be received into the war service.

THE EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION.

The policy of emancipation and of employment of black soldiers gave to the future a new aspect about which hope and fear and doubt commended in united conflict. According to our political system as a matter of civil administration the general government has no power to effect emancipation in any State, and though for a long time it was fondly hoped that the rebellion could be suppressed without resorting to it as a military measure, it was all the while deemed possible that the necessity for it might come and that if it should the crisis of the contest would then be presented. It came, and as expected it was followed by dark and cloudy days.

THE REBELLION AT THE PRESENT TIME.

Eleven months having been passed we are permited to take another view The rebel lines are pressed still farther back and by the complete opening of the Mississippi river, the country domineered over by the rebellion is divided into two distinct parts, and there is no practical communication between them Tennessee and Arkansas have been substantially cleared of insurgents, and the citizens in each, who were strong advocates of Slavery at the begining of the rebellion, now declared openly for the emancipation in their respective States.

THE CHANGE IN MARYLAND AND MISSOURI.

Of those States not included in the emancipation proclamation—Maryland and Missouri—neither of which years ago would tolerate any restraint upon the extension of slavery into the territories, the only dispute now is as to the best mode of removing it within their own limits.

NEGRO SOLDIERS.

Of those who were slaves at the begining of the rebellion, full 100,000 are now in the military service, about one-half of which number actually bear arms in the ranks thus giving the double advantage of taking so much labor from the inligent and supplying the places which otherwise must be filled with so many white men. So far as tested it is difficult to say that they are not as good soldiers as any.

THE EMANCIPATION POLICY SUSTAINED.

No servile insurrection tending to violence or cruelty has marked the measures of Emancipation and arming the blacks. These measures have been much discussed in foreign countries, and contemporary with such discussions the tone of public sentiment there is much improved. At home the same measures have been fully discussed, supported, criticized and sanctioned, and the annual elections following are highly encouraging to those whose duty it is to bring the country through this great trial. Thus we have passed the crisis which threatened to divide the friends of the Union.

THE EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION TO BE SUSTAINED.

I will add at this point, that while I remain in my present position I shall not attempt to retract or modify the Emancipation Proclamation, nor shall I return to slavery any person who is free by the laws of the Proclamation or by any act of Congress. For these and other reasons it is thought best that the support of these provisions shall be included in the oath, and it is believed the Executive may lawfully claim it in return for pardon and restoration of forfeited rights, which has the clear constitutional power to withhold altogether, or grant upon the terms which he shall deem wisest for the public interest. It should be observed, also that this part of the oath is subject to the modifying and abrogating power of legislation, and Supreme Judical decisions.

THE PROGRESS OF EMANCIPATION.

The movements for emancipation in several of the States not included in the Emancipation Proclamation are matters of profound congratulation, and while I do not repeat in detail what I have heretofore so earnestly said upon this subject, my general views and feelings are unchanged, and I trust that Congress will omit no fair opportunity of aiding these important steps to the great consummation.

THE WAR POWER OUR MAIN RELIANCE.

In the midst of other causes, however important, we must not lose sight of the fact that the war power is still our main reliance. To that power alone can we look for time to give confidence to the people in the contested region, so that the insurgent power will not again overrun them. Until that confidence be established, little can be done anywhere from what is called reconstruction, hence our chief attention must be directed to the army and navy, who have thus far done its hardest part so nobly and well.

It may be esteemed fortunate that in giving the greatest praise to these indispensable arms we do favorably encourage the gallant men from commander to sentinel who compose them, and to whom more than all others the world must stand indebted for the home of freedom, reintegrated, enlarged and perpetuated.

(Signed) ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

ROB'T GOODYEAR,

Mankato Sept. 1863.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M, in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P Folsom in 1852, and by E. D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot. Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota,"

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors, at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th, 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.32, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

Dated, November 2, 1863.

Wood Dealers,
STAVE, & SHINGLE MAKERS!
ATTENTION!

THE EMPIRE WOOD MILL will cut logs into stove wood as cheaply as logs are cut into cord wood by the ax. It is run by two horses, cuts with a drag saw, easily handled by two men, will cut from two to three cords of stove wood per hour. Wood Mill cut wood, sells more readily, where these machines are used, than cord wood, and at an advance of one dollar and twenty-five cents per cord.

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price, Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do: will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., an are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood: and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

HOSTETTER'S

CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and bowels, Cures, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes. Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetters Stomach Bitters. This popular preparations contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants. It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, Hostetters Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard. In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehensions of an attack, escape the scourge, and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of Hostetter's Bitters. The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic and hence it works wonders in cases of Dispepsia and in less confirmed forms of indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless apperent, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs: Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous attacks, Lowness of spirits and fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes. The agony of bilious colic, is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally restoring to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented. As a general tonic, Hostetter's Bitters produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and debility and decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. in the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-inforce and re-establish them. Last but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements, present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day. No family medicine has been so universally, and it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as Hostetter's Bitters. Prepared by Hostetter and Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere. 23

HELMBOLD'S.

Genuine Preparations.

COMPOUND Fluid extract Buchu, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Watery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflamation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, of abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,

Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face Pallid Countenance. These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the Patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases" "Insanity and consumption" Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess the records of the insane aslyums. And melancholly deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which Helmbold's Extract Buchu invariably does,

A trial will convince the most skeptical.

LEONORE.

BY WILL LIVINGSTONE,

'Mid the rosy hues of twilight,
Looking heavenward evermore;
With a glory like the sky's light
In her soft eyes' misty shy light,
Stood the gentle Leonore;
And her voice was like the sighing
Of the summer waves, when dying
On the lakelet's grassy shore;

"O why did we meet, that starry night,
On the bank by the spreading tree?
Some demon lurked in the moon's soft light,
Who whispered of doubt to thee.

"I was not a child, a wayward child,
A woman's heart was mine;
It was pure and fresh as the morning's dew,
And every pulse was thine,

"But woman's pride is stronger, far,
Than love or life can be,
And I cast away in an angry hour,
The love which was life to me.

"The sunny tress I gave thee, once,
And the ring of thy chestnut hair,
I dropp'd where the waters darkly roll'd
And I laughed when I saw them there

"But the crimson left my glowing cheek,
And the proud light left my eyes,
When I turned away, and stood alone
Beneath the darkening skies.

"I'm standing now, in the starry night,
On the bank, by the spreading tree,
The river rolls, and the moon is bright,
But thou comest not to me!"

A strong arm was wound around her—
"Mine," he cried, forevermore!
God, I thank thee! I have found her,
Still my own—my Leonore!"

THE SOLDIER'S BLOUSE.

BY M. T. CALDOR.

CHAPTER I.

'WHERE'S your hat and shawl, Kate? you are going of course, to the meeting where the ladies sew for the soldiers. I stopped in to walk with you.'

And the speaker, a mild-faced, ladylike woman of middle age, turned her eyes to the tete-a-tete, whereon a lovely girl reclined languidly, surrounded by a litter of various articles betraying her forenoon's employment. A tiny work-basket, rosy with a lining of pink silk and glittering with gold thimble and steel implements of the most fairy proportions, rested carelessly on the crumpled newspaper, beside several nicely folded handkerchiefs, evidently freshly hemmed. A volume held open by a half-withered rose, and lastly a piece of embroidery, which was thrown down upon the entrance of the intruder.

Kate Weston smiled, and rose from her recumbent position, but answered carelessly.

'Oh, the meeting! I had forgotten all about it, but I don't think I shall go; they are so stupid and tedious, and those stiff chairs are so tiresome, and that ugly gray flannel is such discouraging work—and then, you see, it don't seem to amount to anything. No, I don't think I shall go. But sit down, Cousin Mary; come now, let me coax you to change your own mind. Spend the afternoon here, and we'll have such a cosy time. I've an elegant new pattern of crochet to teach you.'

But Cousin Mary drew back, and a look of stern indignation flashed over her face.

'Discouraging work! don't amount to anything! Kate Weston, do you realize the meaning of the words you use?'

Kate colored a little, but persisted.

'Why, Mary, how angry you look! one would think I had uttered some fearful treason!'

'And so you have; but not wilfully, as I, who know your kindness of heart, must fain believe. So you have uttered treason, Kate. Of course you think the South have, as they proclaim, a righteous cause.'

It was Kate's turn to grow indignant.

'You know better, Mary. No one more fully believes in their guilt or madness, or more gladly hails the news of victory to our northern arms.'

Oh, then you believe the cause is right and holy; you realize the momentous issues at stake, but you probably expect a certain portion of the whole who are benefited, to perform the work, and save the country, while the others fold their arms and look on contentedly, if things progress favorably, or in carping criticism if they prove unsuccessful.'

'I don't expect that my feeble hands can wield gun or sword,' answered Kate somewhat testily.

'I think that the weapons wherewith we drill this afternoon are much better suited for such wee fingers as yours,' was the quiet rejoinder.

Kate's cheek wore a still brighter color.

'But the Government ought to furnish its soldiers with everything they need. I'm sure its a shame it does not.'

'Who is the Government, Katie? Uncle Sam is a very divisible as well as ubiquitous individual. Are we not all the Government in reality? Will any one be more benefited by a successful issue of this war than you or I, who receive again that glorious gift, a prosperous and peaceful country to rejoice in as our home? Who has more? And since we are our fractional part of the nation, shall we be held guiltless if we stand idle, and leave to others the glorious task of working out the salvation of the land?'

Kate's eyes had filled with tears. Her cousin saw it, and hastened to her side.

'Oh, Katie, Katie, it was only thoughtlessness, you did not give the subject earnest consideration. It grieves me to the heart to see how many of my countrymen fall into the same error, and seem to think the war is solely for the benefit of that luckless President, and his officers, those who are working hardest and for us quite as much as for themselves. How many there are who really sympathize with the soldier's suffering, honor his valor and devotion, and yet fritter away their time in folly and vanity, or in the narrow round of selfish interests, and leave unvisited this one field where the women of the land unite their testimony in their country's favor, and strike no puny blow at the insolent front of rebellion. Dear Kate, you shall read this letter from my friend H——, and when you learn all the privations and horrors of the campaign, even with the most faithful attention possible, when you hear how those bronzed, begrimmed, blood-spattered heroes, who brave death again and again for their country's sake, shed tears at the little present of some delicacy sent by the Samaritan women who have not forgotten their duty, or learn the tremulous thanksgiving with which he exchanges his threadbare, filthy, heated garments for the clean soft blouse these soldier meetings send forth upon the blessed mission—you will never heed again that the seats are lacking ease, and the stuff ugly, and the work tedious—'

'Don't don't—oh Mary, I was a heartless wretch!' wait a moment and I will be ready.'

'Dear Kate, I know your generous heart would awaken,' replied her cousin, kissing her tenderly. 'Alas! it is such a mournful, humiliating thought to me, that so few of our young ladies are found at these soldier meetings. Do they forget that it is the angel of his golden dreams who is to lift the young man from the narrowing pursuits of business, and if now in this momentous crisis, when, if ever in the world, it seems God's work is laid out plainly for mortal hands, if now the maidens, and wives, and mothers, fail to sympathize, and encourage, and exhort, where shall we look for the band of heroes who shall go forth to the shock of battle, to turn back the audacious rebellion? Oh, Katie, the more you dwell upon it, the more you will feel convinced of the meagreness and insufficiency of the most you can do in such a cause, you will long, having done thus little, to give your all. Think, dear child, of those who have sent forth their dear ones. You have no father, or brother, or lover to tremble for; how little it is for you to do your best to alleviate the hardships of the friends of others.'

Kate Weston had sprung up from the tete-a-tete, all listlessness and dreaminess vanished, and her fine face aglow with enthusiasm. She tied on her hat and folded her shawl around her with eager hands, and came to the work-basket for thimble and scissors. The delicate embroidery lay carelessly upon it. She took it up, and looked at it with mornful eyes, and then suddenly went to the escritoire, took out an envelope; folded the embroidery, and sealed it within it.

'There, Mary,' said she, in a tone of relief, 'I shall not touch it again while there is a soldier meeting or a tented field in the land.'

Her cousin smiled. 'I shall look to you, dear Kate, to awaken many others by your ardent spirit, now that you are at length aroused. But come, we can talk on our way to the meeting.'

Kate was rallied by her gay companions upon her thoughtful face, and serious attention to the work, throughout the afternoon, but she did not respond with her usual liveliness.

Her cousin's appeal had stirred a wave of thought that would not speedily return to quiet, and her mind was far away, picturing with every swiftly advancing seam, some distant scene upon the lonely picket, the hurried march, the terrible tumult of the battle field, or that dreary life demanding the most dauntless courage of all the closely packed hospital.—And there were thousands upon thousands going through such experience, and she had been singing and dancing, and idling away her time in frivilous and needless pleasures. It made the sensitive girl, thus newly wakened to consideration of the subject, shiver and grow pale at what seemed her own criminal negligence, and she could not reply to the careless chatting going on around her.

When she returned home Kate carried a huge bundle of unmade flannel, and very much astonished her mother by drawing up to the cherry centre table and its tall globe of light, instead of flitting to the piano, where her unemployed evenings were usually spent.

'What, dear, all that work to be disposed of! you'd better make over half of it to the girl, and I'll help about the rest,' said Mrs. Weston.

Oh, no indeed; I shall do every one myself. But I think you would do well to get some for you and Jane there is enough to do for all of us.

'Is there any unusual call? I don't see anything in the papers tonight respecting a battle.'

'Oh, dear, there has been a call all the time, only people don't heed it. Cousin Mary showed me that letter from H——; oh, mother it was frightful to read how they suffered, after that defeat, for articles we might have sent so easily to them. And that was only one regiment, and think of the thousands constantly in need. How have we been so insensible?'

Mrs. Weston looked grave, and pushed away the damask napkins she was hemming.

'There is no need of these; let me help you, Katie. I will send for some myself in the morning.'

And mother and daughter sat and sewed, and talked softly, often a little sadly, sometimes of the great question of the day, whose solving was to bear such solemn and momentous import to the whole world, sometimes of the dead father and brother, who might have done the brave and noble deeds it stirred their souls to read about in others. And when they rose to retire, Katie threw her arms around her mother's neck.

'We have had such a pleasant evening, dear mother. Oh, how much better to retire to slumber with this sweet sense of satisfaction, than in the feverish, discontented mood as evening frittered away in foolishness always leaves to me. A thousand thanks to Cousin Mary for opening my eyes.'

Kate retired to her chamber, but not to sleep at once, for as she folded a completed garment carefully, some sudden thought brought a smile to her lips, and drawing her writing desk toward her, she wrote a short note and pinned it carefully in the sleeve of this her first soldiers blouse. The note ran thus—

"Perhaps in the hour of trial and discouragement, it may comfort the soldier to whom this garment may fall, to know that the maker of it prayed for his safety and success in the glorious cause that makes every soldier a hero, whose crown shall be without a thorn, in the blessed days of that peace he will have aided in restoring to our beloved country."

She signed her name and residence, and smiling at the sudden whim, resigned herself to slumber.

Two thousand years ago or upward, a company of merchants who had on board their ships a cargo of nitre, were driven by the winds on the shores of Galilee, close to a small streamthat runs near thefoot of Mount Carmel.—Being here weather bound until the storm abated, they made preparations for cooking their food on the beach; and not finding stones to rest their vessels upon, they used some lumps of nitre for that purpose, placing their kettles on the top, and lighting a strong fire underneath. As the heat increased, the nitre slowly melted away, and flowing down the beach, mixed with the sand, forming, when cooled, a beautiful, transparent substance, which excited the astonishment of the beholders.

A great many years afterwards, towards the close of the fifteenth century, an artificer, whose name is not known, accidentally spilled some of the material he was melting. Being in a fluid state, it ran over the ground until it found its way under one of the large flag-stones with which the place was paved, and he was obliged to take up the stone to recover his glass; by this time it had grown cold and to his surprise he found from the flatness of the surface beneath the stone it had taken the form of a slab, —a form which could not be produced by any process of blowing then in use.

Such was the accident that led to the discovery of the art of casting Plate-Glass. WM. A. KELLOGG.

The Youngest Soldier in the army of the Cumberland.

Last evening at the Caledonia supper, Gen. Rosecrans exhibited the photograph of a boy who, he said was the youngest soldier in the Army of the Cumberland. His name is Johnny Clem, twelve years of age, a member of Co. C, 22d Michigan infantry. His home is at Newark, O.—He first attracted Rosecrans' attention at a review at Nashville, where he was acting as marker for his regiment. His extreme youth (he is small of his age) and intelligent appearance interested the general, and calling him out, he questioned him as to his name, age, regiment. &c. Gen. Rosecrans spoke encourgingly to the young soldier, and told him to come and see him whenever he came where he was.

He saw no more of Clem until Saturday last, when he went to his place of residence—the Burnett House—and found young Clem sitting on the sofa, waiting to see him.

Johnny Clem had experienced some of the vicissitudes of war since they had last met. He had been captured by Wheeler's cavalry at Bridgeport. His captors took him to Wheeler, who saluted him with—

"What are you doing here you d—d little scoundrel?"

Said Clem, stoutly, "Gen. Wheeler, I am no more a d—d scoundrel than you are, sir."

Johnny said the rebels stole all that he had, including his pocket book, which contained only twenty-five cents. "But I wouldn't have cared for the rest, if they had not stole my hat," said he, "which had three bullet holes in it, received at Chickamauga."

He was finally paroled and sent north. On Saturday he was on his way to Camp Chase to rejoin his regiment, having been exchanged. Gen. Rosecrans observed that the young soldier had chevrons on his arm and asked the meaning of it. He said he was promoted to a corporal for shooting a rebel Colonel at Chickamauga.

The colonel was mounted, and stopped Johnny on the field, crying—

Stop you little Yankee devil!"

Johnny halted, bringing his little Austrian rifle to an order, thus throwing the colonel off his guard, cocked his piece, (which he could easily do, being so short) and suddenly bringing it to his shoulder, fired, the colonel falling dead, with a bullet through his breast.

The little fellow told his story simply and modestly, and the general determined to honor his bravery He gave him the badge of "Roll of Honor," which Mrs. Saunders, the wife of the B. House host, sewed upon Johnny's coat. His eyes glistened with pride as he looked upon his badge, and he seemed to have grown an inch or so taller, he stood so erect. —He left his photograph with Gen. Rosecrans, who exhibits it with pride. We may again hear from Johnny Clem, the youngest soldier in the Army of the Cumberland—Cincinnati Times.

AN AMERICAN ANECDOTE.—A handsome young Englishman, making a call at a house in Washington where resided several of the loveliest young ladies in all Federalia, suddenly discovered that he had come without his purse. The prettiest of the ladies said:

"Shall I loan you a dollar?"

"Would you?" was the reply.

The dollar was produced from the most charming portmonia, and the beautiful American said, laughingly:

"I must have interest, you know, when you return it."

The handsome Englishman called next day repaid the dollar, and placing a couple of exquisitly cut bottles of perfume on the table, added:

"And there is the interest—two scents."

Such graceful courtesies do honor to both countries.—Punch.

A citizen of Jamaica Plains, L. I., went to answer a ring at the door, at the request of his wife, where he found nothing but a basket. On removing the cover a beautiful little child appeared some five months old. The lady screamed, one of the lady's visitors took up the baby, and found a note pinned to its dress, which charged the gentleman with being its father, and imploring him to support it. A rich scene ensued between the injured wife and indignant husband, the latter denying all knowledge of the little one, and asserting his innocence. The friend interfered and at last the wife was induced to forgive her husband, very roguishly adding that it was their mutual offspring which had just been taken from the cradle for the purpose of playing the joke.

A poor Irishman who applied for a licence to sell spirits in one of the provincial town of England, beings questioned by the board of exercise as to moral fitness for trust? replied: ,Och, an' it's there ye are? sure, an' it's not much of a character a man needs to sell whiskey."

THE TIME TO BREAK PRAIRIE.—Mr. John W. Barrett, Pierce Co. Wis., writes: "The best time, or I might say the only time to break up prairie land is from the 1st day of June to the 20th of July. The reason is that broken before June, the grass does not get a good start, and it will turn and grow through the breaking. If it is done in June and July, the grass has a start, and when broken with a hot sun on it, is sure to rot. Have the sod all turned over, and let it be as rough as possible to make it, as when in this condition, it is more easily torn up and prepared for seed harrowing in the spring. Wheat is preferable for the first crop, and also for the second. My own practice is to break my land in June, then sow turnips or ruta-baga seed, which usually pays for the breaking. The following spring I use a large cultivator, dragging it over twice then sow wheat and drag twice, again, which is sufficient, if the land is broken at the right time. The sod rots better when rough than when laid smooth and even."

UNNATURAL.—The practice that prevails in some localities of feeding horses and other domestic animals in racks placed above their level, so that they are forced to throw the muscles of their necks and bodies into constrained and unnatural positions, is a very bad one. Observe and make racks and mangers to conform as near as possible to the natural habits of the animal for which they are intended. A writer in the Rural New Yorker of December 5th, says that coughs and lung complaints are caused by horses inhaling the dust of hay stripped down through a rack in such a manner as to bring all of the dust in contact with their breathing tubes. The remedy for such complaints is to remove the racks and let them eat naturally from a manger on a level with their feet.

TOBACCO A FOE TO MATRIMONY.—One of our exchanges enquires, with much alarm, "how is it there are so many nice young girls in our cities unmarried, and likely to remain so?" In old times, when you could approach a young man, within whispering distance, without being nauseated by his breath, he used—when his day's work was over—to spend his evenings with some good girl or girls either around the family hearth, or in pleasant walks, or at some innocent place of amusement. The young man of the present day takes his solitary pipe and puffs away all his vitality, till he is as stupid as an oyster and goes to some saloon to quench the thirst, created by smoke; and sheds crocodile tears every time his stockings are out at the toes, that "girls now-a-days are so extravagant, a fellow can't afford to get married.' Nine young men out of ten deliberately give up respectable female society to indulge the solitary enervating habit of smoking, until their broken down constitutions clamor for careful nursing; then they coolly ask some nice young girl to exchange her health, strength, beauty and unimpaired intellect for their sallow face, tainted blood and breath, irritable temper, and mental imbecility. Women may well hate smoking and smokers.

An old Yankee when he was told by an English tourist in this country, that the celebration of the 4th of July would soon be extinct, answered: "See here, stranger, don't talk that way. I tell you when the resurection day comes round, the first thing done in the morning will be to read the declaration of independence."

A Western editor requests those of his subscribers who owe him more than six years subscription, to send him a lock of their hair, so he may know they are still living. In answer to which, a cotemporary says that if his delinquent subscribers should do this, he would be obliged to leave off editing, and go into the wig business.

"Mother sent me," said a little girl to a neighbor, "to ask you to come and take tea with her this evening."

"Did she say what time, my dear.

"No, ma'am, she only said she would ask you, and then the thing would be off her mind, that was all she said."

Cicero said he approved a youth that had something of the old man in him. We wonder how he would have liked a man with something of the old boy in him.

Artemas Ward, out West, says. "We hain't got any daily papers in our town, but we've got a female sewing circle, which answers the same purpose.

A prisoner having been sentenced to the State Prison last week, it being the fourth time within the last twenty years, very coolly commenced singing "Home, Sweet Home."

SWEET CORN PUDDING.—Take eighteen ears of corn, cut lengthwise and scrape from the cob about 1 pint of milk and 3 eggs; sugar and salt to your taste. Bake slowly 3 hours.

Nearly all our exchanges are crying out for subscribers to pay up. We hope they won't pay up. Then editors will act on a sound basis and send papers only to those who pay for them in advance. It is the advance style which has in three years raised this office from bankruptcy to perfect solvency. We send papers only to those who pay in advance—when the time expires the paper stops. We have no old bills to worry over—no poor accounts to fret about, and we are enabled to pay cash for all we purchase, and to pay cash each Saturday for the labor done in the office during the week, and to "walk the deck" out of debt and with money ahead. In all earnestness we advise every printer and publisher to quit trusting folks—come down to business and to success. The patronage of a man who is good but who never pays is the kind of patronage which swamps so many editors and makes the poverty of printers a bye word and disgrace to the power which moves nations and controls the world.—La Crosse Dem.

The flag of truce steamer arrived last night. It brought down a free negro who was captured at Gettysburgh and recently liberated by the rebel authorities, and two surgeons who had been in prison at Atlanta. While the latter were at Richmond, the rebel officers showed them through all the prisons in and about the city. They report that they found our prisoners quite comfortable, and well fed though they were partially furnished from provisions sent from loyal States.

Three rats made an attack on an English lad, about fifteen years of age who was sitting in an old barn eating bread and beef. The first onslaught was made by a huge rat, that ran up his back and attempted to seize the food which he was putting in his mouth. He seized it by the throat, but before he had strangled it, two others commenced a determined attack upon him. They bit his face in two places, and attempted to bite through the clothing which protected his shoulders. A man happened to visit the building while the contest was going on, and it was with great difficulty that the rats were made to retreat.

On the 7th instant at 11 o'clock A. M., a movement was started among the printers in Memphis, Tennessee, to form a volunteer company for the war, and in two hours a company of over one hundred men was enlisted. That, says the Bulletin, 'is about as quick as the thing could be done anywhere, and we will warrant they are as likely a set of boys as ever stepped to the sound of a fife and drum. They will be mustered in this morning by General Veatch, at 10 o'clock.'

Mr Colfax, the speaker, is an old member, an old New Yorker, and an old printer, and a long time an editor in Indiana. He was a whig in the better days of the whig party, and stood with Clay and Webster, and supported the Crittenden resolution in the last Cong ess. The second secession however, found him among the radical members.

The snow began to fall here, coming from the north east, on Wednesday morning and continued all day. About two o'clock the wind raised and the snow fell in torrents all night, and this (Thursday) morning the wind changed to the north and the snowing continued. The snow is now about eighteen inches on the level, but the wind has piled it up in heaps from two to five feet deep. Winter has come in good earnest and to-day is one of the most tedious and blustering days that Minnesota winters has in store for us.—Plaindealer Owatonna

RAILROAD TO ANOKA.—'The whistle of the engine is now heard in Anoka,' says the Star, from which we should judge that the track is very nearly completely to that town. The editor recommends a grand jubilee when the locomotive makes its appearance.

STOLEN.—Some graceless scamp cabbaged our Agricultural Editor's whip from his buggy a few evenings since. Our friend says he knows no farmer would be guilty of so mean a trick. If caught let the vile scamp be beaten with many stripes, so that if he is destitute of a proper fellow feeling, he may at least feel a fellow's retributive vengeance.—Atlas.

QUOTA OF HASTINGS.— From the best information we can gather at present the quota of Hastings lacks but fifteen or twenty of being filled, and an effort will be made to supply the deficiency by volunteering as soon as it is known accurately what number of men the Government demade of us.—Hastings Independent.

The Weekly Union.

Mankato, Friday, Jan. 1st, 1864.

New Overland Route, to the Idaho Gold Mines.

MANKATO THE STARTING POINT.

The Government train which left this place last November, for the Winnebago Agency on the Missouri, at Crow creek, have made a very successful trip at this inclement season of the year. The feasibility of this route is now completely demonstrated. The traveling time was only eighteen days and the distance 280 miles.

Parties in this State, Wisconsin, and Illinois, and east of there, who design starting for the new gold fields of Idaho should by all means make their calculations to rendezvous at Mankato.

* * *

The Expedition to Fort Thompson:

A letter was received from Col. Thompson, Superintendant of Indian Affairs, yesterday.

This letter brings news of the safe arrival of the Indian Supply Expedition at Fort Thompson on the 2d inst. The entire loss on the route consisted of one ox. Twenty wagons were left at Butternut Valley, twenty miles out from Mankato. With that exception everything went through in good order.

The expedition left Mankato on the 7th of November, and leaving out the detentions, which amounted to eight days, before they left our settlements, the actual time consumed in making the trip was eighteen days. The distance as measured by the odometer was 280 miles and the feasibility of the route was absolutely settled. In summer season when feed is good the trip can be made in fourteen days.

The opening of the route is a very important matter which will result ultimately, in the establishment of the overland route to the Idaho gold mines and the valley of the Yellow Stone.

Provisions and transportation were much higher at Sioux City than in the upper Minnesota valley, and the government as well as the public is largely the gainer by Col. Thompson's enterprise in opening this new route.

We clip the above from the Press of the 29th ult. It is a complete answer to the croaking of copperheads in this section, who were so loud-mouthed in their denunciations of everything connected with this train.

We notice in the Record of Oct. 3rd, this remarkable sentence, emanating from the editor. "There is no possible way in which the people of Minnesota can be benefited by the proposed cart-way, even were it seriously contemplated by the Government, which we very much doubt." Now that this contemplated "cart-way is fully established and opened up, we should be pleased to listen to the editor while he sets forth the many ways in which it is not possible for his readers to be benefited by the establishing of this route, and making Mankato its rendezvous.

* * *

The Record, true to its instincts, "flies the track" when it finds itself put to for an argument, and has a great deal to say about "fulsome puffs," and "bones to pick," which it calls trivial, but which seem to fret it considerably every week. Good evening, "fulsome." Good evening, "bones."

In its last issue, the editor trumps up the charge that we have manfested indifference and opposed every effort to recruit companies in this county, since the war began. This is the silliest charge that the editor ever made, for we venture to say that there is not a sane man in the Valley, Republican or Democrat, but what knows it to be false, and many Democrats have told us so during the week. When a newspaper editor finds no better employment than to publish such a silly and false charge as the one refered to, it shows plainly that he is playing his last card.

Our loyalty has never been questioned, and we do not have to talk about loyalty every week to convince our readers of it. But not so the Record; a perusal of its columns from week to week will show how deep is the loyal cloak of this vile hypocrite.

* * *

The Record says "Little Mac" is decidedly its preference for President in 1864, but shall not trot him out until he receives the endorsement of the Convention. It would have spoken more to the point if it had added "until we find out whether a majority of our subscribers are in favor of him."

—There is a rumor that Longstreet has reinforced Lee, and the latter has crossed the Rappidan, compelling him to fall back. As the latest authentic advices left Longstreet in Tennessee there is probably no truth in this story.

A Change in the Bounties after the Fifth.

The following important dispatch was received by Capt. Saunders last evening.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24th.

Capt. T. M. Saunders, St. Paul:

A law has been passed to the effect that no bounties except such as are now provided by law shall be paid to any person enlisted after the 5th of January next. The only bounty provided by law is the one hundred ($100) dollars authorized by Act of Congress, promulgated in General Order 49, Series of 1861, from this office. Bounties will be paid in accordance with existing orders to recruits who enlist before January 5th inclusive, for any three years' organization in service, or authorized by the War Department, and in process of completion.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D TOWNSEND, A. A. G.

By this it will be seen that all who desire to secure the munificent bounties of three and four hundred dollars must enlist immediately. There has been no official statement that the draft will be postponed, but even if it should be, the bounties will be cut down so that now is most emphatically the time to enlist.

Nine days more are all that remain and during that time much work can and should be preformed.

From LaGrange, Tennessee.

We are premitted to copy the following extract from a private letter written by Captain Thornton to a friend in this place:

I can hardly realize the fact that I am here in Tenn., and daily hear the institution denounced in the bitterest terms, and no one is found who is willing to take on himself the odium of defending it. What a change. We have now over 50,000 black troops. When the thing was first started it was so unpopular in the army that it was difficult to find men to officer the few first Regiments; now there is no more popular branch of the service. They were willing to let the negro help fight if he would, but only a few were willing to risk the odium of being a "nigger officer." Now, the place is eagerly sought after, and in camp, so far as I can see, the black troops are treated with the same consideration as if they were white. You know I always favored the plan, but that the principal thing I expected to accomplish, was so to teach the negro the use of arms as to prevent his ever again being enslaved. while at the same time, I thought they would serve us as garrison troops, and to a great extent enable us to put all our white troops in the field; but that idea is exploded, and by next spring, you will find black troops in the field occupying the same position, and performing the same duties as white soldiers. There is now, no two opinions in the army; if there is, no one is willing to run the risk of being laughed at, by expressing a doubt of their efficiency. My hopes for the Union, have never been so high as now. indeed I do not now have a doubt of our success. Yet we have perhaps several big battles to fight. Could Mead only have done in Virginia what Grant done at Chattanooga, there might not have been another great battle, but his failure there I think, makes it necessary to fight at least, two more great battles, and several minor ones.—This, I think, is the best we can hope for. Yet, as to the result of these battles if prudently conducted, I am more than sanguine.

A new ocean steam line from Montreal to Liverpool is projected. Canada is to subscribe $500,000 and England $2,000,000 towards the enterprise. It is proposed to build a fleet of screw steamships of about two thousand to two thousand five hundred tons, of large capacity and of moderate power, and to begin a fortnightly service each way, to be increased to a weekly line, calling at a port in Ireland, as soon as the vessels can be got ready. Until such time as the ships are built it is believed there will be no difficulty in chartering suitable vessels, so as to enable the company to go into operation in the spring.

The capture Dr. John R. Peters, who killed the rebel General Van Dorn, has been mentioned. He was carried to Meridan, Miss., and subsequently brought up, on a writ of habeas corpus, on the 25th of November. After a hearing he was discharged.

"THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY.—The thirteenth volume of this able periodical begins with the January number. Steadily increasing in popularity since its present Publishers, Messrs. Ticknor & Fields, assumed its management, it has now a circulation greater than that ever reached by any American magazine of its class, and numbers among its regular contributors such names as Longfellow, Hawthorne, Emerson, Bryant, Agassiz, Holmes, Lowell, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Whittier, and others scarcely less eminent. Its stereotyped volumes are a valuable repository of original papers on a very great variety of subjects, and its monthly issues have a genuine freshness and fitness to the hour. If it is a good test, as it certainly is, of the standing of a magazine that it attracts and introduces new writers, the names of Higginson of Gail Hamilton, and of the lamented Winthrop are evidence enough of what the Atlantte has thus accomplished. Nor can a better proof be given of the popular estimation in which it is held than the demand for a publication in separate volumes, of many of the serial papers that appeared in its pages, such as 'The Autocrat,' 'Elsie Tenner,' Agassi' Methods of Study in Natural History,' The Minister's Wooing,' 'Life in the Open Air,' Agnes of Sorrento,' 'Out-Door Papers,' Thoreau's 'Excursions,' Whittier's 'In War times, and others.

"As among the chiefest merits of the Atlantic, also, let us not forget that it has honestly held and freely declared its own opinions, and that while it has won for itself in literature a position which no other American magazine has reached, it has consistently spoken true words for Liberty and Progress. In the present crisis through which the country is passing, every intelligent American should know what influences such minds as those of the contributors to the Atlantic are exerting upon the progress of humanity."

The London Times, in an editorial on the great fight, says that "Heenan was game throughout. He tried to crush his antagonist by dashing him to the ground. King's tactics consisted in striking a series of sledge-hammer blows on the most prominent parts of Heenan's physiognomy, until the latter collapsed from exhaustion. The affair was over in twenty-four rounds and thirty-five minutes. There appears to have been little science on either side, but it was, nevertheless, a fair stand up fight. Tom Sayers was one of Heenan's seconds."

A GOLD WATCH FOR PRESIDENT LINCOLN.—It will be remembered that Mr. Hoes, the public spirited jeweler of this city, offered a prize of a $50 gold watch to the largest contributor to the great Sanitary Fair. It turns out that President Lincoln was the largest contributor his Proclamation having brought $3,000 for the benefit of the Fair. Accordingly Mr. Hoes decides that the prize belongs to the President, and he sent on the watch to-day—but not a $50 watch, but a magnificent one worth $150, with this inscription on it. Presented to Abraham Lincoln as a memorial from the Northwestern Sanitary Fair in consideration of being the largest contributor to that enterprise. A letter accompanied it explaining the matter.

The Saturday Evening Post.

The Proprietors of the Saturday Evening Post—which paper is now in its Forty-third Year!—would simply announce in their prospectus for 1864, that they design maintaining for their weekly the high character it has already acquired as a first class literary paper! They have reason to believe that the stories of Mrs. Wood, author of East Lynne, &c; Miss Braddon, author of Eleanor's Victory, &c., Marion Harland, author of Alone, &c.; Miss Virginia F. Townsend, and numerous other excellent writers, have been generally regarded as posessing the greatest merit and most absorbing interest; and they design procuring for the Post in the future as in the past, the best Stories Sketches, and other Literary Novelties which they can possibly obtain.

They intend commencing in the first paper in January a new novel by Mrs. Wood, author of East Lynne, &c.; From advance sheets expressly forwarded to us from England. This story will be called "Oswald Gray," and will be about the length of "Verner's Pride" and East Lynne."

In addition to the stories written for the Post, its editor also strives to lay before its readers the best stories from the English periodicals. And gives, in addition to the tales and sketches, more or less agricultural matter, with a riddle, receipt, news, and market departments, every week. Terms $2.00 per year in advance. The Proposed Amendments to the Enrollment Act.

Senator Wilson's bill to amend the Enrollment act, now pending in Congress, makes several important changes in the act approved March 3, 1863. The provisions for exemption, are more stringent, the division of enrolled men into two classes is repealed, volunteers who may enlist after a draft is ordered are credited to the town or county, and permission is given to any drafted man to furnish a substitute but not to pay commutation money.

The clauses in relation to exemption read as follows in the new bill the proposed amendments printed in brackets:

That the following persons be, and they are hereby excepted and exempt from the provisions of this act, and shall not be liable to military duty under the same, to wit: such as are rejected physically or mentally unfit for service; also, first, the Vice President of the United States, the judges of the various courts of the United States, the heads of the various executive departments of the government, and the Governors; of the several States, the only son liable to military duty of a widow [wholly] dependent upon his labor for support; third, the only son of aged or infirm parent or parents [wholly] dependent upon his labor for support; fourth where there are two or more sons of aged or infirm parents [wholly dependent upon their labor for support all of which sons shall have been drafted], the father, or, if he be dead the mother may elect which son shall be exempt; fifth, the only brother of children not twelve years old, having neither father nor mother [wholly] dependent on his labor for support; sixth the father of motherless children under twelve years of ag [wholly dependent upon his labor for support; seventh, where there are a father and sons in the same family and household, and two of them are in the military service of the United States, [or have deceased or become permanently disabled in said service], as non-commissoned officers musicians or privates, the residue of such family and household, not exceeding two shall be exempt; and no person but such as are herein excepted shall by exempt: Provided however, That no person who has been convicted of any felony shall be enrolled or permitted to serve in said forces.

The section in relation to substitutes is amended as follows:

That any person enrolled under the provisions of the act for enrolling or calling out the national forces, and for other purposes, approved March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, or who may hereafter be enrolled, may furnish, at any time, an acceptable substitute, and such person so furnishing a substitute shall have been accepted.

The fee of agents or attorneys for executing an exemption paper is limited to five dollars. surgeons are required to furnish certificates of disability without charge to the claimant for exemption, and severe penalties are imposed for attempts to evade the operations of the law.

Antipathy to reading sermons in the pulpit is a well known characteristic of the Scoth people. At Kirkendbright, at an inauguration, an old woman on the pulpit stairs asked one of her companions if the new minister was a reader. "Au, how can he read, woman?" was the reply, "the puir man is blin!" "I'm glad to hear it," said the first speaker. "I wish they were a' blin!"

Murder of an old Man and his Wife in Kalamazoo.

A terrible tragedy was enacted on Wednesday night of last week, in the township of Ross, in Kalamazoo county, Michigan. The victims were an aged man named Boss, and his wife, both of whom were rising sixty years of age, and lived on a farm entirely alone. They were discovered by their neighbors—the old gentleman on his bed, with his skull broken in; the old lady lying on the hearth, her skull also fractured—the instrument used having apparently been the poll or butt of a hatchet. Both were in their night clothes, and hence the murder must have been committed after or about the time of retiring. The object of the murder seems to have been money, of which a considerable sum was said to have been in the house, and all of which was missing except a few dollars in change, supposed to have been over looked. Great excitement prevails in the neighborhood, and every effort will be made to bring the perpetrators of this horrible deed to justice.

General Grant on Slavery.

Senator Wilson, in a recent speech in Philadelphia, said:

'I saw the other day a letter from General Grant. That General says. I have never been an anti-slavery man, but I try to judge justly of what I see; I made up my mind when this war opened, that the North and the South could only live together in peace as one nation by being a free nation.' Slavery,' said he, which constituted the corner stone of the so-called Confederacy, is knocked out and it will take more men to hold the black race as slaves than it would to put down the rebellion, and 'said he, much as I desire to see peace and I long for it, I am opposed to any peace, until this question of slavery is forever settled."

MME. DEMOREST'S, MIRROR OF FASHIONS.—The special object and aim in the publication of this magazine, is to present Judicious, Reliable, and Practical Information in all matters pertaining to ladies' and children's dress.

Information of the greatest possible importance to Milliners, Dress-makers, and every lady who wish to know the prevailing modes in New York and Paris.

To all enterprising ladies and industrious mothers, we shall endeavor to furnish many useful and practical suggestions in relation to the proper combination of colors, choosing materials, including cutting and making dresses, and children's clothes which of necessity must occupy a much larger portion of a woman's time, when no reliable authority is at hand to be consulted—suggestions which cannot fail to prove a source of much gratification, economy, personal refinement, and home comfort.

Do not fail to bear in mind that we furnish, in value, during the year, more than $3 in full-size patterns alone; while in plates, engravings, reliable information on fashions, more than can be secured in any or all the other fashion magazines put together, and yet the yearly subscriptions being $1 with the extra fifty cents worth of full size patterns sent as a premium, makes the yearly subscription to cost really only fifty cents, independent of the Carte de Visite. Do not fail to subscribe for the Mirror, if you wish to secure it promptly as it is sent in advance to subscribers.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Randall, is selling his stock of goods at very low prices. He has a splendid lot of coats, pants, vests, overcoats, undershirts, drawers, and gloves. Do the fair thing January 1st, and go and buy a new suit of him.

MIRROR OF FASHIONS.—The winter number of this excellent quarterly is superb. It contains many beautiful fashion plates, and a dollar's worth of full-sized patterns. A notice of it may be found in our advertising columns.

The statement made throughout the State that the draft had been postponed until the 25th inst., it seems was premature. It will come off on the 5th.

Blue Earth has raised a sufficient number of men to clear her from the draft. Though it is possible that some more will be wanted to take the place of those who may be rejected.

Ward's stock of clothing has greatly diminished since the cold weather set in, but this does not prevent one from calling on him to examine his new stock of goods recently received. He has a lot of choice goods suitable for New Years presents.

SOLD OUT.—Mr B. F. Curtis of Garden City, has sold out his hotel property to Hiram Perry, formerly of Ceresco, Wisconsin. Mr. P. knows how to keep hotel, and the citizens of that town assure us that they will have a first class house from this time henceforth. Farmers from above will now have a good stopping place with Mr Perry.

TRANSFER OF MILL PROPERTY.—The mill property at Garden City owned by Dilly, Capwell & Warner, has been purchased by H. O. Capwell of the same firm. Mr Capwell has already put up a large dam worth $500, and is now getting out timber for a grist mill, the erection of which will be commenced in the spring.

For coughs, colds, and throat disorders, use "Brown's Bronchial Troches," having proved their efficacy by a test of many years. The Troches are highly recommended and prescribed by Physicians and Surgeons in the Army,

GOOD COOKS.—Ladies, if you would be known as good cooks, and would avoid the mortification of having poor biscuits for tea when you have company, use D. B. DeLand & Co's Chemical Saleratus, and that only.

BALL AT GARDEN CITY.—There will be a grand ball at the hotel in Garden City to-night. All who love to 'trip the light fantastic toe,' are invited to be present.

A RUNAWAY.—A couple of logs on a sled, to which were attached a span of horses, took a notion to run Wednesday and came down Front and turned up Walnut street, and stopped above Broad. The horses were not broken, though the logs appeared somewhat "blowed."

IN PRESS.—A new publication replete with thrilling interest, will be issued to morrow, entitled "A Fatherly Talk to Brother Hall." All orders promptly filled. Jim Crow Wise, publisher. N. B.—This is one of those "ful-ome puffs" with a bone in it which we hope the publisher will see well "picked."

PERSONAL.—Capt. McKusick arrived in town Monday night, looking as hale and hearty as usual.

Lieut. Isaac Taylor of Co. H, 3rd Regiment, is now at home on recruiting service. Persons wishing to enlist in one of the best regiments ever sent from the State, will do well to go with Lieutenat Taylor. He reports that Union sentiments are fast gaining ground in Arkansas where the regiment is stationed, and that the boys in Co. H, are generally well.

Capt. George A. Clark, of Co. H, 2nd Regiment, arrived in town Monday evening. He looks well, and seems to enjoy military life. He will receive recruits for the "noble second."

We have not heretofore noticed the arrival of W. Maxfield, of Co. E, of the 9th, from the fact that he had not received the necessary papers from St. Paul authorizing him to enlist men. He will soon have them now, and be ready for business. Give your name to Wesley if you wish brave boys for companions.

Writing Class in Garden City.

MR. EDITOR:—The frequent notices in your paper a few weeks ago, concerning a writing class in your city, infused your patrons in this vicinity to investigate the matter, and if "such and such thing be so" to take the advantage of so good an opportunity, and give to ourselves, and to our children that which we so much need, viz: correct instructions in the art of writing. And we are happy to state that the effect of our investigations amount to this. We now have in progress a flourishing class in penmanship, over 60 scholars and every one making rapid improvement.

We hope others will become interested upon this subject, so much so, that "Shaw and Andrus" will be compelled to remain in and canvass the State, until there shall be a complete revolution in the art of teaching the science of penmanship.

Yours Truly.

FOR THE LADIES.—The well known publishers of that estimable journal Saturday Evening Post—have issued their Prospectus for a new Magazine, under the title of "The Lady's Friend," which they will furnish to single subscribers at the low rate of $2 per annum, in advance; two copies, one year, $3. To make the terms of securing one of the best and long established journals, and a Magazine that cannot fail to be emphatically good under the supervision Mrs. H. Peterson, within the reach of all. The publishers offer to send "The Lady's Friend" and Evening Post, at the low rate of $3 per annum, invariably in advance. It is unnecessary to mention that the best corps of writers in the Union are engaged to assist in making the Lady's Friend all that we recommend it, besides it will be handsomly illustrated. Send in your names, and secure the first number. Address Deacon and Peterson Philadelphia.

THE
Singer Sewing Machines.

Our LETTER A FAMILY SEWING MACHINE is fast gaining a world-wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the cheapest and best and most beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Gauging, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording and so forth No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work, It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch, which is the best stich known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the letter A Family Sewing Machine, Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work.—While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes,

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest there on, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P. Folsom in 1852, and by E. D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds ($\frac{2}{3}$) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota,"

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors, at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.22, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

MANHOOD;

How Lost! How Restored!

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price, Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on the receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

FINKLE & LYON'S
SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., an are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tention, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

PLEASE CALL AND EXAMINE, OR SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful tonic, corective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and bowels, Cures, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex arising from Boodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes. Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetters Stomach Bitters. This popular preparations contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants. It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, Hostetters Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard. In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehensions of an attack, escape the scourge, and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine, Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health, within a few days by the use of Hostetter's Bitters. The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic and hence it works wonders in cases of Dispepsia and in less confirmed forms of indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless apperent, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs: Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous attacks, Lowness of spirits and fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes. The agony of billious colic, is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally restoring to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented. As a general tonic, Hostetter's Bitters produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and debility and decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-inforce and re-establish them. Last but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements, present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day. No family medicine has been so universally, and it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as Hostetter's Bitters. Prepared by Hostetter and Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere. 23

HELMBOLD'S.
Genuine Preparations.

COMPOUND Fluid extract Buchu, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Watery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflamation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, of abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of power,
Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves, Trembling,
Horror of Disease, Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face
Pallid Countenance

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the Patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases."

"Insanity and consumption." Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess the records of the insane asylums. And melancholly deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which Helmbold's Extract Buchu invariably does,

A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females—Females—Females —In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion. Habits of Dissipation, or in the decline or change of life. Take no more Balsam, Mercurey, or unpleasant medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases Helmbold's Extract Buchu and improved Rose was cures secret diseases in all their stages, at little expense. Little or no change in diet, no inconvenience, and no exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and inflamation, so frequent in the class of diseases, and expelling all poisonous diseases and wornout matter. Thousands upon thousands who have been the victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the poison has, by the use of powerful astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage. Use Helmbold's Extract Buch for all affections, and diseases of the urinary organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating and no matter of how long standing. Diseases of these organs requires the aid of diuretic Helmbold's extract Buchu is the great diuretic, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is recommended. Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

Price $1,00 per bottle, or six for $5,00.— Delivered to any Address, securely packed from observation. Describe symptoms in all communications, cures guaranteed! Advice gratis! address letters for information to H B. Helmbold, Chemist, 104 South Tenth st, bel. chestnut, Phil.

Helmbold's medical depot, Drug and chemical warehouse, 594 Broadway N. Y.

Beware of counterfeit and unprincipled dealers who endeavor to dispose of their own and other articles on the reputation attained by Helmbold's genuine preparations, Extract buchu, Sarsaparilla, Improved Rose wash, sold by all druggists everywhere, ask for Helmbold's, take no other.

CARRIER'S ADDRESS.

My Friends, while you enjoy abundant cheer,
The Press should be in your remembrance clear.
We glean the news, from every distant clime,
And note the changes, of the coming time.
We watch the progress, of the bloody strife,
That long has sought, to take the Nations life.
And now rejoice, because we plainly see
That this fair land, will soon be wholly FREE.
No groaning slave shall wear the hated chain,
No human flesh, be ever sold again.
From distant Maine, to the Pacific shore,
The brave, the FREE, shall rule forever more.
And those vile traitors, Davis, Toombs and Co.,
Shall drink the cup of bitter tasting woe.
While Copperheads, detested more than they.
Shall shun the light, and hide like beasts of prey.
They watched, and waited, for the darkest hour,
And vainly prated of Horatio's power.
Seymour, they thought, could rule the "Empire
State,"
They found their error, when alas too late.
And tho' New York, was bathed in human blood,
Her noble sons, have proved both great and good,
One petty despot could not rule the land.
Tho' hundreds fell, before his guilty band.
Ohio next, they saught for to enslave,.
But there, John Brough, has dug their deepest grave.
And Vall by flight, has saved his reb-l neck,
While fame, hope, fortune, all, have gone to wreck.
Thus perish all, the dastard traitor crew.
Who to their country's cause have proved untrue.

What of our armies, that on every field,
Have won fresh laurels, for their country's shield.
Time, time would fail were I to enter here,
On those proud records, to the country dear.
But in the UNION, you will always find,
News from our armies, suited to the mind.
I mean the mind, that constituted right,
Such men as Blue Earth, rallies to the fight.
Such women too, as greet me every day,
Such Christian women, as for our soldiers pray.
The sick, the wounded, long have felt their aid,
For kindly presents, oft to them conveyed.
And little girls, with noble christian grace,
Have here been foremost in the noble race.
I must forbear, I cannot mention all,
That here respond to every proper call.
But I will add, and in Mankato's name,
The good, the pure, will guard the soldier's fame.
And when bright peace, shall gladden all the land,
And men redeemed, walk FREE on every hand,
We'll honor LINCOLN, for that Proclamation,
That lifted millions, from degredation.
BUTLER and FREMONT too, shall have a place,
Amongst the lights, that shed a noble grace.
Upon this land, the purest of the free,
When men no more shall pine in Slavery:
One word my friends, one for the sainted dead.
In freedoms cause, these heroes, fought and bled
They are not dead, they've only "gone before,"
And now rejoice with angels evermore.

To you dear friends, and patrons of my suit;
I give with deep respect, my best salute.
Tis in remembrance of your kindness
In the changeful year that's passed
Of smiles and pleasant welcomes
And kind words, that will ever last.
And if perchance in my wanderings
I have met with bold looks, and a sneer,
I bury them deep, in the dead years grave,
And wish friend and foe a happy New Year.
Yes; the old year has gone, at twelve last night,
As the moon shone forth with a ghostly light,
He his mantle took like the olden seer,
And wrapt it around the annointed New Year.
And then, like the glow-worm haughty and proud
He gathered around him, his pure white shroud.
Which he had woven fast from the day of his birth
And expired with a kiss, to old mother earth.
The wind sang his requim, with shivering breath,
And the stars kept watch in the court of death.
And departed not till the sun look'd down,
And enthroned the young king, with a golden crown.
Then again, do I wish you a happy New Year,
Surrounded with blessings, and friends that are dear.
Not to mention the dainties, which greenbacks supplies,
Chickens and turkey's, puddings and pies.
And if Lazarus waits, at your outer door,
Bid him kindly come in, forget not the poor.
Bind up his wounds with a gentle hand,
And bid him partake of the fruits of the land.

In our town, every trade and profession meets,
And prosperity walketh with wealth her streets.
There's not a land on this mundane sphere,
But holdeth her representative here.
Here you'll be sure to catch a glimpse,
At mother fashion's face.
Who tho' she's styled capricious
Is not devoid of grace,
And though she rules her subjects,
With a despotic sway,
All worship at her footstool,
And none dare say her way,
The ladies wear their dresses,
Trailing half a mile behind;
And gentlemen their coat-tails
Flapping to the wind.
To Mankato she has gathered
Stores of every kind;
With all things that are beautiful
To gratify the mind;
Ther's Bradley brothers, merchant
So affable and kind;
They have so many splendid goods,
One can't make up their mind;
And then again there's Christensen
Who your heart is sure to gain,
For ask for anything on earth,
And you will not ask in vain.
And Ward the badger merchant.
To his country so loyal and true.
I'll vouch for his honest dealing
While he sails 'neath the red, white and blue.
And then comes Marks, with his splendid stock,
And nicest store in town,
He sells so low—one cannot bear
To pull his prices down.
And listen oh! Mankatoites,
If you should chance to fail
To purchase goods at other stores,
Try Dubuison and Prael.
There's J. J. Shaubhul, honest soul;
None dare with him compete,
He has goods enough to clothe the town;
From their heads, down to their feet.
There's Irvin tailor merchant,
One's taste he always hits,
And though he's called good-natured,
He'll give you perfect fits;
And don't forget tailor P feffer,
Who can suit you to a T,
And Mr. Gude tailor
There's none so good as he.
And as for clothier Randall,
I challenge any man
In goods of every style and kind,
To beat him if he can.
There's Mrs. Potts the milliner—
Aid me, ye sister graces!
To describe her loves of bonnets,
Ribbons, flowers and laces,
And remember Mrs. Oglesby,
How she contrives to sell
Her elegant goods at such a price,
Is more than I can tell;
And the milliner Mrs. Armstrong,
You can take my word upon it;
You may search the eastern cities,
And not find a lovlier bonnet.
There's Meagher that advertises,
A ten dollar stove for three,
And Sparrow with his hardware stock,
None sells so cheap as he,
There's Wickersham the druggist,
Patronized by all,
And on the new arrival, Kilgore,
Don't forget to call;
And Thurston and Finch the grocer,
Who have every thing to sell,
And Kyte, who keeps the corner store,
Has more than I can tell.
Good Livery stables, Tyner keeps,
So does neighbor Swayno
If you hire a horse of either,
You'll be sure to hire again,
We have plenty of lawyers to examine your case,
Who will pocket the fees, with infinite grace,
There's Willard and Barney, Pitcher and Finch,
Who could clear the Old Harry himself on a pinch.
Freeman, Paddock, Buck and Waite,
Who can clear a bad cause, and opponents berate.
But for fear that I am wearying,
Your patience quite too long,
I'll close with many thanks,
My truthful New Year's song,
Hoping this excellent motto,
You sincerely do believe,
That its better far, to give,
Than what tis to receive.
So in memory to the old year,
That's forever past and gone,
Please give odd dimes and quartars,
To LEVI PATTERSON.

A keeper of a saloon, advertising his establishment, concludes thus: "Those of my patrons who may desire it, can be sent home on a wheelbarrow, gratis."

An Irishman being asked by a friend, "Has your sister got a son or a daughter?" answered, "Upon my sowl, I don't know whether I'm an uncle or an aunt."

THE SOLDIER'S BLOUSE.

BY M. T. CALDOR.

CHAPTER II.

THE terrible battle week was over, and the Army of the Potomac, torn, and shattered, and frightfully decimated but grim and defiant yet, took a moment's breathing time at Harrison's Landing.

Faces were very grave, and the groups that gathered together, talked in slow and subdued accents. It could not well be otherwise. The battle roar had scarcely died away, the terrible scenes through which they had passed seemed still to hover around with nightmare horror Men who had seen comrades falling around them by scores, had borne off to a hurried grave officer after officer, had seen human life tossed to eternity by the fiery breath of the battle fiend, like bubbles blown idly from a childs pipe at pastime, and had escaped themselves, they scarcely could tell how or why, such could not speedily resume the idle jest or merry tone of jovial camp life. And yet they were no cowed, or sullen, or despairing faces. Those who had come out from the fiery furnace were ready to do and dare again.

Here and there some leading spirit strove to throw off the melancholy that fell upon all, as the thinned companies gathered together, some scarcely able to muster a corporal's guard. And among these was a tall, fine-looking soldier with a sergeant's stripes on his arm, who, seeing the groups around him sitting with drooping heads, and melancholy abstracted eyes, began talking cheerfully to divert their attention.

"Never mind, boys, there's ups and downs in life as well as in battle, and the poor fellows that have fallen are through with the whole campaign and gone to the land of Peace and the one abiding Home. It's not for us to grieve at their loss, but to follow their example and do the best we can, when we charge again."

"What's the use of that talk," growled one desponding voice; "here we are back again, all that confounded work, these long months, to be done over again."

"What kind of a soldier is that, Nat, who can't stand a little reverse? If it was all victory and advance, who wouldn't enlist. It's the good soldier who picks himself up, and goes at it again with redoubled energy. And now I claim it's our company that's made of all good soldiers. Besides who's going to say that we haven't the best of it? If it wasn't for that pile of knapsacks we were forced to leave at Malvern Hill, I think we should all be glorying in the steadiness with which we held up against the forces they hurled against us.'

"Yes, those knapsacks! here we are not a thing in the world but what we stand in. I'm not sure but when these clothes come off, my skin will come too,' said another.

'Oh, if my poor mother could see me!' sighed another voice.

'Boys, boys,' said the undismayed sergeant, 'wouldn't it be the greater glory for your mother and sweethearts to see you bearing these evils cheerfully, for your country's sake. I haven't either to mourn or glory for me, but I'm not going to be blue over this little disaster. Uncle Sam has plenty more suits somewhere; give the old gentleman time to learn our troubles. And I'm sure I'm the worst off of all of you,' and he displayed the breast of his shirt, fairly stiff with gore. "It's where poor Capt. D———'s head laid when I raised him up, and Charley Brown's blood is there too. Even if I had the chance to wish it off, I don't know but it would seem almost wicked. Poor fellows, they're out of trouble now.'

'You did not get a wound, yourself Phil?' queried another raising himself from the ground where he had reclined.

'Not a scratch, thank Heaven! and you'll do me justice, boys, that I was where the bullets hissed thickly enough. But there are some sanitary teams coming from the hospital tents. I hope they'll fix the poor fellows comfortable for moving.

The strong wagons came on slowly, and the driver of one halted opposite the group.

'You found need enough of your charity,' said the youthful sergeant stepping forward from the others. "Did you have enough for all the wounded?'

'Yes, for this side; the other teams went to the rear. There's a few flannels left. I suppose all you poor fellows need them badly enough. You may take them and distribute them among the most needy. I wont carry them back.'

'They'll be welcome enough; but if you can spare the time, you had better give them out yourself. I am afraid we could not help being selfish.'

The agent of the Sanitry Commission looked with interest into the fine face of the speaker, and then his eye glanced down to the discolored bloody shirt.

'I am sure you need not scruple to take one yourself, if that is all you have. Why, sergeant, if you have lost so much blood as that, you ought to be in the hospital.'

'It's not mine sir. I helped to carry off the wounded, at one time, and my captain died in arms; ah, sir we have seen sorry times, but we havn't lost heart I shall be very greatful for the blouse if you can spare me one, and so will ever so many of the others."

The agent threw open the box behind him, selected one, and handed it to him. By this time a crowd had gathered around them, and in a trice the stock had exhausted, and many turned away disappointed.

Philip Lisle, the sergeant, shortly appeared, looking, as was declared by all, like a gentleman once more. His face showed signs of emotion, and in his hand he held a small slip of paper.

'What is it, what have you found, sergeant?' exclaimed two or three voices.

For answer, he cleared away a little huskiness from his voice, and read aloud Kate Weston's little note.

'What say you, boys,' exclaimed he in conclusion, 'shall anything discourage us from fighting bravely to save our land for such countrywomen as she.

'No, no,' was reiterated on all sides; and cheeks that had been wan and begrimmed with battle smoke for the last eventful week, flushed healthy again, and eyes sparkled, and caps were waved, and "three times three" was given with a will—how little could she have imagined it—for far off little Katie, working diligently still over the 'ugly' flannel.

Nor was the end yet.

'Why, Katie, here is a letter for you, postmarked as a soldier's letter. I did not know there was any one to write you,' said Mrs. Weston, coming into Katie's room with a letter in her hand.

'Neither have I to my knowledge—who can it be from?' and she hurriedly slipped the paper knife through the envelope, and unfolded the paper.

How her cheek glowed, and what radiant delight flashed into her pretty face.

'Oh, mother, mother, who would believe it? It is so splendid, how can I be thankful enough?' was the somewhat incoherent ejaculation of the astonished girl.

'But what is it, dear, you havn't told me?'

'The soldier work, the blouse I made,' and Kate laughed, and then sat down, and ended with a hearty cry.

Her mother silently took the extended letter and read what was written in a free bold hand.

To Miss Katie Weston, G———, Mass.

My dear lady—It seems only right and just that you should learn the mission of your benevolent needlework, and especially the blessing that your little note carried with it to a group of disheartened, wearied, battle-worn soldiers. The agent of the Sanitary Commission arrived at Harrison's Landing almost as soon as we, and after the needs of what wounded remained there had been supplied, he had several suits of fresh clean flannels left. The precious souvenir, as I shall always call it, of your generosity and patriotism fell to my fortunate lot, and succeeded the threadbare, filthy, blood-stained garment that had gone through all the battles of the week. I can not tell you how much comfort and even luxury it brought with it, much less can I express all the strength and courage that little note pinned in the sleeve, imparted, not only to my own heart but to the surviving members of my company. It lifted all discouragement and dismay and disappointment from our hearts. It filled us with pure and noble patriotism, which is the brightest courage of a soldier. I trust that you will pardon us, that then and there we lifted up our voices in the camp fashion, and gave three times three for the generous donor, Miss Kate Weston, of the Massachusetts. While our countrywomen are thus nobly mindful of their soldiers, no fear that our armies shall grow demoralized, or our cause shall be unsuccessful. May Heaven bless you and be assured, he, who wears the garment your gentle hands have fashioned, shall strive bravely to be worthy of it. Do I ask too great a favor, when I beg a line in return to assure me my letter has been received?

Respectfully yours.
SERG'T PHILIP LISLE.
Co. D., ——Regt., M. V. M.

"This is indeed a welcome letter, dear Katie,' said Mrs. Weston thoughtfully, we can work now with redoubled earnestness. The writer is evidently a gentleman. But what about the note—you did not tell me.'

No; I did it upon the impulse of the moment, and never expected to hear from it again. But I may answer the letter and tell him how glad I am about it, and say that I don't deserve his praise, for if Cousin Mary had not talked to me I might have gone on unheeding my duty, like so many others. You are willing I should write, mamma?'

'I do not see that any harm can come of it.' answered Mrs. Weston.

And Kate flew to her writing desk with beaming eyes.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer thinks the prospects of the multitudes who will flock to Washington this winter are not very promising. The cost of living is shown to be enormous. The Inquirer says:

The boarding-house keepers and owners of houses are pushing up the rates of living and rooms to a fearful extent, a continuance of which will put it beyond the means of any married man to subsist comfortably, unless he has a salary of at least two thousand dollars. There is some reason for an advance, to be found in the fact that during the last three years the population has increased from thirty to near ninety thousand. The clerks in the various departments have all been largely increased; and not so many houses have been built up as have been burned; many fine houses have been taken posession of by the Government, which pays enormous rents, and the supply being far below the demand, holders are enabled to command almost any price they ask.

A house with a dozen rooms will bring $2,400 per annum, and from that up to $5,000.

An instance has come under our own observation of a house that after the first battle of Bull Run, was offered for sale at four thousand dollars now rents for three thousand.

Houses that rented for five hundred dollars two years ago, now bring two or three thousand per annum. Many families have rented their houses out and gone North to live, thus securing handsome revenue on which to live in style, when, had they remained here, they would hardly have been enabled to make both ends meet.

Mr. Lincoln's Kind-Heartedness.

The Newark (New Jersey) Advertiser, referring to the second capture by the rebels, of Benjamin Shultz, of that city a member of the 8th New Jersy regiment, mentions the following:

'An incident connected with Mr. Shultz illustrates the kind-heartedness of Mr. Lincoln. On his return from his former imprisonment, on parole, young Shultz was sent to Camp Parole at Alexandria. Having had no furlough since the war, efforts were made, without success, to get him liberty to pay a brief visit to his friends; but having faith in the warm heartedness of the President the young soldier's widowed mother wrote to Mr. Lincoln, stating that he had been in nearly every battle fought by the Army of the Potomac, had never asked a furlough, was now a paroled prisoner and in consequence unable to perform active duties, that two of his brothers had also served in the army, and asking that he be allowed to visit home that she might see him once more. Her trust in the President was not unfounded. He immediately caused a furlough to be given to her son, who, shortly before he was exchanged, visited his family to their great surprise and joy.'

ONE of our principal recruiting offices was recently the scene of quite an amusing incident.

'So, sir, you have clapped your dirty soger trappings on my husband, have you?'

'Who is your husband?' asked the officer.

'Billy McCurtee, and a bold boy he is, so plase ye. But it's a dirty thing of you, my pretty man, to take him from his wife and children.'

'Can't be helped,' said the officer, 'it's too late now.'

'Then take the baby, too!' cried she, as she forced the little one into the arms of Lieutenant Adams. 'Take 'em all, I'll send you four more to-day.'

Off she ran at a rapid pace, leaving the unfortunate officer with the new recruit squalling in his arms. Doubtful of its value to the service of Uncle Sam, he sent it home by its father.

◆

ONE of our cotemporaries in an obituary of a young lady who lately died, closed by saying, "She had an amiable temper, and was uncommonly fond of ice-cream and other delicacies."

◆

A stranger in a printing office asked the youngest apprentice what his rule of punctuation was. 'I set up as long as I can hold my breath, then I put in a comma; when I gape I insert a semi-colon; and when I want a chaw of tobacco, I make a paragraph.'

How to Estimate Profits

The agricultural editor of the Minneapolis Atlas, writing on the above subject says,

'Any farmer is getting rich who improves his mode of cultivation so as to produce great crops, or increases his facilities for the working or management of his land. Every embellishment he gives his homestead, every fruitful or ornamental tree he plants, every thicket he clears up, every stump he removes and every unsightly, stagnant pool or marsh he drains, is a positive gain, that has its value to be estimated by the satisfaction of its acquisision.

His new shed, ice house, smoke house, poultry house, pig sty or cellar wall, is money safely put at interest subject to no capricious fluctuation of the market.

The thrifty farmer is he who in the balance of accounts at the end of the year, exhibits improvements in his live stock, in his buildings, in the additional comforts of his family and in the culture of his mind as well as that of his farm.

If the farmers of Minnesota would abandon the idea of cash profits, and substitute a system of loaning their incomes to themselves in order to prosecute, with increased vigor, the various improvements of the farm, a happy contentment would take the restless desire for a change of occupation, so prevalent among us.

AN INCIDENT.—A correspondent of the La Crosse Democrat, writing from the 2d Cavalry, gives an interesting account of Major Eastman's foraging expedition last month, across the Big Black. In a skirmish with the rebels Corporal Fenire, of Company B, was killed. In connection with the removal of his body after the fight, the writer relates the following incident in which Mrs Ingraham, a secesh sister of Gen. Meades, figures conspicuously:

'Coming back to where our man lay a strecher was improvised—two sails and a blanket pinned round with four rebel ram-rod and he was borne along in the column by eight of his late comrades. It was the only casualty of the fight, but we lamented even this, for he was a brave fellow and fought well. Captain Sherman and a detail were sent ahead to procure a carriage to bring the body into camp. The column with the corpse marched to the Ingraham farm, and found the captain expostulating with the sister of Gen. Meade on the subject of transportation.

That lady had a fine, large, roomy carriage, just the thing for a hearse but she had a safeguard also from Major General McPherson, and it was death to violate it, she said. So it read. She would not listen to the proposition of lending the carriage for any such purpose. So matters stood when Major Eastman came up with the column, and began scolding the Captain for his tardiness. Mrs. Ingraham wanted to know if he would support his officers in taking the carriage. She was a sister of Major-General Meade, and she had protection papers from General McPherson and she 'reckoned' the Major wouldn't treat her so.

'You're a sister of Major-General Meade, are you, Mrs. Ingraham?'

'Yes, sir, I am, and I've got Major-General McPherson's safeguard.'

'Well, I'm a brother of J—s C—t and by G—, if you don't have that harness brought forth in less than two minutes, I'll put you in that carriage with that dead Yankee, and take you and your safeguard to Major-General McPherson this night.'

The lady retired, and the harness appeared within the time specified.

HEART POWER.—A man's force in the world other things being equal is just in the ratio of the force and strength of his heart. A full hearted man is always a powerful man: if he be erroneous, then he is powerful for error; if the thing is at heart, he is sure to make it notorious, even though it may be a downright falsehood. Let a man be ever so ignorant still, if his heart be full of love to a cause, becomes a powerful man for that object, because he had a heart force. A man may be deficient in many of the advantages of education, in many of those niceties which are so much looked upon in society; but once give him a good strong heart that beats hard, and there is no mistake about his power. Let him have a heart that is full up to the brim with an object, and that man will do the object, or else he will die gloriously defeated, and will glory in his defeat. Heart is power.—Spurgeon.

A little boy had a colt and a dog, and his generosity was often tried by visitors asking him, 'just to see what he would say,' to give them one or both of his pets. One day he told a gentleman present that he might have his colt, reserving the dog, much to the surprise of his mother, who asked:

"Why, sonny, didn't you give him the dog?"

"Say nothing, say nothing, mother; when he goes to get the colt, I'll set the dog on him."

A COOL SOLDIER ON LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN.—A soldier belonging to an Iowa regiment, at the battle of Lookout Mountain, coolly sat down on a rock during the thickest of the engagement, to wait for his gun to cool off, as he had fired it very often and effectually. The boys who were fighting around him deliberately ceased their firing and waited until he sung for them an old fashioned and familiar song, 'Root Hog or Die,' which he is said to have sung with such humor as to make all merry and forgetful of the fearful scenes around them. When the song was finished, they reloaded their guns and entered the fight again doing damage to the rebels.

When James T. Brady, the celebrated lawyer of New York, first opened a lawyer's office, he took a basement room which had previously been occupied by a cobbler. He was somewhat annoyed by the previous occupant's callers, and iritated by the fact that he had few of his own. One day an Irishman entered, 'The cobbler's gone, I see,' he said. 'I should think he had,' tartly responded Brady. 'And what do ye sell?' he asked, looking at the solitary table and a few law books. 'Blockheads,' responded Brady. 'Be gorra' said the Irishman, 'ye must be doing a mighty fine business—ye haint got but one left.,

BUILDINGS.—Tidiness about farm buildings marks the thrifty farmer, and it is a virtue which grows by practice. The comfort of the family and the herd are alike promoted, and in this as in many other things, there is as strong an appeal to the pocket and to the conscience as to the principles of good taste. He who neglects little matters and can only "slick up" now and then when he makes a regular business of it, is an untidy and probably a thriftless farmer. If you propose building, be satisfied with no plan until it is most thoroughly studied. Alteration and frequent repairs are costly luxuries.

A poor son of the Emerald Isle applied for employment to an avaricious hunk, who told him that he should employ no more Irishmen, 'for the last one died on my hands, and I was forced to bury him at my own charge.'

'Ah, yer honor,' said Pat, brightening up, 'and is that all? Then you'll give me the place, for sure I can get a certificate that I never died in the employment of any master I iver served.'

◆

ARE YOU KIND TO YOUR MOTHER.—Who guarded you in your health, and comforted you when ill? Who hung over your little bed, when fretful and put the cooling draught to your parched lips? Who taught you how to pray, and gently helped you to read? Who had borne with your childish ways? Who has borne with your childish ways? Who loves you still, and who contrives and work's for you every day you live? It is your mother. Now let us ask you, 'are you kind to your mother?

◆

A good story is told of a member of the Thirty-fourth Indiania. His colonel, observing him one morning wending his way to camp with a fine rebel rooster in his arms, halted him to know if he had been stealing chickens. 'No, Colonel,' was the reply. 'I just saw this old fellow on the fence, and I ordered him to crow for the Union, and he wouldn't do it, so I confiscated him for a rebel.'

A person complained to Dr. Franklin having been insulted by one who called him a scoundrel. 'Ah!' replied the doctor, 'and what did you call him? 'Why,' said he 'I called him a scoundrel too.' 'Well' resumed Franklin, 'I presume you both spoke the truth.'

◆

'Say, Mr. Clerk, have you a good strong Porter about the hotel?, 'Yes sir, we have the strongest one in the State.'

'Is he intelligent?'

'Quite intelligent, for a Porter,'

'Do you consider him fearless—that is bold and courageous?'

'I know he is; he would'nt be afraid of Satan himself.'

'Now, Mr. Clerk, if your porter is intelligent enough to find room No 107 fearless enough to enter, and strong enough to get my trunk away from the bedbugs, I would like to have him bring it down.

◆

FARMERS' CLUBS.—He who neglects opportunities to meet and talk over agriculture matters with his brother farmers loses much. See to it if possible that there is some regular neighborhood meeting of farmers and their wives and their children, to secure improvement in farming and kindred things.

WIFE AND HOME.—Far sweeter music to a true woman than the tones of harp or piano touched by her hand are the cheerful voices of husband and children, made joyous by her presence.

The Weekly Union.

Mankato, Friday, Jan. 8th, 1864.

Printing the Laws.

Our readers will please remember that the Mankato Union has been appointed to publish the Acts, Resolutions and Orders of the Thirty-eighth Congress. We intend that this shall not in any manner interfere with the amount of reading matter which we will give from week to week; on the contrary, we shall endeavor to increase the variety and quality so fast as our advertising limits will permit. We have now a circulation of five hundred and four copies, and a knowledge of the fact that the Union is the United States official paper for this portion of Minnesota, will tend greatly to increase our subscription list.

The Cold Weather.

The telegraphic accounts of the cold weather all over the United States during the past ten days, shows that Minnesota is not the only portion of the continent where the thermometer freezes entirely up.

The snow storm of last Thursday, the 31st ult., was the most severe of any ever known in Minnesota. The thermometer was not as low as we saw it in 1858, but the wind and snow howled fearfully through the streets, and crept through every conceivable crevice in the houses. On the prairie it was a perfect hurricane. But few were able to withstand it, or dared to venture out. All mail communication was broken off, except on the St. Paul route,—the snow drifts on the prairie being from three to five feet deep.

Various reports have reached us of persons who had frozen their feet, hands and faces, but we have not been able to trace them to any reliable source. We were told that a man up the Blue Earth, was out in the woods chopping down trees. He had chopped down one, and it having lodged, it was necessary to fall another in order to get at the first. While doing so he was caught among the branches in some way, and there froze to death. His cattle which were chained near by, were also frozen. We do not credit the report, however.

All through the Eastern States it raged fearfully. The snow fell to the depth of three feet on a level.

In Louisville the mercury fell sixty-six degrees in eighteen hours, and in Buffalo it fell fifty one degrees in the same length of time.

At St. Louis the river was frozen over in one night so that teams could cross, the thermometer falling to twenty-four degrees below zero.

We think it the worst storm that ever passed over our country.

THE DRAFT.—Provost Marshall General Fry, has telegaphed to Capt Saunders, not to commence the draft until he recives specific orders.

A small part of Major Hatch's Battallion surprised a band of five Sioux near St Joseph, and succeeded in killing and scalping all of them.

It is a noticeable circumstance that of all the five ships sent in pursuit of the stolen steamer Chesapeak, the Ella and Annie, a vessel lately added to our Navy by capture, is the successful one.

The number of Yankee prisoners in Richmond yesterday was 10,526. For several days the arrivals have been very meagre. Yesterday six. Yankees (including one officer) were received, one was sent to the small pox hospital, and eleven died.—Richmond Enquirer, Dec. 19.

WE regret to learn that Mrs. Whipple was taken with congestive chills on the 30th of December, and is dangerously ill, and Bishop Whipple has been compelled to suspend his visitation in consequence of his wife's alarming condition. The best medical advices has been called in, and it is devoutly hoped that her life may be prolonged.—Press.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.—No housekeeper or cook is fully prepared to enter successfully upon her culinary duties without having the Chemical Saleratus on hand. It relieves the mind of much of the care and auxiety experienced by a skillful cook. For sale by most merchants and grocers.

Soldiers and officers in the Army, being exposed to sudden changes, should always be supplied with "Brown's Bronchial Troches," as they give prompt relief in a Cold, Cough, or an Irritated Throat.

For the Union.

A Rejoinder to Mr. Wise.

It is perhaps entirely unnecessary for me to answer the reply of the editor of the Record to the card of the writer, from the fact that Mr. Wise did not make good his assertions.

The impression which the editor of the Record sought to convey, was, that the money which was being subscribed, was for the benefit of the volunteers. Had you been entirely candid, Mr. Wise, you might have added, that the same subscription about which you bellowed so loudly, had never been collected.

The brilliant genius who drew up the paper, got ashamed of his own bantling, and the subscription was squelched.

Inasmuch as the Government pays to any person, furnishing a recruit, fifteen dollars, it would seem that that sum should be entirely sufficient to pay the expenses of the officer recruiting.

But it seems you had no "personal or political prejudices toward the writer." The public, we presume, will be slow to believe this. The manner in which you have gone out of your way repeatedly, to attack the writer, does not render such an assertion probable.

The statement that I had sent a marked copy of the UNION, containing my card to "our Senator," was a very weak and foolish one, not to characterize it as something worse Had I been silly enough to do such a thing, you had no legitimate means of ascertaining the fact. The truth is, however, that I have mailed but one copy of the Union for months, and that was four or five weeks ago, to the Winnebago Agency. The only matter in your answer which requires any notice at my hands, is your imputation of selfish motives to the late editor of the Independent. The charge that C. B. Hensley was to receive any consideration for using his influence for my appointment to the position I now hold, is a base slander upon the memory of one of the most unselfish of men. No one who knew him would credit it for a moment—never, in the life time of C. B. Hensley, was the matter ever alluded to. After his decease, in common with other of his personal friends, I rendered substantial assistance to his family. The suit against Mr. Gunning was brought in the interest of Mrs. Hensley, and was withdrawn upon the payment to her of the additional sum of fifty dollars, over and above what she had received during the time the office was run by Mr Gunning.

The "result" of the matter is, that she has received the pay for one half the office, and one hundred and twenty dollars besides, without any expense to come out, except express charges on the money sent to her.

As you have been free with your advice, I will give you a little—that is, to diligently and assiduously devote yourself to the labor of ascertaining the sentiments of your subscribers as to the next Presidential candidate, and thus save the press of the State from the humiliating and mortifying spectacle of a double summersault performed by one of the fraternity in the interest of his bread and butter.

It may be well for you to delay the matter, for a short time, for numerous reasons, one of which is, that from the rapid manner in which your subscription list has been running down lately, the labor will be less arduous if delayed for a few months.

Your race is about run in this community, "Truth will whip a lie, the world around," and when a man loses all regard for truth, he necessarily and justly loses his influence; so, when a public journal is habitually conducted so as to forfeit the confidence of community—when assertions are continually being made which the editor knows to be false—when a paper, in the absence of editorial talent, becomes a mere vehicle for gossip and slander, it soon dies out, just as your journal is doing now. It may protract a miserable existence for a short time, but it will be powerless for evil.

JOHN N. HALL.

A thorough investigation of the circumstances of Morgan's escape from the Ohio Penitentiary is in progress and promises to implicate completely some people high in position in Columbus politics society.

Robert Heller, the well-known prestigator and accomplished pianist, a report of whose death by a railroad accident was one of the recent sensations, is alive and well, having suffered but slightly from the accident alluded to.

Sterling Correspondence.

MR. EDITOR:—You must not think your Sterling correspondent is frozen up, though his ink is, There has been nothing occuring in town to write about of a special nature until quite lately.

For the last two weeks we have been contemplating the ways and means to avoid the serious consequences to some of us if caught standing in that cold draft to which you alluded a few days since.

We have held two war meetings lately, and considering the severity of the weather, and the fact that many had miles to travel over the prairie to reach the place, we had a good attendance both times, At the first meeting we resolved to offer a bounty from our town of one hundred dollars for each volunteer, and appointed a committee of six to canvass the town for recruits and to report to the next meeting to be held a week from that time.

At our second meeting it was found that not a single volunteer could be obtained. This at first sight does not look well for our patriotism, we must confess. But the truth is, our circumstances are rather peculiar. Nearly all our single men are in the army; and most of our family men say that for the sake of money they do not feel justified in leaving their families. But if they should draw a prize in Uncle Sam's lottery they will go most willingly.

At our second meeting, finding there was no prospect of getting volunteers, it was decided to do what we could for the families of those who may be drafted. It was therefore, resolved that two dollars per month be paid to each wife thus left, and one dollar per month for each child under twelve years of age. It was resolved also that a tablet be erected to the memory of those belonging to this town, who have died or may yet die in their country's service. The means to carry out the last resolution to be raised by voluntary contributions.

In spite of storms and Jack Frost, we are still continuing our day and sunday school in District No. 33, with a good attendance of children, though our house is on the open prairie. We rejoice with you that our county seat fellow citizens are at length aroused to the importance of providing the means of securing a good common school education for all the children around you. Success to your efforts. SIDNEY.

Latest News.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 2,

Meterogical barometer at Thursday noon was 29 :26. Soon afterwards it commenced rapidly falling and at eight o'clock a violent snow storm from the Northwest set in. Thursday noon the thermometer was 47 degrees above zero, and at 10 o'clock had fallen to one degree above zero. Friday morning at 7 the thermometer was 19½ below zero continued below zero all day.

The Journal statement this morning respecting the freezing of five Confederate prisoners at Jeffersonville is entirely incorrect. The prisoners were well cared for, and neither death or suffering occured among them.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 2.

But very little business was transacted here to-day on account of the weather. Since the heavy snow storm Thursday the weather has been intensely cold, the mercury having fallen 24 degrees below zero. This is unparalelled in this region. All the Railroads leading out of the city are blocked with snow; no trains have arrived and departed for two days.

The river closed this morning. Teams and pedestrains crossed on the ice all the afternoon, A large number of cattle and hogs were frozen to death on a weather-bound train on the North Missouri Railroad.

Quite a Number of frost-bitten cases are reported, some of them of a serious character.

Boston, Jan. 2.

A severe snow storm has been raging here since Thursday, the wind blowing a gale from the west.

The water in the lower part of the city is the highest that has been known for a year

BUFFALO, Jan. 2.

Two hundred feet of the Niagra Falls road near this city had been washedaway. No cars have left the depot here since Thursday. Trains, however, are running from Black Rock to suspension Bridge.

Business in the city is almost entirely suspended.

The most of the storm is now over, although it is still snowing this evening.

The weather is intensely cold. Thermometer at midnight of the 31st of December stood at 42 ° above zero; last evening it was 5 ° below and this morning it is at 9 ° below.

Telegraphic communication with the West is interrupted.

Evan's Bridge, in the lower part of the city, has been carried away.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 4.

Two soldiers were frozen to death at Camp Chase, on Saturday. The soldiers in camp at Indianapolis suffered considerable, a number had their ears and feet frozen. On Thursday four rebel prisoners were frozen to death while asleep in the cars at Jeffersonville.

The trains on all Railroads leading to Cincinnati have been much delayed by the recent cold weather. There has been a great deal of suffering among Railroad men and passengers.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 4. 1 P. M.

Clear wind N. W. Thermometer 2 ° above zero.

A NEWBERNE North Carolina dispatch of the 28th contains the following:

The plan of leasing out the abandoned plantations in Eastern Carolina, as adopted by the Hon. David N. Heaton, supervising agent of the Treasury Department, is proving a great success to the Treasury Department, and is also a great benefit to the laboring classes of both colors, who are soon to present Mr. Heaton with a beautiful testimonial.

PATENT BASKETS,—Please call into Sparrow's Stove Store and examine something new in the shape of a Bushel Basket, sealed measure.

The Christmas Festival of the Ladies Sewing Society realized $87,50 instead of $60 and $66 as reported by the town papers,

FOR SALE.—We have one of Wilson and West's Sewing Machines, second hand, for sale at a very low figure. It is a double threaded machine, and is in good sewing order.

WARD has just received a fine lot of cloths, flannels and delaines of the latest styles. Call and see for yourselves.

GIRL WANTED.—A lady wishes to get a good servant girl. Good wages paid. For information apply at this office.

We have just received by express one of Wheeler & Wilsons splendid family sewing machines. It is for sale. Call and examine it.

Tinkcom has sold out his entire stock, and will retire to private life. In his advancing years we wish him much happiness in his quiet life.

The new County officers have filed their bonds, and entered upon the discharge of their duties,

PERSONAL.—Hon. A, G, Chatfield, of Belle Plaine, and Messrs Austin & Warner, of St, Peter, are stopping in town in attendance upon Court,

D. N. H. THAYER, a private in Co. E, and brother of David A. Thayer, of this place, has received a Lieutenants commission in a negro Regiment, and is stationed at St. Louis.

ADVERTISE.—Merchants will bear in mind that the Union has a circulation nearly a third larger than any paper in the Valley, and is therefore, the best medium in which to advertise their goods.

There is no use of people wearing fig leaves for clothing, now that Randall has such a splendid stock of gentlemens clothing. His prices are very low, and his stock well assorted and suited to this market.

Finch & Thurston have purchased of J R Tinkcom, the building recently owned and occupied by Mims & Womack, and took posession yesterday. They have removed their large stock of goods to their new quarters.

Capt, Whitney's escort arrived in town the first of the week, They were fortunate in escaping the severe cold as none of them were frozen, They all look healthy and robust, and have stood the trip well, The Captain went to St Paul to report to headquarters.

Persons writing letters to members of Congress should bear in mind that they do not go free. A change has been made in the former law, and only members of Congress, and officers connected with the departments are entitled to the franking privilege.

PROMOTED.—Sometime since Wm. C. Durkee, an Orderly in Co. E, Captain Dane's company of the 9th Regiment, made application for a Captaincy in a negro Regiment, and we are pleased to learn that he has been successful, and is now Captain of Co. G. 1st Mo. A. D., and is stationed at Benton Barracks. Capt. Durkee was very well liked by the boys in company E, and they were sorry to have him leave. He was deserving of promotion, and are glad to note that his worth is appreciated.

Monday and Tuesday night friend Tinkcom employed the noted "Wizard Oil" man, (our friend D. Swift, of the Minnesota Battery) to auction off his goods, and increase his sales. The excitement was intense and his rooms have been crowded with the halt, the lame, the blind, and the deaf, to purchase goods, and listen to a recital of the cures preformed by the wonderful Wizard Oil man. Great is Tinkcom. How are you Wizard Oil?

CLUB FOR THE TRIBUNE.—Those of the old subscribers to the New York Tribune who intend to renew, will please hand in their subscription by the 15th inst, as we wish to send the list at that time. We have a large number of names now, and we want to double last years list.

THE CONTINENTAL.—The January number of this monthly is at hand. It begins the year with new attractions, and is a very superior number. It has a supplementary sheet containing the address of Hon Robert J Walker at the celebration of American Thanksgiving Day, in London November 26th, 1863.

The price of wheat has not changed, and considerable is brought into market, Barley is but 65 cents,

Nearly all the members of the Legislature have arrived in St, Paul, and it was probably organized on Wednesday,

ORDERED AWAY,—Co D, of the 6th has been ordered to Kingston, and Cos H, and E, to Fort Ridgely, They left town yesterday in sleighs,

ON account of deep snow between this place and Rochester we have had but eastern mails since the 31st,

Business has been quite lively in town during the past week, The hotels have been filled to overflowing and the streets crowded with teams from day to day, notwithstanding the severe cold weather,

Capt, Slaughters Company have been mustered in, elected their officers obtained their letter (E) and expect their advance pay this week, The officers are Capt, R, F, Slaughter; 1st Lieut, Henry Ruegg, 2nd Lieut, John R, Howard, Orderly John A, Tidland, Q, M, Sargeant, Chas, Bennett, Com, Sargeant, Hugh McMurtrie, Geo, Parrett, of this place is 1st Corporal,

DISTRICT COURT.—The January term of the District Court for this District, commenced on Monday last, in City Hall, Judge Branson, presiding.

The calender is not a long one. The cases disposed of are as follows:

M. T. Fall against A. E. Atwell, continued by stipulation.

Wm. R. Robinson against Alex. Wood, continued by order of the Court.

T. T. Pierce against Chas. Heinze, continued by stipulation.

Allen McDonald against Gustavus Johnson, continued by order of the Court.

Wm. McQueen against Catharine McQueen, continued on motion of defendants counsel.

Nthaniel Finch against T. C Lawley & Co. continued on motion of defendants counsel.

M. L. Hanningway and A. Cheadle against A. N. Dukes and A. M. Hewlett. Tried. This was for correcting an error in making a deed. A decree was ordered for plaintiff.

The divorce case of Caroline C. Cannon against James Cannon, was brought on Tuesday morning and is still in progress.

Proceeding of County Board.

FIRST DAY.

The Board of County Commissioners met at the Register of Deeds office Tuesday, January 5th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Present—Commissioners Clark, Hanna, Jones, and Goodrich.

S. C. Clark, of Garden City, was elected Chairman.

Messrs. Hanna and Jones were appointed a Committee to examine bills.

It was ordered that a bounty of $25,00 shall be paid to all recruits who may have enlisted in the Second Minnesota Cavalry up to this date, and who are not provided for in the order of October 21st, 1863, and the County Auditor is authorized to issue Bounty orders to said recruits on certificates being presented from the Captain of the Company that said recruits are mustered into the service of the United States.

On motion, Messrs. Hanna and Goodrich were appointed a committee to select offices for the County Treasurer, Sheriff, Probate Judge, and clerk of Court.

J. E. Walker and others presented a petition for a new School District in LeRay township, which was granted.

M. O. Bennett, and others presented a petition for a new School District in Mankato, which was granted.

The resignation of J. T. Williams County Treasurer, was received, and laid over until January 25th, 1864.

The Bond of B. F. Smith, Register of Deeds elect, was read and approved.

C Detimore and others presented a petition praying for alteration in School District in Vernon. The petition was granted.

On motion, the Board adjourned.

SECOND DAY.

The Bond of Elijah Middlebrook, Sheriff elect, was presented, read and approved.

Commissioner Hanna was appointed a committee to have the lock on the Probate Judges safe repaired.

A new list of jurors was made out.

The Auditor was authorized to exchange County orders for Court certificates for the ensuing year.

Messrs. Clark and Goodrich were appointed a committee to receive sealed bids for the County Printing for the ensuing year.

The Board then adjourned till Thursday, at 9 A. M,

THIRD DAY,

Several bills were examined and allowed, and the Committee on Printing made a report, All the County Printing except three items was awarded to C, H, Slocum he being the lowest bidder.

The Board was in session at the time of going to press, and the remainder of its proceedings we shall give in our next,

MARRIED.

At the residence of the brides mother January 1st. 1864, by Rev. Thomas Day, S. SMITH TWICHELL Esq of Hastings and Miss TILLIE D. HANNA of Mankato.

DIED.

In Mankato, on the 1th inst. Grace Hortense only child of Dr G. A and Grace A. Sturges, aged 14 weeks.

"We gave to God what first He gave
We bless him with our weeping eyes
Our bud sleeps not within the grave.
But sweetly blooms in Paradise."

Once more the ruthless hand of Death has entered the little family circle, and taken its darling treasure. We have watched the flowers as they bowed their fragile heads, and wondered that aught could wither such perfect beauty.

Well may we pause and reflect, for like the flowers we wither and pass away. But a deeper voice is waited among us, whispering consolation to the mourner, that an All Wise Being doeth all things well; and though we cannot solve the impenetrable mystery, Faith points beyond the tomb, to Heaven and immortality

MME. DEMOREST'S, MIRROR OF FASHIONS.—The special object and aim in the publication of this magazine, is to present Judicious, Reliable, and Practical Information in all matters pertaining to ladies' and children's dress.

Information of the greatest possible importance to Milliners, Dress makers, and every lady who wish to know the prevailing modes in New York and Paris.

To all enterprising ladies and industrious mothers, we shall endeavor to furnish many useful and practical suggestions in relation to the proper combination of colors, choosing materials, including cutting and making dresses, and children's clothes which of necessity must occupy a much larger portion of a woman's time, when no reliable authority is at hand to be consulted—suggestions which cannot fail to prove a source of much gratification, economy, personal refinement, and home comfort.

Do not fail to bear in mind that we furnish, in value, during the year, more than $3 in full-size patterns alone; while in plates engravings, reliable information on fashions, more than can be secured in any or all the other fashion magazines put together, and yet the yearly subscriptions being $1 with the extra fifty cents worth of full size patterns sent as a premium, makes the yearly subscription to cost really only fifty cents, independent of the Carte de Visite. Do not fail to subscribe for the Mirror, if you wish to secure it promptly as it is sent in advance to subscribers.

SUMMONS FOR RELIEF.

J. I. C. COOK, publisher of the State Banner, Bennington, Vt., says: he was attacked with the DYSPEPSIA, and suffered so severely from it, that not a particle of food could be swallowed without occasioning the most uncomfortable sensation in his stomach. For five years he suffered from this dreadful complaint; when he used BRANDRETH'S PILLS. The first box did not seem to benefit him much, but the second produced a change, and by the time he had taken six boxes, a complete cure was effected. He says; "My dyspepsia was gone, and my experience of an early death vanished."

THE
Singer Sewing Machines.

Our LETTER A FAMILY SEWING MACHINE is fast gaining a world-wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the cheapest and best and most beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Gauging, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch, which is the best stich known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the letter A Family Sewing Machine, Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work.—While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes,

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M, in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P Folsom in 1852, and by E. D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (2/3) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota,"

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors, at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act" to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th, 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113,52, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

MANHOOD;

How Lost! How Restored!

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price, Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on the receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in coustruction, and easily understood: and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

PLEASE CALL AND EXAMINE, OR SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

HOSTETTER'S

CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and bowels, Cures, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex arising from Boodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes. Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetters Stomach Bitters. This popular preparations contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants. It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, Hostetters Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard. In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehensions of an attack, escape the scourge, and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health, within a few days by the use of Hostetter's Bitters. The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic and hence it works wonders in cases of Dispepsia and in less confirmed forms of indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless apperent, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs: Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous attacks, Lowness of spirits and fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes. The agony of billious colic, is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally restoring to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented. As a general tonic, Hostetter's Bitters produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and debility and decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-inforce and re-establish them. Last but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements, present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day. No family medicine has been so universally, and it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as Hostetter's Bitters. Prepared by Hostetter and Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere. 23

HELMBOLD'S.

Genuine Preparations.

COMPOUND Fluid extract Buchu, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Watery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflamation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, of abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of power.
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,

Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face Pallid Countenance These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the Patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases" "Insanity and consumption." Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess the records of the insane aslyums. And melancholly deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which Helmbold's Extract Buchu invariably does.

A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females—Females—Females—In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorhoea or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex. whether arising from indiscretion Habits of Dissipation, or in the decline or change of life. Take no more Balsam, Mercurey, or unpleasant medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases Helmbold's Extract Buchu and improved Rose was cures secret diseases in all their stages, at little expense. Little or no change in diet, no inconvenience, and no exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinaie, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and inflamation, so frequent in the class of diseases, and expelling all poisonous diseases and wornout matter. Thousands upon thousands who have been the victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the poison has, by the use of powerful astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage. Use Helmbold's Extract Buch for all affections and diseases of the urinary organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating and no matter of how long standing. Diseases of these organs requires the aid of diuretic Helmbold's extract Buchu is the great diuretic, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is recommended. Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

Price $1,00 per bottle, or six for $5 00.—Delivered to any Address, securely packed from observation. Describe symptoms in all communications, cures guaranteed! Advice gratis! address letters for information to H. B. Helmbold, Chemist, 104 South Tenth-st, bel. chestnut, Phil.

Helmbold's medical depot, Drug and chemical warehouse, 594 Broadway N. Y.

Beware of counterfeit and unprincipled dealers who endeavor to dispose of their own and other articles on the reputation attained by Helmbold's genuine preparations, Extract buchu, Sarsaparilla, Improved Rose wash, sold by all druggists everywhere, ask for Helmbold's, take no other.

NOT DRAFTED YET.

BY THAYER CHRISTIE.

Not drafted yet? Not drafted yet?
Just let me turn the wheel!
And I will send at least a score,
Of bachelors into the field.

"O dear!" cried one, "I cant enlist,
I've no one to leave behind,
To mourn for me if I chance to fall,
Or to guard my hoarded dimes."

There's plenty of ladies here at home,
Would remember you kindly I know,
And more than remember, for aught I know,
If you only had courage to go.

"So many have gone," another cries,
"The ladies are scarce of beaux,
And now that the weather is getting cold,
I would like one to darn my hose."

'Tis true, "by the camp fire's fitful glow,"
Thousands are gathered to-night,
Thinking perchance of the "long ago,"
When they sat in the dear home light.

And many a maiden cosily sits,
By the home fireside to-night,
Dreaming the while she hastily knits,
Clicking her needles so bright.

"Whose are the hose she's knitting?" you ask
Not yours, you crusty old bear,
And why does she think it a pleasant task,
They're for some soldier to wear.

I'm afraid, dear sirs, if you wait for us,
To mend your rusty hose,
Jack Frost will be kicking up a muss,
And biting your cowardly toes.

Select Miscellany.

THE SOLDIER'S BLOUSE.

BY M. T. CALDOR.

CHAPTER III.

The correspondence commenced in this romantic manner was not likely to be suspended by either party, and as Mrs. Weston insisted upon seeing every letter, and found nothing in any of them to censure, her approval ensured their establishment as a matter of course. Perhaps could the anxious mother have looked into Katie's day dreams, and read them also, she might have found the unknown soldier correspondent, taking almost too dear a place in her darling's thoughts; and yet, so implicitly did she share Katie's confidence in the integrity and worth of the unseen Phillip Lisle, even she might have been content to await the result of events without foreboding of evil.

And so Kate followed Phillip Lisle by means of his eloquent letters, along the eventful campaign, thrilled with horror as she read of the dangers imminently escaped; gay as he, to learn his steady promotion, from sergeant to orderly, from second to first lieutenant.

And he did not abuse the confidence reposed in him. Never a line hinted aught beyond the most respectful friendliness; never an appeal to win any unguarded expression from her, marred the gentlemanly refinement of the whole—they were letters the whole town might have read, and none found cause for criticism. Why Kate was so chary of them, and allowed none but her mother and Cousin Mary to read them, is not for me to say.

'Oh, Kate, you must be sure and be early at your table at the fair,' called out Belle Winsor, as she tripped lightly past the open window where Kate was leaning to watch a brilliant sunset. 'And we have quite an unexpected attraction too—an invalid captain, fresh from the battle grounds, has arrived at the hotel, and made known his intention of visiting our soldier fair. Young, handsome, and a hero—what a conquest for somebody! So be sure and look your prettiest.'

Kate answered carelessly. All her interest just now was verged in lieutenants. What was a captain more than a soldier, how much less than one lieutenant. So she forgot the captain entirely, until he was recalled to her mind by seeing her Uncle Hugh approaching her fancy table, with a pallid, but very handsome officer, in a captain's uniform, on his arm.

'So that is the stranger; he is very fine looking,' was her inward comment, while she responded gracefully to the introduction, and hunted up the cigar case he desired to purchase.

She handed him the residue due him, as he laid the bank note beside her, but with a smile he refused it.

'I, who can so many times testify to the worth and efficiency of the Sanitary commission, should be ashamed to take it,' answered he.

And to her surprise he still leaned against her table, and began a conversation relating to the fair and its object. It was not long before they had strayed off to the war and its battle grounds. She listened with earnest attention until he referred in some way Malvern Hill,

'Ah, you were there?' asked she breathlessly.

'In all the battles before Richmond. I belong to the Army of the Potomac. Had you friends there?'

She smiled, and colored a little, but answered readily,

'I have had a vivid description from one who was there, and have a strong interest therein. Did you tell me your regiment?'

He named it. She started, and asked again.

'And the company?'

The rose on her cheek burnt deeper and deeper.

'His superior officer,' thought she. But he evidently did not perceive her embarrassment, nor mistrust the question that rose again and again to her lips and died away unspoken.

And so he talked on, and she could not help listening with respectful interest, often involuntary admiration. When at last he turned away, she beckoned her uncle to her side.

'What did you call his name—Captain—what?'

'Capt. Guile, I understood the landlord. He's a fine specimen of a soldier, isn't he?'

I should judge so. I believe the whole regiment bears a fine reputation answered she.

The captain found his way to her side once more, toward the close of the evening, when her empty table gave her liberty to attend solely to his conversation, and she found he had made the acquaintance of her mother in the interval, and accepted an invitation from her to dine with them on the following day.

'I found your mother as patriotic as yourself,' said he smilingly. 'She said something about having followed your regiment's movements quite closely, and your interest therein.'

Katie colored again, 'Yes,' answered she; 'although I have never seen him, I have know n as much as one can learn from constant correspondence of one of your under officers

He waited for more information, but as it was not given, politely turned the topic.

Capt. Guile lingered two weeks in G——, and scarcely a day passed that he was not in some way present wherever Kate Weston was to be found. He was so extremely gentlemanly and agreeable, if she had wished. Kate would have found it difficult to avoid him. Nevertheless, neither her mother, nor Kate herself, were so very much startled when the latter received one morning a declaration of love, and an offer of marriage from him.

'What shall I say?' exclaimed Katie, in utter confusion.

'What you think, my dear,' answered her mother smilingly.

'But it is so short an acquanitance,' stammered Kate.

'Is he agreable to you, my child? does he seem worthy of your affections—'

'Oh, yes, indeed, but then—'

'But what, my child, I scarcely understand you, for you seem pleased and pained alike.'

'And so I am. I like him very much, but I thought—'

'He says he will prove satisfactorily to us his character and position—you need not fear imposture, what did you think?'

Kate hid her face on her mother's shoulder.

'I like Captain Guile very much, mother, but I can't feel sure, for I used to think before he came, that—

'Well, Kate.'

'That I loved Lieutenant Lisle—that is all, mother.'

'Hark! there is the door bell; there is no time to discuss the matter. It is Capt. Guile himself, I am sure, come for your answer. Act as your own pure heart dictates, dear Katie, and go, for it is cruel to keep him waiting.'

Kate went slowly and timidly to the parlor door. Capt. Guile had heard her step, and came forward to meet her.

'It is too important a subject not to be the first thing mentioned, dear Kate,' said he. 'I have come for my answer.'

Kate's soft brown eyelashes clung perversely to her glowing cheek, and she faltered,

'It is so sudden—I am so confused and surprised.'

'That is true; but in times like these, we can waive the old rules of etiquette. A soldier's furlough will not admit of idle dallyings. May I hope, may I venture to believe my proposal is not disagreeable to you?'

Poor Katie was twisting a ring on her finger, and desperately struggling for calmness, but only grew more hopelessly nervous, as she exclaimed in almost ludicrous distress.

'I don't know, oh, I wish I did.'

He might well look surprised, and a little pained.

'You d n,t know whether you can love me or not, is that what you mean, Kate?'

The little touch of sadness in his voice had a salutary effect. She raised her eyes and looked directly into his face.

'Something like that, I mean certainly. I like you very much indeed only I am afraid—'

'I wrote that when I had received your sanction, I would prove to your mother my standing, and give her ample facility for enquiring into my circumstances and character: of what can you be afraid, dear Kate?'

'Of your lieutenant; what is he like, Captain Guile? I have never seen him, but I am afraid I am more in love with him than with you.'

She spoke the words hurriedly, a blending of smiles and tears on her face, but she dared not look at him, and sat waiting to hear what he would answer.

'Then you know my lieutenant; what is the name you call him by?,

'Phillip Lisle, of course,' answered Kate.

'There is no such lieutenant in our regiment, Miss Weston. Are you sure you have not been imposed upon?'

Kate drew a long breath. 'It cannot be. I could almost stake my life on his integrity, though I have only known him by his letters.'

The captain caught her hand, and showered his passionate kisses upon it.

'God bless you, Kate, for a true, loyal-hearted woman.'

It was Kate's turn to look astonished. She scarcely anticipated his praise for her faithfulness to his lieutenant.

'It is cruel to cheat you longer, my noble Kate; there is no Lieut. Lisle, but Capt. Phillip Lisle, your humble servant, faithful correspondent, and devoted lover, stand before you.'

Kate's little shriek of delight, and gesture of thanksgiving, was pleasant and pretty for him to witness.

'And now,' asked he archly, can you give me my answer, can you tell me if you love me well enough, being both lieutenant and captain, to stand up before that worthy pastor of yours and answer in the affirmative that all important question?'

Kate's answer was inaudible, but her mother guessed it readily enough, as she came gliding into the room, and laid a hand on the head of each, saying, with a stifled sob,

'God bless my children.'

'But, mamma,' began Kate eagerly, 'you do not know—' and then she stopped abruptly.

A look of significance upon her mother's face explained it all.

'Oh, mother, you were in the plot, you knew who he was all the time."

"Do you think I would have sent you from me in such a cruel quandary if I had not?' returned the mother tenderly.

And a quiet wedding followed speedily, and Cousin Mary was there with her earnest congratulations and gentle sympathy.

"Oh, Mary, dear Mary it is half due to you," whispered the lovely bride; and then with a wistful quivering of the lip she added—"How little you thought I should have such a precious gift to offer my country. I can do better now than sewing on the soldier's garment. I can give my husbands strong arm to wield the sword that shall lead his company on to battle. Oh, Mary, dear Mary, pray for me that I have strength to yield him trustfully and bravely!'

But Kate was equal to the trying ordeal. Thrusting down the sharp pang and rising sob, she, like many another loving wife, bade her beloved one God speed upon his way, and calmed her anguish with the consoling cry.

"It is for my country. I too am working for the righteous cause. I will bear loneliness, and dreariness, and bitter anxiety for my country's sake and God can save and preserve.'

Her anxieties for her husband's safety are ended now. From Gettysburg the thrilling words flashed to her along the wires,

"Capt. Philip Lisle wounded severely and dangerously."

Smothering her wild fears, Kate hastened to the distant hospital, and nursed him back to life. She has him at home now. It will be months and months before he can stir without a crutch, and it may be he never walk again with the old free step and easy gait, but a happier couple you cannot find, than Kate and the recipient of her first Soldier Blouse.

MARRIAGE REASONS.—In a case which lately came to our knowledge, says an English paper, a highly respectable woman, who was to be married the following day to a carpenter with whom she had kept company for some time, excused her marriage in this way: "Why, ma'am, really, then, I don't see how I could help it; he has been courting like after me sich a time. Taint that I like hisself now, but when you sit opposite a man at "wittles" three times a day, I kinder think ye must come to love him at last." And another, a trusty and valued servant, coming up to say good bye to her mistress on her wedding morning, replied, in answer to wishes for her happiness: "Well, ma'am, there's only one thing much agin it that I know on; ye see, I don't so vastly like the man hisself."

A letter from Morris Island since the late storm says:

'For the last twenty-four hours these shores have been ghastly with the numberless rebel dead, some of them in boxes, but mostly uncoffined. They were washed out from the beach near Putnam and Strong (formerly Gregg and Wagner.) Skulls, arms, and entire skeletons popped around on the beach, a literal 'dance of death,'

How the Relationship Runs.

THE MARRIAGE.

Married sometime about the year 2856, by His Satanic Majesty, King Beelzebub, Esq., Mr. Copperhead Democracy and Miss Rattlesnake slavery, both of the United States.

Slices of the Wedding Cake were sent to most of the Locofoco Editors in consequence of which they have never ceased to puff the (above) Union.

THE FIRST BORN.

Born in the summer of 1856. Mr. Lecompton Border Ruffian, son of Mr. Copperhead Democracy.

This unsightly child born six months after the above marriage, after a few months of sickly existence died from a peculiar disease called Free State.

THE SECOND BORN.

Born at Charleston, S. C. in the year of Grace 1860 Mr. Secesion Pro-Slavery Rebellion, true son of Mr. C., and Mrs. R. S. Democracy Dr. Jim Buchanan acting accouchu.

This child, which 'looks so much like its daddy,' is now going on three years old. Its infancy was marked by so much precosity that it is universally believed that it is 'too smart to live.' Its backbone was lately broken by the fall of Vicksburg; its face horribly burned in the fire at Gettysburg, and one of its feet was amputated in Ohio. It has been a source of trouble all its days. Its death however, is now looked forsoon. The 'old man,' they say is 'raving mad, through fear that his dear son will die. The old lady is also in a 'great pucker," and some of her 'friends' have got the 'sympathic fits.'

THE THIRD BORN.

Born in New York City, in July, 1863, Mr. Patrick Riot, third son of Mr. C. and Mrs. R. S. Democracy.

This monster baby came very near being still born, but by the aid of Dr. Seymour and his 'Friends' it lived three days.

The fatality which has attended these children, shows that no child of these parents can ever live. And yet they survive long enough to cause great trouble; and so long as the old folks live, there is danger of 'an increase in the family.' It is proposed therefore to behead the old woman to prevent her from generating any further trouble and to 'hang' the old man to keep him from marrying elsewhere. The people will rejoice and cry Amen! at the extinction of the whole race.

TO ROAST A TURKEY.—Prepare a stuffing of pork sausage-meat, one beaten egg, and a few crumbs of bread; or, if sausages are to be served with the turkey, as for a filet of veal; in either, a little shred shallot is an improvement. Stuff the bird under the breast; dredge it with flour, and put it down to a clear bri k fire; at a moderate distance the first half hour, but afterwards nearer. Baste with butter; and when the turkey is plumped up and the steam draws toward the fire, it will be nearly done; then dredge it lightly with flour, and baste in with a little more butter, first melted in the basting ladle. Serve with gravy in the dish and breadsauce in a tureen. It may be granished with fried force-meat, if veal stuffing be used.—Sometimes the gizzard and liver are dipped into the yolk of an egg, sprinkled with salt and Cayenne, and then put to the fire. A very large turkey will require three hours' roasting; one of eight or ten pounds, two hours; and small one, an hour and a half.

A work has been issued showing "how young ladies should receive attentions." "The author," Mrs. Harris, says "might as well write a printed book telling young folks how they should kiss, eat honey, or suck new cider out of a bung hole. Some things come by natur," she says, "and courting is one of them. Teach a gal to court? might just as well," she says, "set about telling water how to run down hill." It is evident that from this that Mrs. Harris looks upon the new book as a humbug.

MAKE A BEGINNING.—Remember in all things if you do not begin you will never come to an end. The first weed pulled up in the ground, the first shilling put in the savings bank and the first mile traveled on a journey are all important things; they make a begining and thereby a hope a promise a pledge, an assurance that you are in earnest with what you have undertaken. How many a poor idle, erring, hesitating outcast is now creeping and crawling his way through the world, who might have held up his head and prospered if, instead of putting off his resolution of industry and amendment, he had only made a beginning.

ANIMALS.—Shelter and food, cleanliness and ventilation. The better the shelter for horses, neat stock and swine, the less food will they consume; if ventillation be provided, and they be kept clean, they will be healthier and more profitable. Pigs as well as horses show the good of clean bedding and dry pens in winter.

A Good Joke on a Reporter.

Immediately after Grant's late victory, three correspondents, who had been at the scene of conflict, started for their respective destinations each seeking to come out in advance with public reports. One of the gentlemen is connected with the press of this city, the others are attached to New York papers The three arrived together at Nashville, when two of them leagued to play a joke on their associate. All of them being wearied, they thought it not in bad taste to regale their appetites with some streghthening beverage. The ubiquitous John Doe, of the N. Y.——, boasted that he could drink more and not get drunk than any other knight of the quill in the Army of the cumberland. The Chicago man and the other New Yorker closed a bet, and soon the three of them engaged in their labors. The boasters tossed them down, without regard to what his competitors did and soon got himself into a condition in which the affairs of this world gave him very little trouble. Business was the great point with his rivals, and by closer attention to that than to the bowl, succeeded in keeping sober, and when the time came to depart had arrived, off they started, leaving the boozy gentleman in charge of the chambermaid. No report has appeared as yet and probably never will.

A SAD AND SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—On the morning after the furious snow storm of Wednesday night last, the passenger train of the Racine and Mississippi Railroad, going west, was prece ed by a locomotive, which, with a snow plow attached, cleared the track of the huge banks apparently of greater density than any it had hitherto encountered, and which, in order to overcome, it was necessary to charge upon with the engine at its greatest speed.

To acquire the necessary velocity the locomotive backed a mile or so from that which impeded its further progress, and putting on full steam, advanced, at the rate of forty miles an hour full upon it. As the locomotive neared the scene of the snow bank, the engineer, Mr. Samuel D Pulford, took a position close to an open window in that part of the engine known as the 'cab,' where he could see the effect of the collision; and, as the plunge into the snow was made, he, in some inexplicable manner, was drawn through the window and buried to the depth of seven or eight feet in the accumulated drift.

His companion, the fireman of the locomotive, did not miss him from his post for a brief moment, and when he did the alarm was given, and search for him was commenced with a will. As we have remarked above, his body was buried to the depth of seven or eight feet, and when found there was still a faint beat of the pulse, indicating that a spark of life yet remained. Untiring effort was made to fan this spark into the full blaze of animation and restore reason, but all in vain. His body was brought back to Racine, the abode of his family, and his funeral took place on Sunday last from the Methodist Church.—Racine (Wis) Journal.

WEIGHT OF SHEEP.—A rule for mutton sheep, is to weigh the live sheep and divide the amount by seven. Thus a sheep weighing 140 lbs., divided by seven, would give twenty lbs., dead weight, equal to the weight of a quarter, or eighty pounds for the mutton. The pelt and rough tallow would make about twenty pounds more, thus making what is called in the Boston market, four quarters to the animal. Of course, sheep poorly or extra fattened will go above or below average, but on the whole the rule is not from weight.

'Why this is one,' said the scholar; 'and this,' he continued, 'is two; two and one, you know, make three.'

'Since you have made it out so well,, answered the old gentleman, 'your mother shall have the first fowl, I will have the second, and the third you may keep yourself for your great learning.

A fashonable dressed lady entered a car on the Hudson River railroad a few evenings since, and, after standing for some minutes, a young gentleman arose and gave her his seat. She made no acknowledgement of this act of courtesy. The cars stopped at an upper station on the river, and the lady was about to leave the cars, when a quaint old Dutch gentleman called to her, "Madam, you have forgotten something." "What, sir?" said the lady. "Why, you forgot to thank the young man for your seat."

Row between John Morrissey and Andy Sheehan.

The Hone House, on Broadway, was the scene of a lively fight, on Friday night, between John Morrissey and Andy Sheehan, and had it not been for the interference of the police we would probably have been called upon to chronicle another Stanwix Hall affair, Morrissey, it appears came into the saloon with a party of friends and commenced drinking wine. Soon afterwards Andy Sheehan entered and commenced drinking also when a dispute arose between him and Morrissey relative to the late prize fight at Tunbridge, England. There being an old grudge between these two worthies, they had no difficulty in coming to blows, and before any one could interfere, at it they went pounding each other after the most approved style of the prize ring. Luckily or unluckily as the case may be Capt. Warlow, of the first precinct police, entered the bar-room at this juncture, and separated the belligerents. The affair created considerable excitement, and many people wondered why the pugilists were not taken to the station-house as other men are when they disturb the peace. In sporting circles the fracas was the chief topic of conversation yesterday and more than one person prophesied that a match would grow out of the encounter.—New York Herald.

WINTER.—At length the long threatened severe winter has come in earnest, and the muskrats must enjoy themselves hugely in their "double walled huts" which we were told they prepared in September for an early, severe and protracted winter. The present is severe weather indeed, but it is neither early nor will it be protracted we think.

The late snow storm, however, which paved the way for six week's sleighing and two or three week's old fashioned winter weather, was very much like the storms of 1855 and 1856 in this State. Snow fell continuously for several days, and when it cleared away we were greeted by the sun dogs of brilliant hue that invariably attend old Phebus during the clear, stinging, frosty days of the ancient Minnesota winter.

We do not know what depth of snow has fallen, but farmers tell us its depth in the woods is only about 10 or 12 inches. It is badly drifted hereaways, and the roads are nearly blocked in every direction.—Rochester Post.

Heavy Snow Storm

The heaviest snow storm known for several years commenced last night. Dispatches represent it as very severe as far west and beyond the Mississippi, south to Springfield, and along and north to Green Bay. The snow is drifting terribly. Several of the Railroads are completely blocked up. The storm in Iowa is reported as even more violent than east of the river.

Two men were arrested at La Crosse a few days since, on suspicion of having been engaged in the robbery of the stage near Lake City, last week. Their names, as given by themselves, are Williams and Skinner respectively—doubtless assumed. Deputy U. S. Marshal Cleveland took these parties in charge at La Crosse, and with them on his way up the river. It is not positively known that these men were engaged in the robery, but their actions had been such, for a few days previous to their arrest, as to fasten suspicion strongly upon them. One of them attempted to escape from the Sheriff of La Crosse county, but upon being threatened with the contents of a revolver he abanboned the effort.—Winona Republican 31st.

Mankato, Friday, Jan. 15th, 1864.

District Court.

The Grand Jury at this January term found two indictments against that notorious old reprobate, Joseph Haas; one for keeping a house of ill-fame, the other for an assault with an intent to commit murder. Haas plead not guilty, and on Friday last the case came up for trial. His counsel put in a demurrer to the first indictment on several grounds, the principal one being that the indictment was not direct and certain as regards the particular circumstaces of the offesn charged, and necessary to constitute a complete offense, and that it could not be understood from the indictment that the offense charged was committed at a time prior to the indictment, the District Attorney, having, by a clerical error, dated the indictment January, 1863, instead of January, 1864, the right date After a short argument on the merits of the demurrer, between the counsel for the prisoner and District Attorney Pitcher, the latter admitted that the error of date was fatal to the indictment, and Judge Branson decided the demurrer well founded, and quashed the indictment.

A demurrer was also put in to the second indictment, but it being overruled, Haas was put upon trial for an assault with an attempt to murder. The proof was very lame, and he was acquitted by the Jury who brought in their verdict within five minutes after leaving the box.

There being no furthur business for the Jury Judge Branson dismissed them. Since then the attention of the Court has been taken up, most of the time, with the Cannon Divorce case. A great many witnesses have been examined on both sides, and the case is ablp conducted by the respective counsel for the parties. A jury trial was waived by mutual consent.

Internal Revenue Convention.

A short time ago a large number of United States Assesors, met at Cleveland Ohio, for the purpose of devising plans to increase the revenue, and avoid any unjust action of the law. Many plans were suggested and discussed, and some important recommendations adopted of which we note the following: That the returns of companies or corporations shall be made to the assesors of their respective districts rather than to the commissioners of internal revenue at Washington; that gas, bridge, canal, turnpike, express, telegraph, steamboat, and manufacturing companies or corporations be added to those which shall be subjected to three per cent, tax on their dividends; that in assessing income, gifts shall be reckoned as part of it, and taxed accordingly, and rent actually paid from income to the amount of one hundred and fifty dollars shall be exempted; that corporate lands, insurance companies, and mercantile agencies be subjected to a license tax of ten dollars; that dealers in liquors should pay increased license. Various new license were also added. With much unanimity the convention reccommended greatly increased taxes on tobacco and distilled spirits, and less additions to the tax on a great variety of other articles. It was also reccommended that all goods, wares, or merchandise, manufactured by any individual firm or corporation for their own use or consumption, or for the manufacture of other articles, where the amount manufactured shall exceed $600 per annum, shall be taxable in like manner as if they were sold. Various changes in detail were reccommended in relation to the manufacture of cotton, iron, leather, etc., which will probably be made the subject of Congressional action at an early day.

Presidential Prospects.

We invite a careful perusal of the following article, which we take from a late number of Harpers Weekly. We agree with the writer in the statement that no man has so sure a hold upon the national heart as President Lincoln, and no one doubts but that he will be elected to serve another term of four years. He is better acquainted with the nature of this great struggle, and can bring it to a close quicker and more satisfactorily than any new man. We have marked his administration during years of war and tumult when a serpent's fangs were poisoning the life blood of the nation, and he has borne himself well, and thus far brought us through, and now when the time comes we want to see him re-elected, and note his rule in years of peace and quiet.

The gentlemen whose accession to political power depends upon the salvation of slavery are already casting about for available Presidential candidates. A year ago the nomination of Mr. Horatio Seymour was a foregone conclusion. But his obsequeonsness to amurderous mob alarmed the most substantial of his supporters. They hate Abolitionism; but a civil magistrate who calls the most reckless and brutal criminals his friends appalls them. Mr. Seymour, so long as he made dull speeches merely, was to have been nominated as "a Conservative statesman" But Conservative statesmanship in practical operation during the days July was alittle too repugnant to the popular common-sense. The Conservative statesman committed political suicide upon the steps of the City Hall. His alternate, if circumstances should require a military candidate, was General M'Clellan.

Poor General M'Clellan! Charles Lamb tells an excellent story of the man at table who preserved a dignified silence and solemnity, which greatly impressed the company, until suet dumplings were brought in. Upon which the dignified silence was broken by the earnest exclamation, "Them's the jockeys for me!" So General M'Clellan patiently kept silence while the mob cheered for him and Jeff Davis, and while Mr. Cox, the special advocate of Vallandigham, extolled him as the hope of the future. He held his tongue while every friend of the rebels praised him and every loyal man looked on in painful doubt. But when the Pennsylvania election came, and the rebel papers prayed for the success of Woodward and Lee moved to support his chances, and the lackeys of slavery and rebel partisans strained every nerve for Woodward, and every loyal Union man in the land knew that his election would be equivalent to a victory over the Army of the Potomac, then the late leader of that army chose to break his long silence by declaring that Woodward was the candidate for him. Poor General M'Clellan! His letter was as fatal to his political hope as Governor Seymour's speech. And he should hold his managers to strict account, for he not only threw himself but the enemies of the Government with whom he allied himself off the track. He left them without a tolerable candidate.

The moment General M'Clellan subordinated his military conduct to his political aspirations he was doomed. A more tragical campaign than his upon the Peninsula history does not record. Not three volumes of a thousand pages each can explain away the prolonged horrors of the Chickahominy swamps. "Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little land." It was the penalty of not comprehending the war. He thought he could fight without hunting the enemy much; for it would not do to exasperate one's natural political allies. He would try fighting with one hand and waving the olive branch with the other. He was a well-meaning Captain of Engineers of no remarkable military capacity, utterly spoiled by the touch of political intriguers who hoped to make him their tool.

Does any body suppose the same game can be played with General Grant? General Grant is a soldier who does not believe in olive branches but in unconditional surrender. He is a citizen who comprehends the scope of the war, and knows and frankly says that liberty, Union, and peace are henceforward inseperable. His politics are the overthrow of the rebel army in the field and the destruction of the cause that sends it there. He supports the Government and its policy. Would he have written a letter to help the election of Judge Woodward? Would a rebel mob in New York even couple his name with that of Jeff Davis? Would the friends of Vallandigham and of peace by submission to the rebels, ever count upon him or Horatio Seymour for their candidate? The revolutionary Tories in Connecticut would as soon have nominated Israel Putnam for Governor as the Copperheads of to-day would wish General Grant for President. And from whom then is his support to come?

Certainly not from the friends of the Government; for hearty and unconditional as is their admiration for General Grant's military services, they have no less regard for the civil service of Mr. Lincoln. No man at this moment has so sure a hold of the national heart as the President. It would as soon think of removing General Grant from command of his great army, because he is conquering the rebel host, as it would of setting aside Mr. Lincoln because his administration is restoring the Union. If the Presidential election took place next week, Mr. Lincoln would undoubtedly be returned by a greater majority than any President since Washington. And unless he is deserted by his great sagacity, or some huge military disaster befalls the country, or some serious blunder is committed by the Union men in Congress, his election is as sure as the triumph of the nation over the rebellion.

Reconstruction.

North Carolina is speaking with no uncertain voice in reference to the great issue of the times The Newbern Times in an article on the President's recent proclamation, says:

The reconstruction of the Union, and the return of the seceding States to their former position, are now the immediate and great practical question of the hour. Whatever speculative theories there may be on these subjects, we have no hesitancy in declaring that no State which has been guilty of the almost unpardonable crime of rebellion and secession, should be permitted to take her place safely and securely among the truly loyal States whose escutcheons are unstained with treason, without a definite and unequivocal acknowledgement of the truths and potency of the proclamation.

Let them understand that it is a great boon to get back again and be embraced by the filial bonds of our beloved Union, with the word slavery entirely stricken from their banners. When this great matter is permanently settled, either by proper action on the part of Congres, or the requisite changes in the fundamental law of these States, they will undoubtedly have abundant reason to rejoice that they have at last been delivered from the blighting and deadly grasp of one of the greatest social Moral and politicol evils which has ever scourged the human race since the flood.

Proceedings of the County Board.

Ordered that the salary of the County Attorney, be three hundred dollars, for the ensuing year, and be paid quarterly.

The Committee on office rent reported favorable to the renting of an office of David Lamb, on Front Street for the sum of $100 per year. for the use of Probate Judge, Clerk of Court, Treasurer, and Sheriff, fifty dollars to be paid in advance, and the balance in monthly installments at the end of each of the last six months.

It was ordered that the Auditor, Treasurer, and Andrew Hanna be constituted a Committee, authorized to sell certain county orders remaining in the Treasury, collected for State Taxes of 1858, and amounting to $758,42 for State Warrants. That portion of said orders dawing interest to be canceled and destroyed, and new orders drawn in their place in favor of the person or persons to whom they may be sold, said orders to be exchanged for State Warrants at rates not less than dollar for dollar, and said State Warrants to be deposited in the Treasury and paid to the State Treasurer at the next settlement with the State.

The tax sale of June 1864 was ordered to be held at the County Auditors office. Messrs. Hanna and Goodrich were appointed to procure a court room, fuel and lights for the District Court at the June and January terms of the ensuing year

The following bills were then allowed:

State Legislature

But little has been done yet in either House. The organization is but just completed, and the message of Gov Swift delivered. The inauguration of Gov Miller took place on Wednesday, and his Inaugural Address delivered the same day. Hereafter we shall give a condensed report of Legislative proceedings.

Appeal to the Citizens of the Loyal States in Behalf of Disabled Union Soldiers.

A perfect fac simile of the original manuscript, of the Emancipation Proclamation, to be sold for the benefit of the Permanent Soldiers Home, for the sum of two Dollars.

The establishment of a permanent home for sick and disabled soldiers, is prompted by the dictates of humanity, and by gratitude to our patriotic sons and brothers. Thousands who have gone forth to battle for the preservation of our glorious institutions, the unity of the States and to extend the area of freedom, will return to us with mangled limbs, and shattered frames, incapacitated for labor during the remaining period of their existence here. To such can we refuse a Christian welcome and a comfortable home? But we are persuaded that a generous public needs no argument to induce them to the performance of a duty so manifest, and we therefore proceed to state briefly the purpose of those who design to establish a permanent home for the relief of the disabled soldiers of the Union.

It is generally known that the original draft of the President's Emancipation Proclamation, through the generosity of our fellow-citizen, Thos. B. Bryan, Esq., is the property of the disabled Soldiers of the Union Army, to be held in trust for their benifit by the Soldiers' Home of Chicago. This document, destined to fill the page of history when genarations yet unborn have passed away, and to be refered to by the historian as the great instrument by which that foul blot on our national escutcheon, human slavery, was oblitery, is regarded by us as of immense present and prospective value. In order that the disabled soldiers may more fully realize that value, we have resolved to adopt the plan suggested by the donor of the original document, and have lithographed a perfect fac simile of the Manuscript, and also of the President's Autograph Letter, the whole forming a large and beautiful engraving ornamented with a portrait of Abraham Lincoln. Thus, for the petty sum of Two Dollars ($2.) every loyal citizen can procure this document of enduring value, and at the same time aid in the erection and maintenance of a permanent Home for Disabled Soldiers. The fund thus produced will, we trust, prove sufficient to carry out the design to the extent required, and benefit the noble and patriotic recipients of your bounty. The original document, thus to become the corner stone or foundation of the Soldier's Home, will be sacredly preserved in the same, and may thus prove a source of permanent revenue to the soldiers. Is any appeal necessary to your humanity or your Christian sympathy? We trust not We believe that all who love their country and its glorions institutions will gladly contribute the trifling sum that is necessary to shelter, support and smooth the passage to the grave, of the scarred and disabled veterans who have been our defenders and the restorers of our great and beloved Union.

Every city, town, village and hamlet throughout the land, should immediately appoint committes to solicit the subscription desired, and to this end we forward you this brief circular, hoping that you will take measures without delay, to co-operate with us in carrying out this design, and will correspond with the President of our Association. Thos. B. Bryan, Chicago, Ill., on the subject, advising him of the committees appointed and the result of their labor

Mrs. O. E. HOSMER,
Chairman of the Publishing Committee.
CHICAGO, ILL., Dec. 19th, 1863.

THE Linn county Patriot declares it self in favor of the re-election of Abraham Lincoln as President of the United States. It says: "We have then three reasons why Abraham Lincoln should be re-elected President First, he has shown himself capable and honest—true to the trust reposed in him and the great interests committed to his care. Second, he has taken a full survey of the whole ground, has had an experience that no other man has had, and is therefore better qualified for the duties of the office than any new man could be. Third, and mainly. Since the rebellion began (openly) on the question, 'shall Abraham Lincoln be President of the United States—all the United States?' We deem it but an act of simple justice to him, to ourselves as freemen and voters, to the cause of liberty at home and of free institutions throughout the world, thus to put the seal of condemnation upon the wicked crew who would bring anarchy and confusion upon us, and to show to the world for all time to come that in free government, enlightened reason must control the wicked passions of men.'

Gen. Thomas reports that he has furnished Gen. Banks 17,000 well armed negroes the able-bodied of whom he has hired out to planters in the vicinity of his operations, that he has leased the abandoned cotton and sugar plantation to farmers, at the rate of forty dollars per bale of cotton, one cent per pound for sugar and four cents per pushel for corn and potatoes: which proceeds go into the United States treasury. The farmers pay the revenue tax in addition. Great success has attended the arrangement, which has proves satisfactory to all parties. Gen. Thomas returns to this field of labor quickly, thence he goes to New Orleans and Texas, arming blacks everywhere. He has ten regiments of them ready to send to Grant

DEATH OF HON. E HYDE, OF CARVER COUNTY.—We are deeply pained to learn of the death of Mr. Hyde, which occured at his residence in Waconia, Carver County, on the 5th inst. Mr. Hyde has been sick for some time past with fever, which caused his death.

Few men had more warm personal friends or fewer enemies than Mr. Hyde. He was a man in every sense of the word, and in his death Carver County has lost one of her best and most valuable citizens.

THE NEW YORK MERCURY'S MANIFESTO.—This charming paper, which for twenty-five years has been increasing popularity, and now claims to be out of sight of all competition, has put forth a fascinating programe for 1864, which we publish in our advertising columns to-day. It is a prosperous paper, and ows its prosperity to the energy, tact, and skill of its publisers. They make large promises for the coming year, but they have the reputation—and they deserve it, of preforming what they promise.

The news for the past week has been unimportant. Our armies are all quiet, and no prospect of a fight.

Charleston is frequently on fire from Gilmore's shells, and Admiral Dahlgreen says he can take the place whenever he wills it.

Gen. Butler has not yet offered an exchange of prisoners.

A prize fight came off in New York on the 11th inst. The police interfered and arrested the parties.

THE LITTLE PILGRIM.—This little monthly for boys and girls, edited by the charming writer Grace Greenwood, continues to be—as it has been for the past ten years—recognized as the best Child's Paper in America. The Little Pilgrim, besides being a source of amusement and recreation to children, contributes, in an eminent degree, to the instruction and cultivation of their minds, morals and feelings. It is afforded at the low price of fifty cents a year for single copies, and at forty cents in clubs of five or more copies. Specimen numbers sent free by writing to the publishers L. K. Lippincott, 319, Walnut st., Philadelphia, Pa.

New York newsboys who don't work Sundays are to have a free Sunday dinner hereafter.

The rebel pickets on the Rapidan, the other day, characterized Jeff. Davis' annual message as a "funeral oration."

The "Union Banner" is the title of a new literary paper just published in Chicago. Throughout its typographical appearance is neat and tasteful. It is to be to the West what the Saturday Evening Post and Home Journal are to the East.

RE-ENLISTED.—A dispatch from Major Brackett, of the Fifth Iowa Cavalry, to Governor Swift, states that the three Cavalry Companies from this State, commanded by Captains Von Minden, Shelly, and West, have re-enlisted as veterans, and will soon be home on furlough.

A Neglected Cough, Cold, or sore Throat which might be checked by a simple remedy, like "Brown's Bronchial Troches," if allowed to progress may terminate seriously.

For Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, and Consumptive Coughs, "the Troches" are used with advantage, giving oftentimes immediate relief.

A Donation Visit at Blue Earth City.

MR. EDITOR:—I presume that you might well suppose from the activity in recruiting in Faribault County, and the bounties offered, that people were doing but little else; and that they had no means to spare for any other purpose. But you will permit us to correct this idea, by informing you and your readers that we had a donation visit on Christmas which resulted in a contribution for our benefit of over sixty dollars; one half of which was in cash, and the remainder in the best products of the land, as good as refined greenbacks. Our house was, from one o'clock to eleven o'clock P. M., like some of the city saloons, (except the liquors) viz; "meals at all hours." We had an excellent dinner, and as good a supper as cities can often scare up. A good time, and a good variety of pies and cakes, besides a great many other good eatables, and a bowl full of sugar left for the little folks and the big folks after the friends had gone home. And now we have quite a good meeting of all denominations. We feel better. The Lord bless us all.

J. E. & E. M. CONRAD.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.—It has been discovered by thousands of housewives in all sections of the country that D. B. De Land & Co.'s Chemilcal Saleratus is the only saleratus that will produce a uniform result, and give perfect satisfaction every time. If once you try it, you will always buy it.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY
OF THE
STAR PAPER OF AMERICA
JANUARY 2, 1864.

The New York Mercury
FOR THE COMING YEAR.

After more than a quarter of a century of uninterupted success. The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literary Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry: but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by elipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvelous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE
will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old World, will be placed the chief d'ouvres of the most eminent story writers of the New.

Miss A. E Braddon, Authoress of 'Aurora Floyd,' 'Lady Andell's Secret,' 'John Marchmont's Legacy,' etc, etc,' who has suddenly risen, like a star of the first magnitude in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply the New York mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the Star Weekly of America, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are engaged for 1864:

Dr. J. H. Robinson, Margret Blount Ned Buntline, Arthur M Grainger, Grace Gardner, Felix O C Darley, Miss M. E Bardden, Cousin May Carleton W O. Eaton George Martial, Julia S. Jugraham, Edward Willett, Mary Chief, George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various noms de plume, contribute to its columns, while its pictorial illustrations from the inimitable pencil of Felix O C Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has giving the coup de grace to so many pretentious publication, and half destroyed those that still survive has added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart stirring short stories, its military historiettes, its matchless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its genial wit and humor, it's delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigorous editorials, the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to all classes of society. Containing, as it does Forty Column of closely-printed matter, it may fairly be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carlton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for the New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. Dealers being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be the most effective story ever produced by the Representative Weekly of the great Western World.

The New York mercury is published and regularly every Saturday morning, for $2 a year; three copies for $5; six copies for $9 eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club. Six month's subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post Office, County and State. We take the notes of all solvent banks at par. Payment must invariably be made in advance.

Specimen Copies sent to all applicants. Address all letters and remittances, post paid, to CAUDWELL & WHITNEY, Proprietors of the New York Mercury Nos. 48 Ann street, and 113 Fulton street New York City.

PAIR OF GLOVES LOST.—A gentleman has lost a pair of beaver gauntlet gloves. The finder will be rewarded if he will return them to this office.

WE understand that a Post Office will soon be established in Danville township. It will be named "Homestead."

James McBroom, of Danville, is our appointed agent for that section. Any one wishing to subscribe can hand the money to him.

OUR Agents in several of the towns will accept our thanks for the subscribers they have sent us during the past week. It reminds us of last fall, when names came in by scores.

The Young Men's Lyceum meets at City Hall this evening. A full attendance is desired.

ON FURLOUGH.—About thirty of the boys of Co. E. Second Cavalry are home on furlough.

DAGUERRIAN ROOMS.—Mr. I. G. Harmon has opened a Photographic and ambrotype room over Heilborn's Furniture shop, corner of second and Hickory streets. Give him a call.

Hon. D. C. Evans, of La Crosse, returned to his home in South Bend a few days ago. He will remain for some time we understand.

Col C C Andrews of the Third Regiment, has been nominated for Brigadeir General, and his name sent to the Senate for confirmation.

Our Tribune club subscribers will please not delay any longer, but send in their names, so that we can mail them in a day or so.

Major Nelson, Mustering and Disbursing officer for Minnesota, has been ordered to join his regiment in the field, and will be relieved by Capt. T. M. Saunders.

HARPER FOR JANUARY.—This monthly makes its appearance as regularly as usual. Its contents are: A cruise among the Fuegians; Pictures of the Japanese; Scenes in the War of 1812; Woman under Difficulties; Out of Nazareth, and many other interesting articles.

Capt. See, of Rochester, commenced the draft in this District, January 5th, so as to come within the law, and drafted one man. He then suspended operations until specific orders were received.

PERSONAL.—Capt. T. S. Slaughter, of Co. I. 6th Regiment, stopped in Town a day or so since on his way to Fort Ridgley, where he has been ordered to confer with Lieut. Col. Averill. The Captain enjoys military life.

Justus C. Ramsey, brother of Senator Ramsey, was in town Wednesday, on business connected with the Indian Agency.

E. H. Norwood, the popular manager of the firm of Wm. J. Smith & Co., St. Paul, has been in town on business for a day or two past.

GONE HOME ON A VISIT.—Mr. O. Ward has returned to his home in Portage City, Wisconsin, on a two months visit. His dry goods establishment will be under the charge of our genial friend Sargeant, during his absence, and none need fear but that it will be well superintended. Mr. S. has been with Ward ever since he first located here, and the many customers of that establishment know him to be competent, accommodating and prompt in his dealings. Nathan will bear in mind that this is not a "fulsome puff" with a "bone" in it, but a simple tribute to a friend whose experience renders him a valuable acquisiton to the mercantile business. Call on him at Ward's and see if you don't find it true.

Two Social parties took place in town last Friday night. One at the Clifton and the other at City Hall. They were very pleasant gatherings, where happiness reigned.

We ask our readers who may wish to purchase boots and shoes, to give Mr B. Kohler, a call. He has a large stock on hand, and is selling them at very low rates. In the spring he will fit up a new store, equal to any in town.

Wm. Kilgore and Jason Wickersham have consolidated their stock of drugs and will be found hereafter in City Hall building.

Moser & Lulsdorf, tinners, are gradually filling up their store with all kinds of tin ware, stoves and hardware, to keep pace with their trade. They have been here but a few months yet have succeeded in building up a good business. Give them a call.

NEW PAPER.—We have received the second number of the Plainview Enterprise, published in Wabashaw County, by N. E. Stevens. It is a neatly printed, six-column sheet, and seems well patronized for a town containing 350 inhabitants. We wish the Enterprise abundant success.

The recent snow storm in the East blockaded all the railroads and travelers and the mail's were detained several days, but it did not hinder people from going to Randall's and buying an overcoat, and a pair of those buckskin gloves, which have been so much sought after.

THE LAWS.—Some of our Country subscribers misconstrued what we said last week about publishing the laws. We do not intend to follow in the wake of our predecessors the Independent, and fill the Union full of laws to the exclusion of reading matter. Whenever any of the laws exceed a column or two we shall publish them in a supplement and send them to all our subscribers, and keep the Union well filled with reading matter. So send in your names friends.

HOTEL AT GARDEN CITY.—The citizens of Garden City are really proud of their hotel, its landlord and landlady. Its management ever since Mr. Perry took charge has been highly satisfactory, not only to citizens there, but to travelers passing through. Mrs. Perry superintends the culinary department, and she spares no pains to have her table neatly spread, and well prepared food placed upon it. Prices are very reasonable, and teamsters speak well of the accommodations afforded by Mr. Perry. Success to him.

CHIROGRAPHY AT GARDEN CITY.—Professors Shaw and Andrews, are reaping a rich harvest in this quiet village. They are now engaged in their second term, and have one hundred scholars. It is said that the pupils have made much greater improvement than at any of their former schools. For instance a little boy of E. P. Evans, handed in a specimen the first night, and at the close of the term denied that he ever wrote it, and would not be convinced until he turned to the leaf in his book from which he had cut the slip, and found that it fitted exactly. Messrs Shaw and Andrews have gained for themselves an excellent reputation, as teachers of penmanship, and their success in Garden City, as well as in towns above, is truly astonishing.

By the way, we had forgotten to state that Garden City challenges Mankato to produce twenty-five persons to pit against an equal number from that place, and have a trial at writing, the beaten party to pay for an Oyster Supper, for all. Who will accept it?

MADELIA, Minn. Jan. 8th, 1864.

MR. EDITOR:—On the twentieth day of June 1863, the Militia Company of this township elected a copperhead captain, (the reason was that a story was started that the man who was running against him was a 'know nothing.') After he was elected several said they would not drill under a copperhead; he then denied the assertion, and expressed his willingness to take the oath of allegiance. On the fourth of July he went still further with his patriotism, and said that if any five would volunteer he would be the sixth. There has now been eight mustered into an old Regiment, and two sworn into the Second Cavalry. He is a single man, and I suppose is staying at home to take care of his family—and the Militia Company.

RECEIPTS OF WHEAT.—The weather during the past three days has been very favorable for farmers coming into town with wheat. The sleighing is excellent, and the consequence is that our streets have been crowded with loads of wheat. We have taken pains to ascertain the number of loads purchased by our merchants from Monday morning up to Wednesday noon. L. C. Harrington, 25 loads; J. J. Shaubut, 11; Prael & DuBuisson, 20; Isaac Marks, 15; Finch & Thurston, 14; E. & W. Bradley, 25. Making a total of 106 loads in nearly three days. Each load averaged about forty bushels, which would make 4,240 bushels of wheat sold in town during three days. Other parties have been purchasing, but we were not able to get the number of loads. The prices paid have been from 70 to 76 cents.

Those wishing School books and Stationary should give Lewis & Frisbie a call. They have reduced their prices on their present stock, and are bound to sell.

One of the best agricultural papers in the County is the American Agriculturalist. It gives the farmer information on every toopic pertaining to farming. The subscription price is only $1,00 per year. We are getting up a club however, of forty-five subsribers, and can furnish it for eighty cents. A single number of it is worth double that amount. Friends in the country can send us the money and we will see that they receive the paper promptly.

AFTER NEW GOODS.—C. B. Thurston, of the firm of Finch & Thurston has gone to St. Paul after more goods. The great rush to their store after groceries has almost exhausted their large present stock, and obliged them to replenish.

SMALL POX AT BLUE EARTH CITY

PEOPLE NEARLY SCARED TO DEATH!

A Protracted Meeting Broken Up!

Our reliable Blue Earth City correspondent communicates to us the following facts in regard to the Small Pox at that place.

"Mr. Neville, of this place, recently went to Baltimore, Md. for his wife, and arrived in town with her on the 6th inst. At the time they left Baltimore the Small Pox was raging fearfully there and by the time they arrived in Mankato it had broken out on his wife, her face and hands being covered with pimples. She stopped in Mankato over night, took breakfast at one of the hotels, and then took the stage for this place, stopping at all the towns along the route, and giving this horrible disease free circulation. Arriving at Blue Earth they stopped at the Union hotel where her husband had been boarding; but it soon becoming known that she had brought with her this great affliction, they were not allowed to remain, and Mr. G. was obliged to fit up the room over his store and place her there where she now is.

At first many of the neighbors called in to see her, and afterwards attended a protracted meeting in progress in the school house. It was soon deemed expedient to close the meeting. The day school also is soon to be closed, so as to prevent as much as possible, the spreading of the contagion. Mr. Neville has boxed up all his store goods, as the physician says that if he sells them they will carry the disease with them.

We trust this will not prove to be as bad as represented. But we know what a deathly horror everybody has of the Small Pox, and the bare mention of it is sufficient to scare them out of their wits. Every precaution has been taken to keep it within its present limits. This is indeed a serious matter, and many deaths may result from this imprudent act of those afflicted with the contagion.

MME DEMOREST'S MIRROR OF FASHIONS.—The special object and aim in the publication of this magazine, is to present Judicious, Reliable, and Practical Information in all matters pertaining to ladies' and children's dress.

Information of the greatest possible importance to Milliners, Dress makers, and every lady who wish to know the prevailing modes in New York and Paris.

To all enterprising ladies and industrious mothers, we shall endeavor to furnish many useful and practical suggestions in relation to the proper combination of colors, choosing materials, including cutting and making dresses, and children's clothes which of necessity must occupy a much larger portion of a woman's time, when no reliable authority is at hand to be consulted—suggestions which cannot fail to prove a source of much gratification, economy, personal refinement, and home comfort.

Do not fail to bear in mind that we furnish, in value, during the year, more than $3 in full size patterns alone; while in plates, engravings, reliable information on fashions more than can be secured in any or all the other fashion magazines put together, and yet the yearly subscription being $1 with the extra fifty cents worth of full size patterns sent as a premium, makes the yearly subscription to cost really only fifty cents, independent of the Carte de Visite. Do not fail to subscribe for the Mirror, if you wish to secure it promptly as it is sent in advance to subscribers.

J. I. C. COOK, publisher of the State Banner, Bennington, Vt., says: he was attacked with the DYSPEPSIA, and suffered so severely from it, that not a particle of food could be swallowed without occasioning the most uncomfortable sensation in his stomach. For five years he suffered from this dreadful complaint; when he used BRANDRETH'S PILLS. The first box did not seem to benefit him much, but the second produced a change, and by the time he had taken six boxes, a complete cure was effected. He says; "My dyspepsia was gone, and my experience of an early death vanished."

THE
Singer Sewing Machines.

Our LETTER A FAMILY SEWING MACHINE is fast gaining a world wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the cheapest and best and most beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Guaging, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch, which is the best stich known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work.—While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M. in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P. Folsom in 1852, and by E. D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot. Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota."

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors, at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.52, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling publicthat his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever! ! !

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

PLEASE CALL AND EXAMINE, OR SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

HOSTETTER'S

CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful tonic, corective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and bowels, Cures, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex arising from Boodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes. Nothing that is not wholesome genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetters Stomach Bitters. This popular preparations contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants. It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, Hostetters Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard. In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehensions of an attack, escape the scourge, and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health, within a few days by the use of Hostetter's Bitters. The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic and hence it works wonders in cases of Dispepsia and in less confirmed forms of Indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless apperent, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs: Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous attacks, Lowness of spirits and fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes. The agony of biliious colic, is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally restoring to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented. As a general tonic, Hostetter's Bitters produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and debility and decerepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-inforce and re-establish them. Last but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day. No family medicine has been so universally, and it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as Hostetter's Bitters. Prepared by Hostetter and Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere. 23

HELMBOLD'S.

Genuine Preparations.

COMPOUND Fluid Extract Buchu, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Watery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, of abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of power, Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing, Weak Nerves, Trembling, Horror of Disease, Wakefulness, Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back, Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face

Pallid Countenance. These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the Patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases" "Insanity and Consumption." Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess the records of the insane asylums. And melancholy deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which Helmbold's Extract Buchu invariably does.

A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females—Females—Females—In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex whether arising from indiscretion Habits of Dissipation, or in the decline or change of life. Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases Helmbold's Extract Buchu and improved Rose wash cures secret diseases in all their stages, at little expense. Little or no change in diet, no inconvenience, and no exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and inflamation, so frequent in the class of diseases, and expelling all poisonous diseased and worn-out matter. Thousands upon thousands who have been the victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the poison has, by the use of powerful astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage. Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu for all affections and diseases of the urinary organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating and no matter of how long standing. Diseases of these organs requires the aid of a diuretic. Helmbold's extract Buchu is the great diuretic, and it is certain to have the desired effect in all diseases for which it is recommended. Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

Price $1,00 per bottle, or six for $5.00.—Delivered to any Address, securely packed from observation. Describe symptoms in all communications, cures guaranteed! Advice gratis! address letters for information to H B. Helmbold, Chemist, 104 South Tenth st., bel. chestnut, Phil.

Helmbold's medical depot, Drug and chemical warehouse, 594 Broadway N. Y.

Beware of counterfeit and unprincipled dealers who endeavor to dispose of their own and other articles on the reputation attained by Helmbold's genuine preparations, Extract buchu, Sarsaparilla, Improved Rose wash. sold by all druggists everywhere, ask for Helmbold's, take no other.

Cut out the advertisement and send for it. And avoid imposition and exposure.

For the Mankato Union.

CHRISTMAS, 1863.

BY WILL LIVINGSTONE.

Darkly fall the twilight shadows, o'er the white and drifted snow,
And the winter winds are making wild, weired music as they go,
Joyously the lamps are gleaming, in full many a happy home,
But I'm sitting in the darkness of the evening all alone.

"Where are ye, the loved and cherished, of the merry long ago?
Come again and sit beside me, in the firelight's dusky glow!"
See! from out the deepening darkness glides a shadowy, spirit band,
And upon the vacant hearthstone, by my side again they stand.

There is one, a gentle maiden—her dark eyes were full of light,
And her voice was like the sighing of the summer winds at night,
And my life grew dark and cheerless when death called her from my side,
"Darling Nellie! do you love me, in your home beyond the tide?"

And I feel a soft hand resting like a blessing on my head,
And I hear a voice whose music from my life has long since fled
Say again in tender accents, "Thro' life's trials stern and wild,
Father! be thou near in mercy, oh protect my orphan child!"

One, the noblest, proudest, bravest of our youthful household band,
Sleeps beside the broad Potomac, in a strange rebellious land;
One is resting where the ocean hurls defiance at the shore,
Yet to-night they throng around me, and I hear them speak once more.

I can feel their mute caresses as their soft hands touch my hair.
"Do not leave me! I am weary of my doom of toil and care,
All the brightness and the glory of my childhoods hours have flown,
Take me with you, do not leave me in this strange cold world alone."

"Wait," they say, "endure with patience all the woe existence brings,
And when all its cares are ended, you shall rise on angel's wings;
Love, that thro' life's pain and suffering you may purer, holier grow,
And at last the light of gladness on your darkened path shall glow."

But the firelight all has faded, darker now the shadows lie.
And I hear the angry north-wind as it wailingly sweeps by,
Still the lamps are brightly gleaming from full many a happy home,
But I'm sitting in the darkness of the evening all alone.

Select Miscellany.

THE DRAB DRESS.

"Brother Fred, I've a favor to ask of you."

And Lita Ross lifted her face, with a beseeching expression, from a boquet of choice flowers which she held in her jeweled hand.

'A favor to ask of me, Sis?' was the young man's reply. 'One would think, from your serious, troubled countenance, it was the first one you had ever preferred, and you were to try an experiment.'

'Well, it is a sort of experiment, Fred; and before you give me an answer I want you to think, and not say, 'Oh, yes, yes as you always do, and then not give it another single thought."

"Well, here goes, then," replied the gay, handsome young man, dragging an ottoman to his sister's feet, and seating himself upon it with well-assumed gravity. "Your humble servant. And now proceed to business, madamoiselle."

The young girl's face assumed a thoroughly earnest expression as she clasped one of her brother's hands in both of her own, and said while the rich color burned into her cheeks:

"Fred, it is this: that you will drink no more wine. I tremble whenever I see you with the glass to your lips,"

"Well now, Lita child can you not trust my entire self-command—that I have no natural tendency that way; and that I only occasionally take a social glass when in the society of my friends."

'I know it, Fred—I know all that; but your influence is what I fear. There is Charlie Chester thinks you a perfect pattern of goodness; and as he touched glasses with you at Mrs. Reardon's, and you stood up and drank together, my heart ached—not so much for you as for him, knowing that he has not the self-command you have, and that he loves to look upon the wine when it sparkles in the cup.'

'Well, well, Lita, perhaps you are right. I never looked at it in that way before,' said Fred, while his countenance wore a thoughtful expression.

'But who in the name of common sense—'and now the young man smiled—"would have expected that my little fashionable butterfly sister ever found time for such thoughts as these, what with her ribbons, roses, and laces? Seriously, Lita I did not give you credit for being so much of a woman.'

"Thank you for the compliment, Fred. But now promise me; I shall not be happy until you do, I have no fears for your personal safety in this matter—tho' I doubt your moral rights to indulge in a social glass merely because Mrs. Grandy smiles upon the custom; but I fear for Charlie Chester seeing with what a relish he drains his glass to the dregs. Promise me, Fred—come, now, do this, if you love me.

And Lita Ross laid her hand beseechingly on her brother's head.

"Well Lita, this is something of a sacrifice to ask of me. Why, I should make myself very conspicuous by refusing a social glass. But I don't know but I'll do it, if you'll make a corresponding sacrifice. I don't care to be immolated upon the altar alone."

"Name it, Fred; and if it's in my power, I'll do it gladly."

"Well, then, Sis, I'll promise this thing if you will do what I am about to ask you. I declare, I have, scarcely the heart to, you look so pretty in that blue silk dress, with its lace trimmings—and your ear-rings, pin and bracelet of those tiny pearls, but you must give them up if I comply with your request."

"I will, Fred—I will."

"And wear a drab dress, without any oraments?"

"Yes, Fred.'

"Next Thursday night make your first appearance at Mrs. Thurstons. Remember, you will be subject to many remarks and will look very plain by the side of your showily-dressed companions."

'I promise. Now, Fred, promise in return that you will then and there comply with my request."

"Your hand, Sis. And now remember—as long as you will wear drab, and that without ornaments, I will refuse a fashionable glass. But you do not know what a sacrifice you are making. I should not be surprised were you to retract any day."

'Well, Fred, we shall see. And now a kiss, as a seal of our contract.'

And Lita threw her arms about her brother's neck, and covered his forehead, brow and lips with a shower of kisses—then glided away through the hall, up the long oaken stairway to her own chamber, where seating herself, she bowed her head and ejaculated:

'Thank God, Charlie Chester may be saved!'

And the tears rained down her fair face; and when she had again looked up there was a subdued, tender light in her eyes never there before.

And this was Lita Ross, the pet plaything of the family—the sparkling, fashionable belle of the season—the coquette, so accounted. But there was in her heart a leaf as yet unread by any eye save her Maker, and on it was inscribed her love for Charlie Chester.

'Well, now, who'd have thought it?' Fred exclaimed, as he found himself alone. 'I thought I had touched her dearest idol, and that she could no more deny herself, than she could give up her right hand. But she'll do it—I saw it in her eye. Faith, I never was so proud of her in my life. I've looked upon her as a mere chit of a girl; but all at once she stands before me a noble and self-sacrificing woman. And she is right about Charlie Chester; for, now I think of it, he is in danger of being drawn into a whirlpool of dissipation. Strange, I've not thought of that before! I used to think they had quite a partiality for each other; but they've outgrown it, I reckon.'

How much we pride ourselves upon our own discernment, and yet how widely do our conclusions sometimes wander from the real truth.

Thursday evening came and Fredrick Ross sat in the drawing room, awaiting the appearance of Lita. There was a light rustling step, and she stood before him, with her soft, brown hair drawn smoothly from her brow, and confined plainly at the back of her pretty head, and amidst its glossy abundance were a few sprays of helitrope; her dress was a simple drab silk, with low corsage and short sleeves, relieved by a fall of white blonde, while her tiny foot, with its dainty satin slipper of the same shade as the dress, laid coquettishly hidden in the thick, rich carpet.

'Come, Fred, I am ready,' she said. 'Am I presentable?'

Why, Lita, love!'

Here he paused. Admiration was written on every feature of his speaking face; but he adroitly changed the expression, and concluded with—

'Yes, Lita—presentable, perhaps; but one would take you to be at least twenty five, instead of nineteen. Faith I had no idea it would alter you so much!—Come—there is an hour yet; run and put on that rose-colored crape, and take the fastenings from your hair, and let it fall in curls about your shoulders. I hate to see you, my little sis, looking so prim. There's an hour yet, and Bell will assist you. Do it, now, to please me—there's a good girl.'

Lita's cheek turned crimson, and her eyes filled with tears. To think that Fred, her own brother, should tell her 'she looked twenty-five,' and 'prim' at that! What would Charlie Chester think of her? For a moment the temptation was strong upon her. But she did not yield, for she saw in her mind's eye Charlie Chester with the wine-cup at his lips; she heard his mother's voice crying, 'Enter not into temptation!' as plainly as when she heard her whisper it into his ear as he turned from his cottage home a few weeks previous. It was those words, and the look of gentle sorrow that filled the mother's eyes with tears, that first aroused Lita's fears in regard to Charlie: and ever since that time she had watched him closely. She did not care to betray her interest in him, as he had avoided her studiously for more than a year; and besides, she feared to wound him by forcing upon him the thought that she imagined him incapable of self-control. But now she had devised a way in which either of these contingencies could be avoided. And having obtained her brother's consent, should she yield it up simply to gratify her love for dress and admiration? No, no—she would not. More than that she dared not. Laying her hand in its tiny kid glove upon her brother's shoulder she said:

'Brother Fred, I shall go as I am, though I would gladly consult your taste and my own by exchanging this sombre dress for the rose-colored crape; but it would not be right in me—I should despise myself. I am sorry you are going to be mortified at my appearance. I did not think, before I came below, that I looked so old and prim. But of course I do as you say so.

'Never mind, sis—I am proud of you let you look as you will. I should not have loved you half so well, had you meekly yielded to my request. And now run and get your hat and cloak for the carriage waits for us at the door.'

Had my readers looked closely into the eyes of Fredrick Ross, they would have seen something like a tear glittering upon his dark lashes, which he hurriedly wiped away upon his delicately perfumed handkerchief as Lita turned from him. And Lita thought he never looked so lovingly upon her as when he handed her into the carriage; and then she was quite sure his bearing was more than usually proud as he led her to the further end of the reception-room, to present her to Mrs. Thurston, the lady of the house.

'Lita Ross, as I live!' cried an imperious beauty, as she tossed her stately head. 'I wonder what new freak has taken posession of her?'

'O, she likes to make herself conspicuous,' replied another lady, carelessly toying with one of her golden curls. 'See how all eyes follow her. I should not care to be in her place. She looks like a Quakeress matron of thirty or thirty five. You'll stand quite a chance of reigning belle to-night, now that she has hidden all her beauty under a cloud of drab.'

'Miss Milford, the young lady addressed colored a little at the doubtful compliment and gathering up her pale blue satin dress, she sailed statelily away.

'Miss Ross,' said Mrs. Thurston, bending her gentle face near to Lita's 'will you give a key to the mystery that so sorely puzzeles my guests to-night the plainness of your dress on this occasion?

'I cannot at present, Mrs. Thurston,' replied Lita; 'but at some future time I may. I hope you do not thing I have done any thing improper? I have a motive that you would certainly approve of if I were at liberty to name it.

And Lita stoood blushing through her smiles at the inquiring face of the lady.

'O, no Miss Ross—nothing improper; but it seems so different from your own girlish self, that it causes speculation in the minds of many. But do not let it trouble you. I think it very becoming to you, this drab dress with its blue trimings. In short I never saw you looking so lovely as to-night, though not so brilliant as your wont.

'O, Mrs Thurston you do not mean it; I am sure I am looking very plain Brother Fred said before I left home I looked twenty-five and so very prim and I felt as though it were true all the evening. It must be your partiality for me Mrs. Thurston—indeed it must.

'Not at all, Lita—I am quite serious in my opinion; and I have heard others say the same.'

'Lita Ross is Lita Ross dress her as you may,' said a light-hearted girl, as she stood talking to he companion.—'Just see her as she stands there with the light falling around her soft drab; but she looks prettier to night than ever,' continued the unselfish girl.

'Look Harry.'

'Yes Lizzie there are few faces like Lita Ross, prettier without adornments than with. I know of but one other like it in this whole assembly.'

And the little white hand of Lizzie was tenderly pressed by the young man, while a soft blush stole over the fair brow of sweet-tempered Lizzie Gray as they mingled with the crowd.

The supper saloon was thrown open, and the tables laid with silver and cut glass, supporting all the choice luxuries of the season, presented a dazzling spectacle, under the multitude of gas gets from the rich burners; while the long polished sideboards were supplied with some of the richest wines, reflecting many a prismatic color.

'Miss Ross what can I help you to? queried the gentleman who had escorted Lita to the table.

But for a moment Lita was quite oblivious. She was thinking of her brother's promise, and wondering what effect it would have upon Charlie Chester.

The ladies had withdrawn from the supper-room; but still the gentlemen lingered or returned after having escorted their fair companions from the saloon.

'Fred—Fred Ross—here, take this seat by me, and while we sip our wine we will have a chat.'

'Well I have no objection to the chat; but the wine I must refuse.'

'Fred Ross is a temperance man—he has signed the pledge! Three cheers for Fred Ross!'

Charlie Chester had in his hand a second glass, and just as he was about to drain its contents when the words of Frank Leland fell upon his ears. He turned pale and stood looking at Fred Ross, who sat smiling composedly upon his boisterous companions.

'Yes—just so; a temperance man, if you like it. I've signed a pledge too, and it's useless to ask me more, for I'm bound to keep faithfully.'

Lita Ross had stationed herself near the folding door, and not only had she seen all that had taken place at the side-board, but not a word had passed but had reached her ear. With a heart filled with happiness, she turned away, and that moment would not have exchanged for the richest dress around her, her own simple drab.

Several weeks passed away, and yet Lita was never seen in public with any but sombre drab.

'It is ridiculous in a child of her years,' said a lady, as Lita entered a large dry-goods establishment—perfectly ridiculous. I suppose she thinks it will pass for eccentricity. But it is not; it is downright folly. If she was my girl, I'd shut her up in the house, and feed her on bread and water, before I'd see her make such a simpleton of herself. Only see that drab bonnet, with its white ruche and strings, and the cape—quite suitable for her grandmother.'

'I heard her called one of the very finest dressed ladies on the street, to-day, by a gentleman from Europe,' replied the clerk, 'and he expressed a desire to obtain an introduction to her.'

'Ah indeed,' said she, tossing her head. Show me some more lilac moires.'

'Fredrick Ross,' said Charlie Chester, drawing Fred's arm within his own, as they left the crowd who thronged Mrs. Granville's musical assemblies, 'will you walk with me? I've something to say to you—a few questions to ask, if you will not deem it impertinent in me to do so.'

Fred readily acceded to his request; and no sooner were they alone than Charlie Chester said:

'Perhaps you will think it staange; but I am anxious to know why you so suddenly left off your habit of taking a fashionable glass. It alarmed me. I said, whenever I saw you turn from me, 'Is it possible he fears to trust himself? or what has wrought this change in him?'

'Yes, Charlie, I will tell you,' was the ready reply.

And then he proceeded to tell him the circumstances that led to the change in his habits—omitting to relate that his name was particularly mentioned as the one over whom Lita especially feared the influence of her brother's example.

Your sister is an angel of goodness, Fred; you may well be proud of and worship her. If more ladies would take the same stand she has done, young men would have higher inducements to break from fashionable follies: but, instead of that, they smile upon a custom which 'dear delightful Mrs Grundy' sanctions, and gives the cold shoulder to one who has the independence to carry out his own honest intentions. You with your wealth, are an exception. And yet I am resolved to follow your example, and, when temptation is strong upon me, I will look upon Lita, in her dark and drab dress and call to mind the sacrifice she has made—not so much from fear that her brother might fall a prey to the wine cup, but lest others, who have not so much self-control, might take encouragement from your example.'

After a few moments spent in discussing the subject, the friends parted; and when Fred related the conversation to Lita, after expressing her satisfaction, she stole away to her chamber—as was her wont—to give vent to the gratitude of her heart and an earnest petition ascended to heaven that Charlie Chester might have strength imparted to remain true to his vow.

'Well Lita, so this rich, talented, handsome European, who sued so earnestly for this little white hand, has shared the same fate with your many suitors.—You're an enigma, sis, and I'm afraid if I do not exert my authority you'll never marry.'

'I am sure I shall not, Fred unless my heart goes with my hand,' and Lita smiled a quiet smile as she looked up from her sewing. 'Now don't you leave me with such a sober face.. for I assure you that I am happy as I am.'

'I doubt it, sis,' was the laughing rejoinder, as Fred closed the door, and went through the hall humming a snatch of a sentimental song.

Two years had flown by, and still Charlie Chester kept his vow inviolate. Lita had watched him narrowly, and every day in her heart she thanked God that it was so; and yet to have seen them no one would have imagined that they had even the slightest feeling in common.

Lita sat alone in the back parlor of her home, thinking of the past—of the happy hours she had spent with Charlie Chester when she was a mere child—wondering why he avoided her so studiously of late—when she was roused by a tap at the door, and before her stood the object of her thoughts. With heightened color and an embarrassed air she welcomed him, wondering at this unceremonious call. A few moments of silence followed his entrance, and then Charlie drew his seat near to her, and said:

'Lita—Lita, my early playmate, my boyhood's love—now that I know, and can trust myself, will you entrust your life, your happiness to my keeping? I owe to you all that I have, all that I am. It was through your influence that I abandoned the wine-cup just in time to save me from an inebriate's grave. O, Lita, what do I not owe you! And yet this very fact encourages me to ask for more. Say, will you become my wife?'

The small hand he held nestling more confidently into his, the brown eyes lifted to his face with so much of truthful love in them, answered him.

And she told him of the long years his image had been hidden in her heart—of her fears for his safety when she saw him with the wine-cup pressed to his lips; and of her resolve to save him, and the consequent adoption of her drab dress.

'And it was for my sake, and mine alone, that you were led to make this sacrifice! And yet you did not know half my danger. I loved wine; my thirst for it was becoming more intense, and only a few months longer would have placed me beyond the reach of aid. But you were the 'good angel' commissoned by God to save me.'

Lita is now a happy wife and mother; but she still maintains her plain style of dress. She wore a drab dress on her bridal day; and as she passes along the street she is pointed out as the 'lady in drab.' But many there are who know not the story connected with it, nor that her husband will not hear to her changing it for any other color; for to him no other dress is as beautiful as her drab dress.

A clergyman had two daughters, who were much to fond of dress, which was a great grief to him. He had often reproved them in vain; and preaching one Sabath day on the sin of pride, he took occasion to notice among other things, pride in dress. After speaking some considerable time on this subject, he, suddenly stopped short and said, with much feeling and expression. But you will look at home. My good friends, I do look at home till my heart aches.'

HAPPY TURN.—An Oxonian borrowed two sovereigns of a brother collegian, promissing soon to return them in some shape or other.

'I should like to have them back as nearly as possible in the shape of two sovereigns,' observed the lender, "and I trust you will not forget the old adage—'he gives twice who gives quick ly.'

'Then we are quits!' cried the borower, instantly tossing back one of the sovereigns.

Here is a Quaker toast that has a thought in it;

"This is me and mine to the and thine. I wish when thou and thine come to see me and mine, that me and mine will treat thee and thine as kindly as thee and thine have treated me and mine."

This is a new version of the old compliment, which runs somewhat after this wise:

"I wish thee and thy folks loved me and my folks as well as me and my folks love thee and thy folks. For sure there never was folks since folks was folks that ever loved folks half so well as me and my folks love thee and thy folks.

A MODERN LEANDER.—All will admit, we think, that swimming the Hellespont for a lady love was a trivial affair, compared with breasting the storm and plunging through the snowdrifts on such a day as last Friday, especially when that feat is undertaken for an entire stranger.

Our readers will understand what we mean when we state that among the passengers of one of the blockaded trains on the St. Paul road last week, was a fair young mother, with a "little pledge of affection" on her lap. The pledge derived his sustenance by a gentle suction from a bottle; and as time wore on, and the beleaguered train still stuck fast, the lacteal fluid was soon exhausted. The little cherub's supplies being thus cut off, his mother was filled with terrible apprehensions as to the result of this forced abstinence. But luckily there were brave ones aboard as well as fair, and the brave are ever ready to succor the fair. Our Leander was no sooner made aware of the state of things in the rear car than he paid his compliments to the modest mother, seized the bottle and plunged boldly into the snow and piercing cold and struck out for a cow-shed. Meanwhile the little pledge who saw its staff of life thus taken away, became disconsolate and vented its grief in cries of anguish. Some one has poetically observed that a child, smiling in its sleep, is communing with angels; to which some ill-natured person has added he has seen them crying in their waking hours, in a manner to indicate they were having a spat with the devil.

Be this as it may, Leander soon emerged from the billowy deep, and dashing the spray from his whiskers displayed aloft the bottle filled with the precious fluid! the mother over flowed with gratitude, and the grief of the little angel was assuaged. Hereafter, "the milk of human kindness" will have additional significance to the passengers aboard that train.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Weekly Union.

Mankato, Friday, Jan. 22d, 1864.

THE GOLD FIELDS OF IDAHO.
Mankato the Most Eligible Starting Point.

Since the return of Capt. Fiske's expedition there has been much excitement in regard to the Idaho gold mines, and the State papers have been filled with glowing accounts, of their richness, and the shortest, safest and most direct rout thereto. Public attention is being directed to this newly discovered land of gold and thousands upon thousands in the Western and Eastern States are preparing to make the trip in the spring and try their fortunes there.

It is important that a route should be opened that will be the shortest, most direct and at the same time perfectly safe. Wherever that route lies, and whatever town may be the starting point, over and through it will the tide of emigration flow. One branch of the Legislature of this State has passed a memorial to Congress for the establishment of a line of Military posts from Fort Abercrombie to Bannock City, in Dakota Teritory, as a step preliminary to the opening of a northern route. But in our opinion that route is too far north. Emigrants from Wisconsin and Illinois do not wish to go four hundred miles north to Fort Abercrombie, when by coming across Southern Minnesota, pursuing the middle route, making Mankato a starting point and fitting out place, nearly all that distance could be saved.

A writer in the Pioneer of the 20th inst., advocates the opening of a route by way of Mankato and Fort Thompson to the mouth of Cheyenne river, passing up that river, about one hundred miles, and then pursuing a direct westerly course, to the mines. This is the most direct route from the States, and it ought to be opened. The writer says, "The northern route takes you to Fort Abercrombie and north of the great bend of the Missouri River, many hundred miles out of the way. The southern route takes you by Omaha up the Platte River to Denver City, then northwest about the same distance out of a direct line."

Everybody is seeking information as to the best route to take, and no opportunity should be lost to favor the opening of this middle route. We believe that Government will fit out another train in the spring, and that Mankato will be its starting point. This middle route posesses many advantages which the others do not, and emigrants can get their outfits cheaper here than by the Southern, and as cheap as by the Northern, route.

The Duty of the Hour.

In commenting upon the proclamation of Governor Morton to the citizens of Indiana, the Chicago Tribune makes the following pointed remarks; What is wanted now is to fill up our armies to the required point, without which we cannot meet the extensive demands of the next campaign, increased by our lengthened lines of communication and attack. In the discussion and adjustment of State quotas and credit, the most stress has come to be laid on the announcements that this or that State have filled their quota, and hence no more men are due therefrom, while the main point has not been so satisfactorily covered, as to where the men are actually coming from that we must have. The re-enlistment of veterans is a noble and cheering feature, but in no respect lessens the demand upon our States. Indeed, it, by very nearly so much as the number re enlisted, decreases the army itself to which the additions were to be made. Governor Morton asks loyal Indiana to look this thing squarely in the face and prepare to send fresh recruits. He warns them that a new call must and will be made by the President, especially if there be a general fulfillment of the tendency among the people to fall back, content that re-enlistments are counted under the last call, forgetting that this is virtually counting these veterans twice, and still leaves the addition to the army to be made from elsewhere. There is no mistake about the matter. Some time within the next two weeks the President will, and must, issue a new call, and there will be a new assignment of quotas under which will come without further postponement, the draft. Let the words of Governor Morton be of powerful and instant effect in Indiana, and the same timely precepts fall on other States. We must have men to fill up our armies. The work drags. The result as it now is progressing will prove deceptive. Nothing but the most vigorous prosecution of volunteering for the next few weeks will be of any avail, and that will serve if duly attended to.

A Case to Test the Presidents Proclamation.—So much doubt and uncertainty exists to the permanent validity of the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation that a decision by the Supreme Court is highly desirable A case has come under the proclamation at St. Louis which may possibly be carried to the Supreme Court, on the point most in question. A negro woman from Alabama an escaped slave has been sentenced to the penitentiary by the Crimnal Court at St. Louis for vagrancy. By State law she is liable as a runaway slave to be whipped and detained till her owner claims her or to be sold after a limited time to pay her jail fees. The Criminal Court took the freedom of the woman, under the proclamation, for granted, and therefore sentenced her to the penitentiary. GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

In complying with the Constitutional provision requiring the Governor to "communicate to each session of the Legislature such information touching the state and condition of the country as he may deem expedient," the hand of an afflicting providence has prevented my devoting the usual time to the treatment of the numerous topics involving the interests of a new and rapidly growing State.

PROSPERITY OF THE STATE.

I am happy to be able to cogratulate you that our young State has continued, during the past year, to enjoy, in full measure, the remarkable prosperity which has characterized the loyal section of this Union, while engaged in the stupendous conflict which has drawn so fearfully upon its resources, and engulphed so much of its precious blood and treasure. Though more than one-fifteenth of our whole population by the census of 1860, has been sent to reinforce the armies of the republic, and several counties have been depopulated by the Indian raid, there is good reason to believe that the numbers thus temporarily withdrawn from the State have been more than made up by immigration and natural increase, and that our population, which, in 1860, was 172, 022, is now not less than 225,000.

DEATH OF LITTLE CROW.

Among the first of the Indians who paid the penalty of their atrocities was Little Crow, the leader and master spirit of the Sioux outbreak, who was kill by Nathan Lampson and his son near Hutchinson. I submit to your consideration whether the brave men, who were instrumental in riding the earth of this monster, and who have been reduced to penury by the Indian raid, are not entitled to some reward commensurate with the service rendered.

FRONTIER DEFENSE.

It may be hoped that the disasterous result of this incursion will prevent any attempt of the kind in future. But it would be dangerous and fool hardy, to act upon any such presumption. The fact that several thousand Indians are congregated at points near our western boundary, to whom murder is glory and pillage a necessity, the facilities which in spite of ordinary military precautions the immense extent of our frontier affords for sudden and secret descents upon our settlements, and the incalculable mischief which even one desperate miscreant lurking in the woods and grass can inflict, warn us to omit or relax no preparations which have been found necessary for the protection of the exposed districts. The counsels and experience of the able and energetic soldier who is to succeed me, will prove of inestimable service to the State, in providing for the exigencies of the frontiers and to him I gladly remit the subject.

HOW TO GET RID OF THE FLOATING DEBT.

The amount of Treasury scrip outstanding December 1, 1862, was $55,918, on December 1, 1863, $55,339.59, showing a reduction of over ten thousand dollars in that portion of of our floating indebtedness. The existence of this debt, amounting in all to $59,202.42, which consists of the unpaid treasury warrants issued for the current expenses of the State Government, and the estimated deficiencies for which no appropriation has been made, is a blot upon our financial credit which no efforts should be spared to remove.

For this purpose, the Treasurer suggests the reduction of the interest tax from two mills to one mill on the dollar, and that the difference be added to the revenue tax.

The shortening of your session would also aid in effecting the object by about $2,000 a week.

In addition to this I would recommend more stringent provisions for the collection of the poll tax, which from the failure of town treasurers to comply with the law, has this year produced scarcely more than a third of the amount due from this source.

These measures, while adding nothing to the present aggregate tax rate, will, without doubt, furnish ample resources for meeting the present floating debt, and putting an end to the shameful necessity of issuing depreciated scrip for the current expenses of the meagre salaries of State officers to cover the deficit in the Treasury.

THE DRAFT AND THE CAVALRY REGIMENT.

The draft did not take place on the 5th, inst., as was anticipated, the postponement being doubtless made with a view to important amendments of the conscription law by Congress before it goes into operation. The reluctance of our people to volunteer into old organizations, and a lingering fear in our sparsely settled country, so lately the scene of horrid outrages by the foe behind us, that they may be needed to protect their own hearthstones, may prevent the enlisting of a sufficient number to avoid the draft, though the increasing energy and activity manifested by the towns in efforts to raise their quotas, give flattering promise that now, as heretofore, Minnesota will voluntarily honor all calls upon her patriotism and devotion to the Union.

I may here say, that in view of the probability that the draft would take place, and in accordance with representations made to the War Department, the system of drafting has been so far modified in this State as to remedy a gross injustice in the original method of appropriating quotas, by conceding to those townships whose patriotic alacrity and liberality in responding to previous calls has drained them of men, full credit for any excess they may have furnished, and by charging those townships which have heretofore furnished few or no volunteers, with their whole deficiency. By this plan the burdens of the war will be equally distributed in every locality.

MILITARY OPERATIONS OF THE STATE

All efforts of the military force of 2,000 men, which guarded our extended line of frontier were unavailing to prevent these depredations. The prompt and vigorous cooperation of the State authorities was necessary to arrest a second depopulation of our frontier counties. A corps of State scouts was organized to track these savages to their hiding places, and in order to enlist the inhabitants of the menaced district in their extirpation, arms were issued to them, and a reward of twenty-five dollars, afterwards increased to $200, was offered for every hostile Sioux warrior killed.

These measures (for details of which I beg to refer you to the report of the Adjutant General) were effectual in clearing the State of hostile Indians. Of the small party of invading Sioux, nine were killed by citizens or soldiers.

RAILROAD TO LAKE SUPERIOR.

The Lake Superior & Mississppi Railroad Company, to which the State made a similar conditional donation of swamp lands, has recently received an additional inducement to prosecute the work on this road in the pledge of a bonus of $250,000 by the city of St. Paul, upon the completion of the road, within five years, from St. Paul to the head of Lake Superior. An ordinance of the City Council to that effect has been ratified by a popular vote, and now only awaits the sanction of the Legislature to give it validity.

Leaving the last mentioned road out of view, and excepting the Winona & St Peter road all our great projected land grants lines, five in number, traversing the State in as many different directions, with an aggregate length when completed of over 1,000 miles, and resting on land grants amounting to nearly 4,000,000 acres, have a common centre of convergence near where the Minnesota joins its current to that of the Mississippi, making it the focus of seven great transit lines. I venture to direct your attention to this prominent feature of our railroad system, because it seems to me that sufficient consideration has not been given to the fact, that a single railroad 140 miles long from this focal point (the particular locality is of little importance,) to Lake Superior, would furnish an outlet for our whole system of natural and artificial communications upon lake navigation, at a distance and cost of transit much less, for three quarters of our agricultural area, than by the routes terminating on Lake Michigan.

RAISING THE GOVERNOR'S SALARY.

I deem it only proper for me, but my duty to recommend that you increase the compensation now allowed by law to your Governor and Commander-in-Chief. The office is one at all times attended with heavy cares and responsibilities, and, in a crisis like this, with much labor. The best talent and the purest integrity will find ample scope for exercise in the faithful discharge of its duties. The present salary, at the time it had an incumbent who lived at the capital, and was not compelled to incur the expense of changing his residence and renting a house in which to dispense fitting hospitalities In these times, however, it would not be adequate for the support of an ordinary family under like circumstances, much less for one compelled to remove hither from some other portion of the State. The people already commenced to select this officer outside of the capital district, and at the present prices of rent and rates of living in St. Paul, the salary now paid in State warrants, which he is compelled to dispose of at a discount, is not more than half sufficient for his support, in the style which the Chief Magistrate of the State is expected and ought to live.

I do not consider it desirable that the compensation should be so increased as to render it possible for the office to be sought as a means of making money, but most assuredly, the Governor of this State, ought not to be compelled to engage a portion of his time in some trade or profession, or draw upon private resources to yet an insufficient salary, and defray his actual expenses while devoting his time to the service of the State. The people of Minnesota are not parsimonious nor mean, and while they would censure extravagance, they desire you to be liberal and generous, and I do not entertain a doubt that they will sustain your action in so amending the law which establishes the Governor's slavery, that the poorest man in the State can afford to accept the office.

Colonel Medary has sent to Mr. Vallandigham $339, which has been sent to him by ladies from different parts of the state. The democracy of Ohio will raise Mr. Vallandigham a salary equal to what Government pays the ambassador to England and France; the salary to be given him as long as he remains in exile.

Extracts from Gov Millers Inaugural Address.

The healthy progress of our railroad system justifies the belief that, during the present year some two hundred miles of these great arteries of trade will be complete and in operation, within the State; and that at no distant day, Lake Superior and the Mississippi River, St Paul and the British Possessions the falls of St. Anthony and the State of Iowa, the Minnesota Valley and Winona will be indissolubly connected by these channels of intercourse and commercial prosperity.

The low stage of water in our navigable streams, during the past season, has demonstrated the importance of an early construction of the contemplated railroads along the valleys of the Minnesota and Mississippi Rivers, from their upper settlement to the Southern limits of the State.

In this connection I respectfully submit that, in meritorious cases, a donation of the alternate sections of Swamp Lands, within a specified distance of respective roads—and transferable upon their completion—might materially aid these Corporations, while the enhanced value of the residue would liberally compensate the State for such contribution.

Nothing in my judgment, is more certain than the construction of a Northern line of railroad to the Pacific Ocean, at some period more or less distant. The capital and commerce of the Great Atlantic States are so much interested in the success of that enterprize, as to render it indispensable. While we are without the means at present, to contribute to the final accomplishment of this magnificent project, it well becomes the representatives of the people of Minnesota, to make every exertion to induce the location of the route through our own State. The effect of such a railway upon her prosperity, in developing the riches of this vast region, would be incalculable; and we should not hesitate to use every effort to secure these benefits.

Having thus briefly stated my views in connection with the main topics of interest which will necessarily engage your attention, I deem it proper once more, emphatically to assure you that you will have my earnest cooperation in all measures having for their object a judicious economy in the expenditure of public money—the decrease of taxation for local purposes—the development of the resources of our infant State and particularly the discharge of our whole duty as one of the loyal states, in this time of our nation's peril. And I do not hesitate to repeat my convictions, that whatever of sacrifice or of sufferings may be requisite on our part, or on the part of the people we represent, to re-establish the national authority within the rebellious states, and to restore the Union in its integrity, will be even joyfully submitted to, if thereby we can contribute to the accomplishment of this great result; which involves the welfare of ourselves and our children, and in a more extended sense, will decide the momentous question of man's capacity for self government, for ages to come

Gold Found in the Lake Superior Region.

There is apparently no limit, either in extent or variety, to the rich resources of Michigan, No similar extent of country upon the habitable globe is equally rich in natural wealth, and certainly no other region offers such tempting inducements for the investment of capital to properly develope its resources. She is rich in iron, copper, coal, gypsum and salt, to which silver has recently been added and it is now ascertained that rich deposits of gold lie imbedded in her virgin soil, as will be seen by the following extract from the Philadelphia Mining Register, of Jan. 2: In connection with this silver-lead region, there has transpired in this city a circumstance which it is pretended will, if believed, abate the excitement prevailing therein:

A sample of iron pyrites said by its owner to have been taken from a quartz lode in the silver-lead region & Michigan, by analysis of Du Bois & Williams, Analytical Chemists, of this city, was found to be wonderful rich in gold—the value for the ton of rock being above the average of that of the ore of Colorado.' The specimen above referred to was delivered to Messrs. Du Bois & Williams by Capt. John Spaulding of the steamer Northern Light, one of the pioneers of the silver-lead enterprise, and came from section 10, town 49, range 28 west, belonging to the Marquette silver mining company of this city.

It is hereby announced that pursuant to the law the liberal bounties allowed prior to January 5, 1864, viz: $302 to veteran volunteers, will be paid until march 1, 1864.

The Commander-in-chief takes this opportunity of expressing the expectation that the people of all the towns in the state will prove equally patriotic, by promptly sending forth, from among their number of their own free will, their proper share of men to swell the grand army of the Union, battling for the country and the rights of men.

The thinned ranks of our regiments now in the field must be filled with the least practicable delay, by volunteering if possible, by draft if necessary.

The quotas of the several towns will be announced in a few days.

By order of the Commander in chief,
OSCAR MALMROS.

Finch & Thurston have recently received a large lot of groceries.

Several runaways have taken place in town during the past week, and the result is that kindling wood is plenty.

It is stated the physicians up the valley accumulated large fortunes vaccinating people during the recent small pox scare.

RETURNED.—Major Smith, returned from Chicago, last week, after an absence of nearly four weeks.

Large quantities of wheat have been brought into town during the week, the greater portion of it from Faribault county. The price paid has been 73 cents.

The excitement in regard to the draft has about died out, but the rush of customers to Lewis & Frisbies store for drugs and stationary is unabated.

Capt M. A. Dailey, Commissary of Subsistence, has been ordered to report to Milwaukee, and will leave the first of next week. He is now engaged in turning over his Commissary stores to Capt. McKusick.

The meeting of the Young Men's Lyceum is hereby postponed until to-morrow, (Saturday) evening at the usual hour. A full attendance is then desired. By order of the President.

H. Stratton, of Medo, is our authorized agent to receive subscriptions in that part of the county. He is an active, energetic farmer and says he can't keep house without the UNION.

COUNTY SURVEYOR.—Stephen Middlebrook, of Mapleton, has been appointed Deputy County Surveyor during the absence of lawyer Coon.

A letter from Lieut Rice, of the 7th Regiment, who is stationed at St Louis, says that the health of the Regiment is not very good. A number of cases of small pox have occurred, some resulting fatally.

The Small Pox excitement at Blue Earth City has nearly subsided, and Mrs Neville is getting well. The weather was so cold at the time of her arrival there, the physician says, that that alone prevented it from spreading.

The card of the well known firm of Beaupre & Kelly, of St Paul, will be found in this weeks paper. Their business connections with the merchants of the valley are large, and their fair dealing has rendered them very popular.

OFF FOR IDAHO.—From seventy-five to a hundred dollars per day can be made digging gold in the Idaho mines, a large party is fitting up to go there in the spring from this place, and they have all determined to go to Randalls and purchase their clothing.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES.—The Quarterly meeting of the M. E. Church for Mankato Station, will be held in City Hall, on Saturday and sabbath, January 30th and 31st. Preaching on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, by the Presiding Elder. Rev. J. O. Rich, after which the business of the Conference will be transacted. Brethren—members of the Quarterly Conference will please to be present.

Services on the Sabbath will be as follows; Love feast at 9 o'clock A. M. preaching at 10½ o'clock by the P. E. After the services the Sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered. Preaching again in the evening at the usual hour. The usual collection for the Presiding Elder will be taken after the morning Service on the Sabbath.

MISFORTUNE.—This is a world of misfortune, and one of the saddest to a good housekeeper is to be afflicted with heavy yellow, sour bread, biscuit, &c. If you are very troubled in this way, use D. B. De Land & Co's Chemical Saleratus, when you will be surprised at its charming results in removing the cause of your misfortune.

We understand that Rev. A. C. Stine, of this place, is likely to receive the Chaplaincy of the Second Cavalry Regiment. We hope he may be successful. Mr. Stine is one of the early settlers in the State, and in the ministry, has labored on the frontier for years. At the time of the Indian outbreak in 1862, he was Lieutenant of the immortal eighteen brave men who fought the first battle in defence of the place. At the second attack of the savages, on the 23rd of August, he was severely wounded while fighting in the front ranks, and has not entirely recovered. We believe he is the only minister now living that has suffered the loss of all property by the Indians, and received injuries of a physicial nature. He is popular with the soldiers, and would make a good chaplain.

Last week, several of the lovers of penmanship in Garden City, invited Mankato to a trial of writing. The invitation, we are happy to say, has been accepted, and the following are the terms. Fifteen writers to be chosen on each side, and the trial to take place at City Hall, this Friday evening. The persons selected are to be only those who were members of Prof. Shaw's school, during his terms of teaching here and in Garden City. The test is writing a given sentence; and the party having the greatest number of correct letters in the aggregate, to be victor, and the beaten party to have the fun of paying for a first-rate supper at the Clifton House, gotten up by mine host Flower. A committee of three will decide upon the merits of the writing. The committee will consist of one from Garden City, one from Mankato and those two are to appoint the third member. This tournament in penmanship is creating considerable excitement among those most interested, and they are all busy doing "One thing at a time," &c., Go in and win, you chirographic denizens of Mankato. Dont let the fair daughters and sturdy sons of Garden City come down here and "flail you out That's what's the matter. Isn't supper most ready?

The cold weather has not yet spent its fury, and there are many blustering wintry days in store for us—days of suffering, in which the poor and needy will want for the necessaries of life. We have them among us, and the really deserving should be provided for. The question arises, "What should be done for the families of those who have gone forth to fight the battles of our country. All agree that those who are needy shou'd receive help, and that those families that are not in indigent circumstances should not be supported by contributions. In order to have justice done to all, some system should be adopted. Without that we can do nothing. Then as nothing has been done in this matter to perfect a plan upon which to work, unitedly, we would reccommend that a meeting of citizens be called to consider the matter, and appoint a committee to investigate all cases, inquire into their necesities, and provide for their relief. The funds for this purpose can be raised, we suggest, by monthly subscriptions. With an arrangement of this kind, or some other practical one, we shall be able to give to needy families, intelligently, and not feel that we are giving to no purpose. Who will make a move in this matter?

JACK WANTS HIS GROG AND PRIZE MONEY.—A meeting of sailors was held in New York on Monday night, of last week, to discuss the subject of enlisting in the navy. One of the grievances brought forward was the delay in deciding prize cases, the still longer delay in paying over the money after the decisions, and the large share of it grabbed by the middle men. There was considerable strong talk, and resolutions were passed not to ship in government vessels until the grog ration was restored, and they could get their prize money without paying over one-fourth of it to the landlubbers who have the handling of it.

The contract for supplying the Post Office Department with Scales has been awarded to the Messrs. Fairbanks. Their Scales are also very extensively used in the Army, and in the Navy Yards, Custom Houses, Arsenals, Public Works, &c., throughout the country.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY

OF THE

STAR PAPER OF AMERICA

JANUARY 1, 1864.

The New York Mercury

FOR THE

COMING YEAR.

After more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literary Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry; but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvelous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romanceists of the Old World, will be placed the chefs d'œuvres of the most eminent story writers of the New.

Miss A. E. Braddon, Authoress of "Aurora Floyd," Lady Audley's Secret,' 'John Marchmont's Legacy,' etc., etc.,' who has suddenly risen, like a star of the first magnitude in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply the New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the Star Weekly of America, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H Robinson, Margret Blount Ned Buntline, Arthur M Grainger, Grace Gardner, Felix O C. Darley, M—M E Braddon, Cousin May Carleton W O. Eaton George Martial, Julia S Ingraham, Edward Willett, Mary Chief, George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various noms de plume, contribute to its colums, while its pictorial illustrations from the inimitable pencil of Felix O C Darley, Esq , the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has giving the coup de grace to so many pretentious publication, and half destroyed those that still survive has added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart stirring short stories, its millitary historietts, its machless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its genial wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigerous editorials, the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to all classes of society. Containg, as it does Forty Columns of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carlton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for the New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedenc, and the result will unquestionably be that the most effective story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the New Year's Number of the great Representative Weekly of the Western World.

The New York mercury is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is reguarlly mailed every Saturday morning, for $2 a year; three copies for $5; six copies for $9 eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter up of the club. Six month's subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post Office, county and State. We take the notes of alsolvent banks at par, Payment must invariably be made in advance.

MME DEMOREST'S, MIRROR OF FASHIONS.—The special object and aim in the publication of this magazine, is to present Judicious, Reliable, and Practical Information in all matters pertaining to ladies' and children's dress.

Information of the greatest possible importance to Milliners, Dress-makers, and every lady who wish to know the prevailing modes in New York and Paris.

To all enterprising ladies and industrious mothers, we shall endeavor to furnish many useful and practical suggestions in relation to the proper combination of colors, choosing materials, including cutting and making dresses, and children's clothes which of necessity must occupy a much larger portion of a woman's time, when no reliable authority is at hand to be consulted—suggestions which cannot fail to prove a source of much gratification, economy, personal refinement, and home comfort.

Do not fail to bear in mind that we furnish, in value, during the year, more than $3 in full-size patterns alone; while in plates engravings, reliable information on fashions, more than can be secured in any or all the other fashion magazines put together, and yet the yearly subscriptions being $1 with the extra fifty cents worth of full size patterns sent as a premium, makes the yearly subscription to cost really only fifty cents, independent of the Carte de Visite. Do not fail to subscribe for the Mirror, if you wish to secure it promptly as it is sent in advance to subscribers.

Singer Sewing Machines.

Our LETTER A FAMILY SEWING MACHINE is fast gaining a world-wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the cheapest and best and most beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Guaging, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch, which is the best stich known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the letter A Family Sewing Machine, Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work—While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes,

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 253, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P. Folsom in 1852, and by E D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota,"

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113,12, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863 at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling publicthat his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Nov. 1. BURT & LAW.

MANHOOD;

How Lost! How Restored!

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price, Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on the receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing

CHAS. J. C. CLINE,

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tention, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood: and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

PLEASE CALL AND EXAMINE, OR SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in sections not yet occupied. Address,

HOSTETTER'S

CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and bowels, Cures, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes. Nothing that is not wholesome genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetters Stomach Bitters. This popular preparations contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants. It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, Impure water and other external causes, Hostetters Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard. In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehensions of an attack, escape the scourge, and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health, within a few days by the use of Hostetter's Bitters. The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic and hence it works wonders in cases of Dispepsia and in less confirmed forms of indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless apperent, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs. Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous attacks, Lowness of spirits and fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes. The agony of bilious colic, is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally restoring to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented. As a general tonic, Hostetter's Bitters produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and debility and decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. in the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-inforce and re-establish them. Last but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements, present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day. No family medicine has been so universally, and it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as Hostetter's Bitters. Prepared by Hostetter and Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere. 23

HELMBOLD'S.

Genuine Preparations.

COMPOUND Fluid extract Buchu, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Watery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflamation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, of abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of power, Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing, Weak Nerves, Trembling, Horror of Disease, Wakefulness, Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back, Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face Pallid Countenance These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the Patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases" "Insanity and consumption." Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess the records of the insane aslyums. And melancholly deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which Helmbold's Extract Buchu invariably does,

A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females—Females—Females—In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex. whether arising from indiscretion Habits of Dissipation, or in the decline or change of life. Take no more Balsam, Mercurey, or unpleasant medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases Helmbold's Extract Buchu and improved Rose was cures secret diseases in all their stages, at little expense. Little or no change in diet, no inconvenience, and no exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and inflamation, so frequent in the class of diseases, and expelling all poisonous diseases and wornout matter. Thousands upon thousands who have been the victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the poison has, by the use of powerful astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage. Use Helmbold's Extract Buch for all affections and diseases of the urinary organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating and no matter of how long standing. Diseases of these organs requires the aid of diuretic Helmbold's extract Buchu is the great diuretic, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is recommended. Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

Price $1,00 per bottle, or six for $5.00.—Delivered to any Address, securely packed from observation. Describe symptoms in all communications, cures guaranteed! Advice gratis! address letters for information to H. B. Helmbold, Chemist, 104 South Tenth-st, bel. chestnut, Phil.

Helmbold's medical depot, Drug and chemical warehouse, 594 Broadway N. Y.

Beware of counterfeit and unprincipled dealers who endeavor to dispose of their own and other articles on the reputation attained by Helmbold's genuine preparations, Extract buchu, Sarsaparilla. Improved Rose wash, sold by all druggists everywhere, ask for Helmbold's, take no other.

Select Miscellany.

The Pledge.

Gloriously beautiful looked the Lady Ione Mortimer, as she stood surveying herself before a full length Venetian mirror, that hung from floor to ceiling. "Twas her bridal costume, which of itself cost a small fortune. The robe was a superb snow white velvet, broidered with seed pearls and rare old point lace. The veil, the most chaste and elegant that fine taste could devise or wealth command, floating around and shrouding that lovely form with its soft, hazy mist, and clasped above the queenly brow with a beautiful sprig of diamonds of the purest water. And yet a cloud rested on that brow that should have outshone the sun in splendor.

"Beautiful! Radiantly beautiful! my own dear Ione," exclaimed a voice, which caused the divinity to turn around.

"Maud. Oh, my friend! Maud, hear me, for my heart is breaking.

She threw herself on a low ottoman, buried her face in her companion's lap and burst into sobs that came from the depth of her soul. Maud knew that such violent anguish must of itself soon become exhausted, therefore she only smoothed her hair, caressed and kissed her hands, murmuring. "There, there, hush, darling—don't cry—my pet. Do not cry so. Tell me of Earnest."

'Twas a magic word. Slowly she raised her head, pushed back her rich heavy ringlets, that swept the floor in her paroxysm of grief, gently came the sounds from her tightly compressed lips. Presently she arose and looked a perfect Goddess of Beauty. Her voice was low, clear, and yet so mournfully sad that the coldest heart could not have listened to those deeply thrilling strains unmoved.

,Maud, I am the last of my race; nor can I now name any animate creature that claims me kindred. One by one they passed away, and now only these broad lands remind me I ever had a relative. And the dearest of all, my angel mother. Tree years ago this night she left me to join the mighty throng that 'circle round the throne.' Oh! I can never forget her—lack a fond imagination to paint truthfully the beauty of its idol. She lives in my memory, and is to my life what the dew is to the flower, or the sun to the earth. A radient star, whose beauty and brilliancy becomes etherialized as we contemplate its distance from us, can you ever feel how dear she was to me. I often feel—

> "That in the Heavens above,
> The angels, whispering to one another,
> Can find among their burning words of love,
> None so devotional as that I feel for my > dear mother."

"Such, Maud, was the beautiful being I called mother. What think you was the last promise she wrung from me as I held her cold hand in mine." She looked at me until I felt her eyes burning into my very soul, and said:

"Ione, in three years from this night you will give your hand to Earnest St. Clair. Pledge me now, in my dying hour, that unless he swears never to taste a drop of intoxicating drink you will forego your promise. Remember 'tis my last boon. Its blighting curse has brought me here, It has hung upon my footsteps like a hungry lion. It has been remorseless. Three talented and noble brothers, a proud old father, and last and most my own dear husband. Oh, my precious child when I remember his brilliant, transcendent genius, together with his noble and sterling virtues my soul burns in lava surges. He early mounted the ladder of Fame, was courted, flattered and praised, surrounded by those who should have staid his hand, but alas! the fatal cup, shrouded his intellect—held captive his mind, and Ione, he died. Earnest St. Clair has the same noble qualities, and the same faults, and now my child make him swear never, never to let the poison pass his lips, or"—she ceased to speak. I finished the sentence for her.

"I promise you most sacredly."

"And now Maud, Ernest St. Clair is coming here this night. He is proud and he will never promise me that. What shall I do?"

She wrung her hands, and with eyes uplifted to Heaven, cried. "My mother Oh, my mother! look in pity on thy child.

The echo of her wild appeal had scarcely died away when her maid announced Mr. St. Clair.

"Ione, my beautiful bride, in tears? for what? Come tell me, and let me drive the clouds away. I would not—Oh! no, not for a Duke's ransom see a shadow on thy peerless brow to-night."

"Ernest." she began, and there was no tears in her eyes now, ,,I have a sacred duty to perform—a pledge to fulfil, made my dying mother three years ago this night. Oh, Ernest, should you not comply with my request then am I, of all woman, most miserable. I dare not break my promise to my sainted mother."

And then in broken intervals she repeated the dying words of her mother. He listened. Every word struck home to his soul. His dark eyes flashed, his proud bosom heaved. He caught her hand and murmured, "saved, saved! Ione, from this hour I will be a free man. For years have I been bound in fetters stronger than iron or brass. The monster intemperance has hung upon my steps like an incubus My strength, my manhood, my life hath bowed to its deadly sway. Why have I been thus blind. From this hour no drop of intoxicating drink ever passes my lips. I will be its deadliest foe while my life shall last.

And Ernest St. Clair has faithfully kept his vow. MONA GRAY.

The Methodist Menagrie.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate, gives a classification of the ministers in the general conference. It says: "We have eight Bucks, two Birds, seven Cranes, three Fish, three Pikes, three Lambs, thirteen Lyons, five Bears, two Hares, ten Foxes, while the Wolf comes seven times." This show would beat A. Ward's show of wax works.

In the Mechanical classification it has twenty-three Bakers, five Butlers, and one Brewer. It has five Carpenters, two Sawyers, fourteen Turners, four Weavers, sixteen Coopers, four Chandlers, five Carters, thirteen Wheelers, twenty-nine Taylors, two Plumers, forty-five Millers, nine Masons, and thirteen Cooks. There is no corn although seven Cobbs have been found.

Notwithstanding all the talk about the dimensions of the conference, it is now certain that it contains but fourteen Pecks, or three and a half Bushels.

At the ladies' fair recently held in Columbus, Ohio, a pretty Indiana girl was observed exerting her persuasive powers to their utmost tension, trying to induce a certain military gent who ranks as a captain, to buy a bead basket or some other ornament she had in her posession. As the gallant captain had been gouged an unlimited number of times during the evening, he didn't see it; but, thinking to start the maiden said, jokingly, 'Don't want to buy your tinkets, but I'll give you five dollars for a kiss.' The maiden reflected a moment. She was laboring in a noble cause for the soldiers' good, 'surely in such a case there's no harm;' so, in a twinkling of the eye, she said 'Done, sir!' and as he expressed it she gave him a whopper, right on his cheek. Military drew back, abashed. The crowd saw it and laughed. There was but one way of escape, he pulled out his somewhat depleted wallet and forked over a 'V.' He then rushed up stairs and drowned his sorrows in a flowing bowl of oyster soup. The maiden in the meantime, maintained her accustomed tranquility, and yet survives, a fitting monument to woman's patriotic spirit.

A POSER.—A little boy, who had evidently been admiring the pretty things in the show-window of a certain jeweler's shop on Main street, was strutting about the sitting room the other evening, throwing out his chest and admiring his Herculean proportions. "Papa," says the child, "ain't I a big boy?" "Yes," said the father, "a great healthy boy." "Papa," continued the lad, "don't you think I'm most fat enough to have a clock in my belly?"

A Wisconsin paper, the Baraboo Republic, states that it has learned, through a private source, that the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company have about decided to extend a branch of their road from Janesville, via Madison and the Baraboo valley, to Winona. We hope this announcement may prove true.

A countryman once brought a piece of board to an artist, with the request that he would paint upon it St. Christopher as large as life. 'But' returned the artist, 'that board is much too small for that purpose.' The countryman looked perplexed at this unexpected discovery. 'That's a bad job,' said he; 'but look ee, sir, ye can let his feet hang down over the edge of the board.'

A lawyer was once pleading a case in court before the full bench. The chief justice whispered in his neighbor's ear, but loud enough to be heard by others, 'I'll wager he lies.' The lawyer, not in the least disconcerted, drew his purse from his pocket, and laying on the bar, exclaimed. Put down your money—I take the bet!

A young man, rather verdant and very sentimental, while making himself interesting to a young lady the other evening by quoting from the poets, to the other choice and rare extracts he added, 'There is no place like home.' 'Do you really think so?' said the young lady. 'Oh yes' was the reply. 'Then' said muslin, 'why don't you stay there?'

THE DOOR OF HEAVEN.

It was a fearful time when the steamboat Tyro was lost. It was long ago and almost everybody has forgotten it, except the few who had friends on it, and they are almost all gone. The Tyro was small and the passengers were few and poor so it has passed from the public mind. All the day the bright sun had shown down on the peaceful lake, and everything seemed safe and secure. The passengers had no thought of danger as the night came on.

A little boy kneeled down to say his evening prayer, and as he looked out and saw the western sky all aglow with the glory going day, he asked 'Mamma, isn't that the door of heaven with bright curtains all around it?'

'Yes, my boy,' said the mother; 'Heaven's doors are all around us.'

'Well that's the one I want to go in at, because it's the prettiest,' and the child prayed his prayer and went to sleep.

It was never known how, wheather the pilot fell asleep at his post, or the lights went out, but when midnight came there was a crash, a shiver, and cries of terror. The steamer had come in collision with a schooner and was sinking.

The little boy awoke. He cried out' Mamma, where are you?' and his mother's arms held him fast, even as they sank together in the dkark waters.

They came to the surface again, and the mother caught something floating and held fast to it.

'Jamie! Jamie!' she said 'hold me very tight.'

'Mamma, we are going to heaven? I don't like this way—I'm afraid.'

'Never fear, child, God will meet you,' and with all her strength the mother lifted the child upon the float bale, then dropped it and went home through the flood gates below.

'Mamma! where are you?' cried the child, but there came no answer. No one noticed the child afloat, for every one sought to save his own life, and the day was born, ran its race, and was dying again when Jamie floated ashore. The little fellow was hungry, but there again was the glorious gate of heaven, and Jamie thought it was wider open than the night before, and as soon as he could crawl off from the bale to the land, he began to run as fast as he could, straigh to the west.

Jamie's feet tottered. He was too weak to run, so he walked straight on, a long, long way, until the west began to grow dim in his sight.

Jamie saw a man coming toward him, but he did not stop. The man noticed that the child's clothes were wet, that he had been in the water, and he tried to stay him.

'Little boy, where are you going?' he asked.

'I can't stop now, said Jamie; I am afraid I shall be to late.'

'Too late! where are you going that way? there is no house there,' the man cried after him, for Jamie did not stop an instant.

'Yes there is, and I'm afraid the door will be shut.'

'Whose house, boy?'

'Why God's beautiful house to be sure. Don't you know it? It is heaven. See? it grows dark.' and Jamie made one effort and fell to the ground fainting with hunger.

The man lifted him up in his arms, and Jamie lisped: 'Mamma said God would come to meet me,' and then he fell asleep. When he awoke he found himself in a strange place, with strangers about him.

'Come, my darling, you must eat some of this,, said a soft voice, and the light of a candle was carefully shaded from Jamie's eyes.

Jamie's last thought was of heaven and his first question was - 'Did I get there? Did He meet me?'

And a little boy standing by the bed answered: 'Yes, little boy father met you and brought you home.'

'God's father too, is he?' asked Jamie, not yet fully conscious of his present state; 'then we'll go home together.'

Jamie recovered and grew to manhood—grew to a good and glorious manhood, and to the time when his Redeemer called him home, Jamie never forgot the western door for which he had striven. He never looked upon the gorgeous purple, golden and crimson glory,—without bearing again in his mind the words of his mother. 'Yes my boy, heaven's doors are all about us."

And Jamie's wish was granted him. One night the shining light came in through the parted curtains, and Jamie went home with the day, and Jesus met him, for he loved him —Jesus, who long years before had gone down to the flood gates below to meet Jamie's mother—Jesus, who always watches and waits to hear the coming feet of those who seek the gates of heaven.—Tract Journal.

A thick-headed squire being worsted by the Rev. Sydney Smith in an argument, took his revenge by exclaiming; 'If I had a son who was an idiot, I would make him a parson.' Very probably,' said Sydney: 'but I see your father had a different opinion.'

Conjugal Infidelity—A Cruel Surprise

A rumor was current yesterday in the North Division, that not far from the center of the Sixteenth Ward, a once happy couple had been doomed to perpetual misery through the infidelity of the wife. The rumor, when first met with was energy soon developed the facts in very faint and determinate out a little the case, and enabled the querist to to ascertain the names and circumstances of the parties; the names we suppress out of respect to the injured tentiary by the Criminal Court at husband.

A few months ago a good looking, passable educated young gentleman secured a position in the Treasury Department at Washington, and went thither, but having heard much of the expensive means of living in that city of magnificent distances, he left his blooming wife, scarce one year since a maiden, to reside in Chicago while he went to toil among the greenbacks to earn the wherewithal to pay her board bill. He had loved her fondly, and could scarcely bear the thought of separation, but stern necessity compelled it, and he departed. The weeks rolled tardily by, and each one saw the dispatch and arrival of a letter breathing vows of eternal fidelity. At last—absence making the heart grow fonder—he could no longer stay, and, obtaining leave of absence, sped in the wake of the swift locomotive towards his home. He had not sent word of his coming, thinking to surprise his wife and thereby heighten his joy. He arrived late on Wednesday evening but did not hesitate to go home, because his wife had assured him in her last letter that she was still there and feeling as comfortable as she could be anywhere without him.

It was nearly 12 o'clock when the husband stumbled along Kinzie street, aided only by the uncertain light of the gaslamp which, in that district are few, and almost welcoming the familiar snow-flaks which then had just began to fall. He arrived at the door; all was dark, and he gave a rap. Soon he heard the well-known dulcet tones of his adored one singing out "Who's there?" He answered joyously, "It'—." He heard a faint shriek and a hurried whispering. Quick as thought the idea flashed accross his mind that something was wrong—for the intensities of jealous and love keep even pace—so exercising a husband's privilege, he burst open the door and rushed up stairs. There he saw what made his heart bleed; his wife en dishabible, and ditto an elderly gentleman whom he instantly recognized as a prominent South Water street merchant, and the very man to whom he had been grateful as the friend who secured him the office in Washington.

The denouement was fearfully uproarious, but we forbear an attempt at description; suffice it to say that no bones were broken. Yesterday morning the husband was seen entering the office of a lawyer in the city, but what passed betw. en them is a secret. It was hinted late last night that the injured husband had accepted a pecuniary balsam as a healing application to his outraged honor. If so, we have probably heard the last of it.

What Becomes of Dead Horses.

Some people will no doubt be astonished to learn that large fortunes have been made every year since the commencement of the war, out of dead horses of the Army of the Potomac. The popular idea is that when Rosinante yields up the ghost, he is buried in some field, or left to moulder into mother earth in the woods, somewhere. Not so.—He has made his last charge, and gnawed his last fence rail, but there is from $20, to $30 in the old fellow yet. A contract for the purchase of the dead horses in the Army of the Potomac, for the ensuing year, was let a few day ago, to the highest bidder at $1.76 per head, delivered at the factory of the contractor. Last year $60,000 was cleared on the contract, and this year is thought $100,000, can be made on it. The animals die at the rate of about fifty per day, at the lowest calculation. At the contractor's establishment they are thoroughly dissected. First the shoes are pulled off. They are usually worth fifty cents a set. Then the hoofs are cut off. They bring two dollars a set. Then comes the candle appendage worth kalf a dollar. Then the hide—I dont know what that sells for. Then the tallow, if it be possible to extract tallow from the army horse, which I think extremely doubtful, unless he die immediately after entering the service. And last; but not least, the shin bones are valuable, being convertible into a variety of articles that many believe to be composed of pure ivory, such as cane-heads, knife handles. When the contractor gets through with the 'late lamented' steed, there is hardly enough of him left to feed a bull-pup on.

Hereafter, kind reader, when you see a dead "hoss" don't turn up your nose at him, but regard him thoughtfully, as the foundation for a large fortune in a single year He may, individually, be a nuisance, but there is that within which passeth show—$100,000 a year.

WILLIES FAITH.—Willie V—was the only son of his parents. When very young his mother began to teach him about God and heaven, and his mind seemed to drink in all the sweet things she told him, just as the flowers receive into their bosoms the drops of dew that give them strength and beauty. Before he was three years old he would often sit gazing into the sky and would say:—

'Willies watching for the holy angels and waiting to hear them sing!'

The lesson his mother endeavored to impress most deeply upon his young heart was that of faith in God. Faith in him for all things whatsoever, and that for Jesus' sake he would bestow on him all necessary good.

When he was four years old a terrible shadow settled down upon him, and by the time Willie was seven, their home and everything was taken from them, and they were thrown upon the charity of friends. Soon Willie's clothes and boots began to wear out, but his mother was too poor to purchase new ones. On one occasion he came to her saying:

'Mother can't I have some new boots? My toes are all out of these. The snow gets in, and I am so cold!'

A tear filled his mother's eye, when she answered:—

'Soon Willie, I hope to give them to you.'

He waited patiently several days, until one morning as he stood at the window watching the boys play with their sleds, he sobbed:—

'Oh! mother, it is too hard! Can't I get some boots anywhere?'

'Yes Willie you can.'

'I can!' he eagerly exclaimed.—'Where? Where? Tell me quick!'

'Do you not know, my son?' replied his mother. 'Think now.'

Willie stood for a moment, as if in deep thought, and then with a smile looked up into his mother's face and said:—

'Oh, I know! God will give them to me, of course. Why didn't I think of that before? I'll go right off and ask Him.'

He walked out of the parlor into his mother's room, she quietly following him, and standing concealed from his view, she saw him kneel down and covering his face with his hands he prayed.—

'Oh, God! father drinks, mother has no money; my feet get cold and wet, I want some boots. Please send me a pair for Jesus, sake. Amen.'

This was all. He often repeated his pitiful little petition, and the best of all was, he expected an answer to his prayer.

'They'll come mother! he would often say encouragingly; 'They'll come, when God gets ready.

Within a week a lady who dearly loved the child, came to take him out walking. He hesitated for a few moments, but soon determined to go, and they started off. At length the lady noticed his stockings peeping out at the toes of his boots, when she exclaimed,—

'Why, Willie, look at your feet! they will freeze! Why didn't you put on a better pair?'

'These are all I have ma am.'

'All you have! But why don't you have a new pair?' she inquired.

'I will as soon as God sends them he confidently replied.

Tears filled the lady's eyes, and with a quivering lip, she led him into a shoe store near by, saying: 'There, child, select any pair you please.' The boots were soon selected, and a more happy, thankful boy never lived.

On his return he walked to the center of the room where his mother was sitting and pulling his pants up until you could see his fat knees above the tops, he said:—

'Look, mother! God has sent my boots! Mrs. Gray's money bought them, but God heard me ask for them and I suppose he told Mrs Gray to buy them for me.'

Then he stood with an earnest, solemn light in his eye, as though he were receiving a new baptism of faith from heaven, and then quietly added:

'We must always remember how near God is to us,' and kneeling at his mother's feet he said: 'Jesus, I thank you very much for my boots. Please make me a good boy, and take care of my mother. Amen.'

Willie is now fourteen years of age and a consistent member of the Church of Christ. In all things he trusts his Savior and every desire of his heart he carries directly to God, and patiently waits the answer, and it always comes.

Sunday School Journal.

Six years ago, it is stated, Gen. Grant occupied a little farm to the southwest of St. Louis, whence he was in the habit of cutting the wood, and drawing it to Carondolet and selling it in the market there. Many of his wood purchasers are now calling to mind that they had a cord of wood delivered in person by the great Gen. Grant. When he came into the wood market he was usually dressed in an old felt hat, with a blouse coat, and his pants tucked in the tops of his boots. This was his winters work. In the summer he turned a collector of debts—but for this he was not qualified. He did not possess the knack of making money. His habits of life were hardy, inexpensive, and simple. From such an humble beginning has sprung to the greatest soldier in America.

A Copperhead Rowdy Silenced

The loyal people of Oswego held a meeting a few evening since to assist in recruiting. Henry Fitzhugh presided, and made an eloquent address. A body of rowdies were present and attempted to interrupt the proceedings, but failed. During the address of Mr. Fitzhugh, the following scene occurred, as reported by the Times;

Rowdy—'Why didn't you leave your sons in the war?'

Mr. Fitzhugh—'They are there now, thank God.' [Great applause.]

Rowdy—'No they ain't.'

At this point Mr. Fitzhugh strode forward over the platform towards the interrogator, and in the most earnest and forcible language completely silenced his antagonist's battery. He showed how one of his sons had fought at Gaines' Mill, at Malvern Hill, South Mountain and Antietam; how he had fought again at Chancelorsville and Gettysburg, and his brother had fought on the Rapidan. 'There, sir,' said Mr. Fitzhugh, 'is my record, and that of my sons; now let me have your record, it you've got any!'

Thunders of applause showed how thoroughly Mr. Fitzhugh, had vindicated himself. This served as a quietus on the rowdy element of the meeting. They were awed into silence, and there were no further demonstrations made by this element during the meeting.

A HAPPY WOMAN.—What spectacle more pleasing does the world present than a happy woman contented in her sphere, ready at all times to benefit her little world by the magic of her touch? There are those who are thus happy because they cannot help it—no misfortunes dampen their sweet smiles, and they diffuse a cheerful glow around them as they pursue the even tenor of their way: They have the secret of contentment, whose value is above the philosophers stone: for without exchange of gold, which may buy some sorts of pleasure, they convert every thing they touch into joy. What their condition is makes no difference. They may be rich or poor, high or low, admired, or forsaken by the fickle world; but the sparkling fountain of happiness bubbles up in their hearts and makes them radiantly beautiful. Though they live in a log cabin, they make it shine with lustre which kings and queens may covet, and they make wealth a fountain of blessings to the children of poverty. Happy women are the highest types of humanity, and we cannot say how much we owe to them the progress of the race. Would there were enough to go round!

WOMAN'S LOVE FOR THE OLD FLAG—A letter from Chattanooga, after speaking of the erection of a lofty flag-staff on the peak of Lookout Mountain, from which now floats the Old Flag, says;

'I must tell you an affecting little scene that I witnessed when we first crossed Lookout, about the 9th of September. We were marching along at 'route step' with our colors furled in their black cases, when we perceived about a dozen of the fair sex in one of those everlasting southern porticos, watching us as we passed. We had got nearly by when one of the young ladies stepped out to the front, and said 'Boys, we want to see the old flag' Oh, such a shout as went up; banners soon unfurled, music struck up, the men took step, hats without number went into the air, and the hurrah lasted a good hour.'

A PUZZLED JUSTICE.—A man named Josh was brought before a country squire for stealing a hog, and three witnesses swore they saw him steal it. A wag having volunteered his counsel for Josh, knowing the scope of the squire's brain, arose and addressed him as follows:

'May it please your honor, I can establish this mans honesty beyond the shadow of a doubt, for I have twelve witnesses that say they did not see him steal it.'

The squire rested his head for a few moments, as if in deep thought, and with great dignity arose, and, brushing back his hair, said:

'If there are twelve who did not see him steal it, and only three who did, I discharge the prisoner.'

Acknowledgement.

We, the undersigned, officers and scholars of the Garden City Free Sunday School, would thankfully acknowledge through the "MANKATO UNION," the receipt of a fine Library of Books for our school, from Messrs Sargent & Dayton, and from the Agents of the American Tract Society No. 28 & 40, Cornhill, Boston. We have, for a long time, labored under a great inconvenience for the want of suitable books for our reading. Living, as we do, on the extreme frontier of Minnesota, where our little towns are just springing into life through the toils and labors of enterprising men and women, raised amid the comforts and luxuries of the East, but who, for the benefit of their children, have left their comfortable homes, and come West to settle; and though exposed to hardships and dangers from the wild Indians, yet have not forgotten to establish Sunday School, but often lack the means of supplying them with suitable books, as in our case since we organized our school, We would therefore, as a school, express our heartfelt gratitude to E. P. Evans, of this place, through whose kindness and intercession we have received the above named Library ; and above all to our Eastern friends for their generosity and kindness in the gift of such a library, which, though small, may be of inestimable value to us. And could the donors have seen our happy faces last Sunday as we first caught sight of those beautiful books, and heard an expression of gratitude, they would truly have felt that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." We accept of the present as a great blessing, and will read and strive to grow wiser and better. And we humbly pray that the rich blessing of our Heavenly Father, may rest upon our kind Eastern friends, and that we may at last meet them in the land of rest, the saints sweet home.

OVER fifty thousand dollars was paid out in this city to farmers last week for wheat and pork. That is a tolerable fair one week's work Prices have generally ruled high, thus giving the farmer a good profit on his labor and time.—La Crosse Democrat.

THE WRITING MATCH.

Garden City against Mankato.

For the last four months Mr. Shaw has been teaching Penmanship in Blue Earth and Faribault Counties, and has met with marked success.

During the last five weeks he has been engaged in teaching two terms in Garden City, and his scholars there have become very much interested in learning how to write well.

About two weeks ago some of our friends there wishnig to have a good time and a season of enjoyment all round, sent an invitation to the class in Mankato to meet with them at some given place and compare specimens of penmanship, according to Mr. Shaw's system.

The invitation was accepted, and the parties met in Mankato on Friday the 22d inst.

In the meantime, a sentence had been given out on which to practice, and the chalengers did not let the grass grow under their feet while perfecting themselves in this style of writing. In justice to the Mankato class we must say that, with but one or two exceptions, they did not practice at all. Early in the afternoon on the appointed day, the Garden City class came down, accompanied by thirty or forty of their citizens to see the fun, and help eat the oysters.'

In the evening City Hall was lighted and preparations made for the contestants to meet there and write the specimens to hand to the judges which consisted of E. P. Evans, of Garden City and John N. Hall, of Mankato. At about 8 o'clock the Hall was well filled with spectators, and the preparations being complete, A. D. Seward of Mankato, was appointed Chairman, and J. B. Skinner of Garden City, Secretary. Mr. Shaw was invited to take charge of the exercises during the period of writing , which was thirty minutes.

The utmost silence prevailed while the classes were writing. Not a sound was heard save the tearing of a piece of paper or the scratching of a pen: When the thirty minutes had expired, the specimens were handed in and numbered, and then given to the judges who repaired to Mr. Halls office and commenced their labors.

The room was then cleared of benches and desks, and an hour or two before supper profitably spent in chatting with friends, promenading, singing, and betting on the result of the trial. We heard of one individual who was ready to risk ten cents that Garden City would beat, but as that was all he had and times were hard he couldn't conscientiously, afford to bet any more. The bet was not taken, as he oversized the pile of every one present.

Supper was announced between 11 and 12 o'clock, and the entire company started for the Clifton, where "mine host" Flower had prepared a sumptuous feast of oysters, cold meats, cakes and pies; in fact, everything that an epicure could wish. When these were disposed of to the satisfaction of each one, the feast of reason and flow of soul came in the following order:—

The Garden City Writing School.—Composed of true and loyal friends.

Our Guests.—Let us make them happy, and allow no jealousies to mar the pleasures of the evening.

Mankato Writing School.

The Ladies.—The Nonpareil of life. With them the path of life is strewn with flowers,—without them a dreary waste.

Professor Shaw.—If he does nothing but write, he will never do wrong.

Our Host.—While some go for flowers of the field, and others prefer flowers in the garden, we go for Flower's hotel.

Professor Shaw Again.—Too full for utterance.

Remarks fitting for the occasion were made by speakers as they were called upon. We have not room to publish all that was said, but they tended much to cement the bonds of friendship between the two towns. After the classes and audience had returned to the Hall the report of the committee was read, which showed that Garden City was the victor, and had routed Mankato completely. Three cheers were then given by Mankato for Garden City, and Garden City returned the compliment and gave three and a tiger for Mankato. The best of feeling, prevailed, and every one danced around as though they had india rubber balls on their feet. The defeated party immediately challenged Garden City to another trial the particulars of which are published elsewhere.

It was now near one o'clock, and some of the friends went home, while others secured the services of musicians and danced until morning. Thus passed a pleasant evenings entertainment. May such things often occur. So mote it be.

Letter from Captain Thornton.

Through the kindness of a friend, we have been permitted to make the following extract, from a letter written by Capt. Thornton.

LA GRANGE, TENN., Jan. 11th, 1864.

"I promised when at home to write to you, and I have for some time been trying to get a chance to redeem that promise, although I have no news to write. Every thing has been quiet in a military way for the last week, but during that time we have had regular Minnesota January weather, and it would have been utterly impossible to have done anything in the military way even had the thing been tried. I think we are permanently located here for the winter, but then about six weeks will begin to bring spring. Gen. Sherman is now here, and I apprehend things will be got into shape to move as early in the spring as the nature of the case will admit. But in what direction I do not have the most remote idea. The division of which I am Quartermaster is composed of three brigades and is the 1st division of the 16th Army Corps. There is also attached to it three Batteries. In addition to my duties of Division Quartermaster, I am also the Post Quartermaster at this place, and this devolves on me the duty of supplying two Tennessee Regiments of A. D's. Another of the latter is being raised here which I have to clothe and furnish with their camp and garrison equipage, and their means of transportation. You can form some idea of the immense amount of material it takes to equip an army when I tell you that on yesterday I received the clothing camp and garrison equipage for this black regiment and it consists of one hundred and eighty-seven boxes and bales, and I have yet to furnish them with wagons ambulances and mules. When one sees the immense amount of material necessary for an army, he ceases to wonder at its slow movement, and only wonders that it moves at all. For with it must go provisions and ammunition for the army, and forage for the animals. All these are immense. I have for this Division alone twenty-nine six mule teams heavily loaded with ammunition which is never unloaded but is always ready to move on half an hours notice. I have besides about seventy-five six mule teams for the supply train, and each regiment has from six to eight teams, making in all the regiments near one hundred. Yet with all these we could not go into a country destitute of supplies and exist more than ten days. Were these things generally known our generals would not be blamed sometimes for things they are blamed for."

Letter from the Ninth Regiment.

JEFFERSON CITY MO., Jan. 19th, 1864.

MR. EDITOR.—I take the liberty to address you a few lines, to give you a little information of the proceedings in this place.

The Legislature is still in session. They are caucusing the Convention bill, and are at it night and day. They are all that holds this contemptible town together. When they came here the hotels and boarding houses raised the board to ten dollars per week, and I hear them say the Bill of Fare is Bean Soup.

On Thursday evening last, Lieut. J. B. Dodge, was married to Miss Sallie Brown, daughter of Brigadier General E. B. Brown, Commandant of the Central District. The ceremony took place at the Governor's Mansion which was brilliantly illuminated, and within its halls and saloons were assembled the wit, beauty, and fashion of the Capital. The brides toilet had been made, when through some inadvertence unaccountable on such occasions, the bridal dress caught fire, and, as with the flash of powder, enveloped the fair lady in flames. They were soon subdued without much damage. Miss Brown, though only sixteen, is blessed with a maturity of mind remarkable for that age. She gave no alarm, and no guest of the house knew anything of what had taken place. The pleasure of the evening was not shadowed, and the company, after a sumptous feast, dispersed in the "we sma hours," wishing the pair all the happiness and joy incident to their happy nuptials. The officers of the 9th Regt. were generally invited.

I see through the columns of your paper that you have noticed the promotion of Durkee and Thayer. I now have the pleasure to inform you that Sergeant Major, Ira S. Smith is appointed Adjutant, and J. W. Palmer, Captain, in the 3rd Missouri A. D. I understand there are several more applications. The 9th is pretty well represented. Captain Edgerton of the 10th is Colonel of the 3rd. The weather since the 1st inst, has been almost equal to the Minnesota winters. It has thawed but very little since that time. The squad of Companies C. and K. that were put under arrest for freeing ten negroes, were released a few days since. Co. C. was ordered back to this place. There are three Companies here now. K. at Lamine Bridge, G. and H. at St. Louis, and A. B. E. and I. at Rolla, in Brigadier General Davie's District. The health of the companies at this place is good. Our boys were comfortably fixed in their tents, and did not suffer during the cold weather. I saw two cutters while the sleighing lasted, and there were probably a half dozen "pungs,, [in Minnesota so called.] Five dollars per day was the price for the hire of a "pung."

SEMI-OCCASIONALLY.

Remark in the Senate on the arrest of Soldiers in the Ninth Regiment.

Our readers will remember that some weeks ago, by order of General Schofield, a number of the boys in Companies C. and K. 9th Regiment, were arrested by the military authorities of Missouri, for releasing some slaves who were being kidnapped by their master to be sold in St. Louis. Senator Wilkinson, believing the arrest to be illegal, unwarrantable and an insult to our brave Minnesota boys, introduced a resolution of inquiry in the Senate on the 11th inst, when the following remarks were made.

Mr. Wilkinson. I offer the following resolution, and ask for its present consideration:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, instructed to inform the Senate whether he has any official information in his Department relating to the arrest and imprisonment by military authorities in Missouri of a large number of the private soldiers belonging to the ninth Minnesota regiment; also as to the cause of their arrest and imprisonment, how many have been arrested, and how long they have been confined in prison.

The Senate, by unanimous consent proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. Wilkinson. Mr. President, some time in the month of September or October last, five regiments of Minnesota volunteers were sent into the State of Missouri. One of those regiments, the ninth Minnesota volunteers, was sent to and stationed at Jefferson City. A few days after they were encamped at that city, a negro came into the camp and told the private soldiers that he was a freeman, and that his master was a rebel who had gone into the service of the confederate government. He also stated to the soldiers that some men, by the permission of the commandant of that post, one General Brown, I believe, had the wife and children of this negro on board the cars, taking them South for sale. These soldiers having been recently sent down there from the pure atmosphere of Minnesota, thought that this was an outrage, and about forty of them, as I learn, started for the depot, found the train of cars standing there with the passengers all on board, and took the woman and children out of the hands of the traitors who were conveying them out of the State and delivered them over to their husband and father. This was probably eight weeks ago. Thereupon forty of these soldiers were arrested and put into prison, where they now remain as I understand. In regard to the facts I wish to read an extract from a letter that I have received from a member of that regiment.

'You have undoubtedly learned that under the Schofield regime about forty of our men, of companies C and K, have been in prison at this place for weeks past, for merely preventing an openly announced rebel from running his slaves to St. Louis for sale. While I cannot possibly under my present restraint of Army regulation, speak fully as I would wish in this particular, I can characterize the outrage of imprisoning these men as unjustifiable, and an act of military official baseness that certainly demands inquiry beyond the jurisdiction of the pro-slavery tyrants who have caused their incarceration.'

I received another letter from a member of this regiment a few days after it was stationed at Jefferson City, stating that one of the privates going fresh into the Army from our State was arrested, that a ball and chain were attached to his leg, and that he was compelled to drag them around the camp, for the offense of having hallooed for Jim Lane. I do not know that he knew much about Senator Lane; but my impression is that these things in the State of Missouri must stop. I for one am not willing that a private soldier shall be thus incarcerated and kept in prison and the men of that regiment, and indeed all our soldiers in that State be demoralized, to gratify the pro-slavery feelings of the officers in command in that State.

I wish further to know Mr. President, whether these things are done by the local military authorities of the State of Missouri, or whether they are done under the sanction of the authorities here in Washington. While we are devising all the means in our power to raise soldiers to recruit our armies, a power is found in the State of Missouri which is demoralizing our soldiers; for I say before the Senate to-day that these five thousand men from my State in Missouri cannot and will not make good soldiers if they are to be placed and kept under the control of such men as seem to be governing the military authorities in that State. This regiment will be utterly demoralized if these soldiers are not released from their confinement, and I venture to say that it is as good a regiment as is to be found anywhere in our Army It is true that its members have an idea somehow that a negro whose master is in rebellion is a free man; it is true that they thought also that his wife and children belong to him and perhaps they may have committed some little act of insubordination in not obeying the command of General Brown, who I have learned, was on the train of cars from which these colored people were taken; but one thing is very certain, that if we want these men to fight they must be treated a little differently. I have offered this resolution for the purpose of ascertaining whether the Department knows anything about the arrest and imprisonment of these men, and I shall insist, as the representative of the State of Minnesota, that our soldiers shall be treated differently in the future than they have been in the past in the State of Missouri. I will never consent that they shall be made tools of the slavery-loving tyrants of Missouri.

Mr. Lane, of Kansas. Mr. President, the Secretary of War will have no difficulty, if he takes the proper steps in ascertaining that scores if not hundreds of soldiers have been confined in the guard house of Missouri for no other offense than hallooing for Jim Lane. It is currently reported that two soldiers at Chilicothe, in that State were bayoneted for no other offense than that.

Mr. Sumner. By whose orders?

Mr. Lane, of Kansas. I will endeavour to answer before I close. On that occasion it is reported there were five soldiers arrested for that offense Four of them were forced into jail; two of them were bayoneted while they were being forced into jail; the fifth escaped. The company to which these five men belonged was stationed some five or six miles from Chilicothe. The fifth man went over from that town, told the story to the company, and the company en masse started for Chilicothe, released the four men who were incarcerated, and compelled the commander who had incarcerated them to halloo for Jim Lane. What became of him, whether he died of the loyal dose or not I am not able to say; but the rumor is as I have stated.

I desire to say to the Senator from Minnesota that the matter is under investigation, as I understand, by a committee of the Legislature of the State of Missouri, now in session. I am very thankful to him that he has called the attention of the War Department to the subject. In answer to the Senator from Massachusetts, I will say that I think it will be found that the Gamble regime is responsible ; the officers appointed by the Governor of the State are the criminals. The soldiers are unconditional Union men, anti-slavery all of them, with scarcely an exception. The officers appointed by the Gamble regime are, I think I can say, almost without exception pro-slavery men. It has been the practice—and if I am mistaken the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Brown] can correct me—that when a man in the military service of the State of Missouri is found unconditionally loyal and anti-slavery in his feelings, that has been a sufficient cause for his removal, and he has been immediately removed.

Mr. Henderson. I certainly desire that the resolution shall be passed, as it is a resolution of an inquiry. It is perhaps very appropriate that the inquiry should be made. I will state, however, that I know nothing of the circumstances alluded to in the resolution in reference to the arrest of these men by General Brown. I know General Brown personally ; I have known him a great while ; but I am very well satisfied that there must be some mistake in the representation that General Brown is a pro slavery man. I have not so regarded him He has been in command at Jefferson City for some time. It is true that I am not familiar with his history. I know simply that he fought with a great deal of gallantry at Springfield, and lost his arm there, and that he has behaved with great gallantry whenever he has been called upon to do his share in the defense of the country. That is as much as I know of him. I know nothing of the circumstances alluded to in the resolution. It is a resolution of inquiry ; and if the soldiers have been improperly treated there it is but just that the country should know it; but I cannot for a moment think there is any correctness in the inference drawn here that General Brown has mistreated the soldiers from Minnesota in consequence of any pro-slavery feeling on his part. It may however be the case. I should like to have the facts and therefore I shall vote for the resolution.

Mr. Brown. Mr. President, I am very glad that some step has been taken to initiate an inquiry into the military management of affairs in the State of Missouri. I venture the assertion that no State in its military affairs has been so disastrously managed as my own. I do not propose at the present time, but shall take some other occasion, to enter into the discussion of that management in its details, and to suggest what I believe to be the remedy. I desire simply to state now that I have received communications from loyal members of the Legislature at Jefferson City, setting forth the facts in regard to the case which has been alluded to by the Senator from Minnesota and they confirm the statement which he has made. They go on further to say, what I can very well understand, that it is only part and parcel of the programme which has prevailed there for more than a year past. I can also indorse the statement made by the Senator from Kansas in regard to the warfare which has been made in that State by the military authority upon the free-soilers of Missouri. It is true, sir, every letter of it is true. I can go further than that, sir, and say that it is done not alone by the Gamble dynasty and the appointees of the Governor of Missouri, but it is sanctioned, endorsed, and urged on by the military commander of the United States in that Department!

Mr. Howard. Name him.

Mr. Brown. Schofield. I trust sir, the resolution will pass, and I trust we shall have an opportunity to take a full view of the acts of oppression and of hostility to the loyal freedom-loving sentiment in that State, and that we shall be able before long to take such actions as will preclude its continuance there.

The resolution was agreed to.

REGISTERS NOTICE.—Those having deeds remaining in the Registers office should not fail to call for them. The vault is not considered fire proof, or safe, and the deeds are becoming much worn and defaced by constant handling. There are also many old deeds that have not been put on record. In some cases taxes have not been paid and others the Registers fees have not been paid, as required by law, in advance.

B F. Smith, Register

The Winona mails are again behind time owing to bad roads

It should be borne in mind that those who do not pay their personal property tax by the first of February, will have five per cent added.

The resolution for debate before the Young Mens Lyceum next Friday evening is "Resolved, That the love of money has more influence on man than the love of Woman."

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—Ephriam Cole has sold lot 8 and a part of lot 7, in block 13, in Mankato to M. T. C. Flower for $550.

A few days ago Capt McKusic was called to Stillwater by the sudden illness of his daughter. We learn that she is now better, but that since his return another daughter has been taken dangerously sick.

SPECIAL TERM.—Judge Branson will hold a special term of court for this district, at the Clerk's Office in Mankato commencing on the 6th day of February.

Charlie Heinze has taken into partnership with him his brother Theodore. They will do business after this under the firm of Charlie Heinze & Brother.

ORDERED AWAY.—All the recruiting officers in the State have been ordered to join their regiments. Capt Clark, Lieut Taylor and Corporal Maxfield, will start for Fort Snelling on Monday. Persons wishing to send packages to their friends will now have an opportunity.

NEW PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY.—Mrs. Levan and the Misses Gail, of Garden City, will open Photograph Rooms in a few days, in the building formerly occupied by John D. Jones. We have examined some of their specimens, and should judge them excellent artists. They solicit patronage from the public.

CHOUGHS AND COLDS.—Those who are suffering from choughs, colds, hoarseness, Sore throat, &c., should try 'Browns Bronchial Troches,' a simple remedy which has relieved thousands, and which is in almost every case effectual.

PROMOTED.—Sergeant A. P. Conly of the sixth Regiment, stationed at Fort Ridgely, has been promoted to the Lieutenantcy made vacant by the death of J. E. Baldwin.

For the last four or five days we have had a regular January thaw. The sleighing has nearly all disappeared, and farmers bring in wheat on wheels.

DESERVED PROMOTION.—We are much pleased to learn of the promotion of our friend Ira S. Smith, Sargeant Major of the 9th Regiment. He is now Adjutant of the 3rd Missouri Regiment of A. D. Adjutant Smith has always been one of the most loyal and hard working men in the service, and this advancement is therefore truly gratifying.

IMPROVEMENT THE ORDER OF THE DAY.—The public are always pleased to note improvements in the arts and sciences; in fact in every thing that tends to benefit mankind. But we never saw surprise so truly depicted on the face of a community as when they learned that Lewis & Frisbie were giving away their drugs and medicines, books and stationary for——cash. It's a fact.

Randall is determined that all who buy clothing from his establishment shall not be humbugged. He is selling overcoats at ruinously low prices, and says people will need them next month, as we are going to have some more stinging weather.

WAR HAS ITS TRIUMPHS, SO HAS PEACE.—While the armies of the Union were winning brilliant victories the Chemical Saleratus was enjoying a series of uninterrupted triumphs over the popular aversion to all saleratus, because the common kinds in use were found to be destructive. Science had demonstrated that the Chemical Saleratus was not only pure in its nature, but wonderful in its effects, producing better bread and biscuits than any other kinds of saleratus or soda known.

THE CANNON DIVORCE CASE.—Judge Branson, before whom this case was tried, filed his decision with the Clerk last Saturday. It covers twenty-one pages of legal cap, and is, in every sense, a wise and just decision, and gives a clear view of the case. The community has been much interested as to the result, and we take pleasure in saying, that in this instance the confidence reposed in the Judge has not been misplaced. We have not room for the findings, but the summing up is, that the plaintiff is not entitled to a divorce, and the relief prayed for is denied.

Wickersham & Kilgore, present their card in this week's Union, and invite customers to call and examine their stock of drugs books and stationary. They have a very large and fresh stock of medicines, which they are confident, will enable them to supply the wants of their customers. they are both practical druggists, and people can rely on having their prescriptions carefully prepared.

A NEW VAULT FOR THE COUNTY.—We notice that the County Board has appointed the Register of Deeds, and Commissioner Hanna, a committee to receive bids for building a new vault in which to place the county records. We commend them for this action, and so will every property holder in the county. The present vault is not considered fireproof or safe, and the expenditure of five hundred, or even a thousand dollars in building a new one, will prove to be economy in the end. Should the building take fire the books would be just as safe lying upon the tables and counters as in the vault. The loss of the delinquent tax books would be more than twenty thousand dollars, and the loss of the county records irrepairable. Our citizens throughout the county have been led to believe that the vault was perfectly safe, but should they wake up some fine morning and find the title to their property all destroyed, they might possibly change their opinion. It is proposed to place the new vault outside of, and in the rear of the building, and have it the same width. It is to have two apartments, one for the Register, and one for the Auditor, with a door for each. We trust the County Board will look this matter in the right light, and we feel assured that they will be sustained by all property holders.

A Challenge to Garden City.

MANKATO, Jan. 25th 1864.

We hereby challenge Garden City to a trial of Penmanship, to be conducted upon the Spencerian System, to come off, at such time and place, as Garden City may designate, with the following specifications:

1st. The number of competitors, shall be fifteen on a side, to be chosen in and out of the Schools.

2nd. There shall be three judges to decide upon the specimens of penmanship, none of whom shall be chosen from Blue Earth County. Garden City to chose one of the judges, and Mankato, one, and those two judges, jointly to chose the third.

3rd. The sentence to be written, shall be given out on the evening of trial, by the third judge, and shall not be disclosed to any one until the time of writing.

4th. Time for practice thirty minutes.

5th The judges shall decide according to the Spencerian system of writing.

6th The party adjudged to be victorious shall partake of a gratuitous supper, at the expense of the other party.

By Order.

Capt. A. J. Edgerton of the 10th regiment, is Colonel of the 3rd Missouri A, D's. and J. W. Palmer, of the 9th is Captain.

By request of the School Directors, Messrs. Freeman and Willard visited our public schools last Friday afternoon. They found them in a flourishing condition. In the department under the control of Misses McKenney and Parsons, the good order and discipline of the scholars was the more marked from the fact of the uncomfortable rooms in which they are held. All of the pupils showed considerable improvement in scholarship, and the scholars were well pleased with their teachers. Our present Board of Directors have been very efficient in looking after the interests of the school, and have sought to interest the community in them. Under the present system the schools are progressing as well as can be expected.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY

OF THE

STAR PAPER OF AMERICA

JANUARY 1, 1864.

The New York Mercury

FOR THE

COMING YEAR.

After more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success. The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster roll of the Literary Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry: but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvelous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old World, will be placed the chef-d'œuvres of the most eminent story writers of the New.

Miss A. E Braddon, Authoress of 'Aurora Floyd,' 'Lady Audell's Secret,' 'John Marchmont's Legacy,' etc, etc, who has suddenly risen, like a star of the first magnitude in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply the New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the Star Weekly of merica, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr J. H Robinson, Margret Blount, Ned Buntline, Arthur M Grainger, Grace Gardner, Felix O C Darley, Miss M. E Braddon, Cousin May Carleton, W O. Eaton, George Martial, Julia S Ingraham, Edward Willett, Mary Chief, George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati under various noms de plume, contribute to its colums, while its pictorial illustrations from the inimitable pencil of Felix O C Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has giving the coup de grace to so many pretentious publication, and half destroyed those that still survive, has added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart stirring short stories its millitary historietts, its machless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its genial wit and humer, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigerous editorials, the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to all classes of society. Containg, as it does Forty Columns of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carlton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for the New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedene, and the result will unquestionably be that the most effective story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the New Year's Number of the great Representative Weekly of the Western World.

The New York mercury is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $2 a year; three copies for $5; six copies for $9 eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter up of the club Six month's subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post Office, county and State. We take the notes of solvent banks at par. Payment must invariably be made in advance.

MME DEMOREST'S, MIRROR OF FASHIONS.—The special object and aim in the publication of this magazine, is to present Judicious, Reliable, and Practical Information in all matters pertaining to ladies' and children's dress.

Information of the greatest possible importance to Milliners, Dress-makers, and every lady who wish to know the prevailing modes in New York and Paris.

To all enterprising ladies and industrious mothers, we shall endeavor to furnish many useful and practical suggestions in relation to the proper combination of colors, choosing materials, including cutting and making dresses, and children's clothes which of necessity must occupy a much larger portion of a woman's time, when no reliable authority is at hand to be consulted—suggestions which cannot fail to prove a source of much gratification, economy, personal refinement, and home comfort.

Do not fail to bear in mind that we furnish, in value, during the year, more than $3 in full-size patterns alone; while in plates, engravings, reliable information on fashions, more than can be secured in any or all the other fashion magazines put together, and yet the yearly subscriptions being $1 with the extra fifty cents worth of full size patterns sent as a premium, makes the yearly subscription to cost really only fifty cents, independent of the Carte de Visite. Do not fail to subscribe for the Mirror, if you wish to secure it promptly as it is sent in advance to subscribers.

THE

Singer Sewing Machines.

Our LETTER A FAMILY SEWING MACHINE is fast gaining a world-wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the cheapest and best and most beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering Gauging, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch, which is the best stich known. Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance, how to use the letter A Family Sewing Machine, Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work—While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes,

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment and condition of a certain mortgage, executed by Aaron N. Dukes and Mary A. Dukes, of Blue Earth County and State of Minnesota, to Peter Berry, of Ramsey County and State aforesaid, which mortgage bears date on the 18th day of July, 1862, and was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Blue Earth, on the 5th day of November, 1862, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Book "E" of mortgages, on page 283, and which mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of $987.76 with ten per cent per annum interest thereon, from the date of said mortgage, in one year from the date thereof, as per the note of said Aaron N. Dukes, due July 18, 1863 with ten per cent. interest until paid. Accompanying said mortgage—in and by which mortgage said mortgagers bargained, sold and mortgaged unto said Peter Berry, his heirs and assigns, all that tract and parcel of land described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

"Forty-four (44) feet wide on the south side of lot (6) six in block five, (5) in the town of Mankato, according to the plat made by Simeon P Folsom in 1852, and by E. D. Bruner in 1857, and running back the same width the full length of said lot Or otherwise described as the south two-thirds (⅔) of said lot six (6) being forty-four (44) feet, and running the full length of said lot, all in the town of Mankato, county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota,"

Which mortgage contains a power of sale duly recorded with said mortgage.

And, whereas, said mortgagors at the date of executing said mortgage, for a valuable consideration paid them, did, under their hands and seals, waived in their right of redemption of said lands and premises, pursuant to an act of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, entitled "An Act to amend 'an act to regulate foreclosure of real estate, approved, March 10th, 1860,' approved March 8th, 1861," which waver is in writing and is duly executed and acknowledged by said mortgagers, and was duly recorded with said mortgage. And whereas claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon said mortgage and note, and unpaid, the sum of $1,113.32, principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt now remaining unpaid, and secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that, by virtue of a power of sale which is contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the above described lots and parcels of land, with the tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonging, by the sheriff of Blue Earth County, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Sheriff's office in Mankato, in said county of Blue Earth, on Saturday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1863, at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to pay the amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage and the expenses of said sale.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the travelling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore. Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

MANHOOD;

How Lost! How Restored!

Just published, in a sealed envelope. Price, Six Cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary emissions, Sexual debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Abuse, &c. By Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on the receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

THESE Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood: and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

PLEASE CALL AND EXAMINE, OR SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

HOSTETTER'S

CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and bowels, Cures, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex arising from Boodlly Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes. Nothing that is not wholesome genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetters Stomach Bitters. This popular preparations contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants. It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, Hostetters Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard. In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehensions of an attack, escape the scourge, and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of Hostetter's Bitters. The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic and hence it works wonders in cases of Dispepsia and in less confirmed forms of indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless aperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs. Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous attacks, Lowness of spirits and fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes. The agony of billious colic, is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally restoring to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented. As a general tonic, Hostetter's Bitters produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and debility and decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-inforce and re-establish them. Last but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements, present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day. No family medicine has been so universally, and it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as Hostetter's Bitters. Prepared by Hostetter and Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and storekeepers everywhere. 23

HELMBOLD'S.

Genuine Preparations.

COMPOUND Fluid extract Buchu, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Watery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, of abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of power, Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing, Weak Nerves, Trembling, Horror of Disease, Wakefulness, Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back, Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face Palled Countenance These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the Patient may expire

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases" "Insanity and consumption." Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess the records of the insane asylums. And melancholly deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which Helmbold's Extract Buchu invariably dces,

A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females—Females—Females—In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Paintulness, or suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion Habits of Dissipation, or in the decline or change of life. Take no more Balsam, Mercurey, or unpleasant medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases Helmbold's Extract Buchu and improved Rose wash cures secret diseases in all their stages, at little expense. Little or no change in diet, no inconvenience, and no exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and inflamation, so frequent in the class of diseases, and expelling all poisonous diseases and wornout matter. Thousands upon thousands who have been the victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the poison has, by the use of powerful astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage. Use Helmbold's Extract Buch for all affections and diseases of the urinary organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating and no matter of how long standing. Diseases of these organs requires the aid of diuretic Helmbold's extract Buchu is the great diuretic, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is recommended. Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

Price $1,00 per bottle, or six for $5 00.—Delivered to any Address, securely packed from observation. Describe symptoms in all communications, cures guaranteed! Advice gratis! address letters for information to H B Helmbold, Chemist, 104 South Tenth-st., bel. Chestnut, Phil.

Minnesota to her Veteran Soldiers.

BY WILL LIVINGSTONE.

Welcome to your homes again!
Ye who bore yourselves like men,
When the battle's iron rain
Swept in fury o'er the plain,
And the many-throated roar
Of the cannons shook the shore,
Ye who faced the danger then,
Welcome to your homes again!

Welcome! ye are heroes, all,
Who obeyed your country's call
When the Southron rebel foe
Aimed at her a mortal blow,
Boldly rushed into the fight,
'Neath our stars protecting light,—
Ye who saved our country then,
Welcome to your homes again!

And ye who, with purpose high,
Now have sworn to win or die,
Who have sworn to rest no more,
While Rebellion taints our shore,
And the flag of Treason waves
O'er our slaughtered soldiers's graves,
Noblest heroes! Truest men!
Welcome to your homes again!

And when proudly you return,
Where the waiting camp-fires burn,
And the sentry to and fro
Paces tirelessly and slow,
May the God who watched o'er you,
Still protect you, guide you through
To the Day of Peace, and then,
Welcome to your homes again!

PARSON SURELY'S EXPERIMENT.

BY AUSTIN D. BURDICK.

The small parish at Fallowdale had been for sometime without a pastor. The members were nearly all farmers, and they had not much money to bestow upon the support of a clergyman; yet they were willing to pay for anything that could promise them any due return of good. In course of time, it happened that the Rev. Abraham Surely visited Fallowdale, and as a Sabbath passed during his sojourn, he held a meeting in a small church. The people were pleased with his preaching, and some of them proposed inviting him to remain with them, and take charge of their spiritual welfare.

Upon the merits of this proposition, there was a long discussion. Parson Surely had signified his willingness to take a permanent residence at Fallowdale, but the members of the parish could not so readily agree to hire him.

'I don't see the use of hiring a parson,' said Mr. Sharp, an old farmer of the place. 'He can do us no good. If we've got any money to spare, we'd better lay it up for something else. A parson can't learn me anything.'

To this it was answered, that stated religious meetings would be of great benefit to the younger people, and also a source of real social good to all.

'I don't know 'bout that,' said Sharp, after he had heard the arguments against him. Sharp was one of the wealthiest men in the parish, and consequently one of the most influential. 'I've hearn tell,' he continued, 'of a parson that could pray for rain, and have it come at any time. Now if we could hit upon such a parson as that, I would go in for hiring him.'

This opened a new idea to the unsophisticated minds of Fallowdale. The farmers often suffered from long droughts, and after arguing awhile longer, they agreed to hire Parson Surley upon the condition that he should give them rain whenever they wished for it, and on the other hand, that that he would also give them fair weather when required. Deacons Smith and Townsend were deputised to make this arrangement known to the parson, and the people remained in church while their messengers went upon their errand.

When the deacons returned, Mr. Surely accompanied them. He smiled as he entered the church, and with a graceful bow, saluted the people there assembled.

'Well, my friends,' he said, as he ascended the platform in front of the desk, 'I have heard your request to me, and, strange as it may appear, I have come to accept your propsal; but I can do it only on one condition, and that is, that your request for a change of weather must be unanimous.'

This appeared very reasonable since every member of the parish had a deep interest in the farming business, and ere long it was arranged that Mr. Surely should become the pastor of Fallowdale, and that he should give the people rain whenever they asked for it.

When Mr. Surely returned to his lodgings, his wife was utterly astounded upon learning the nature of the contract her husband had entered into; but the pastor only smiled, and bade her wait for the result.

"But you know you cannot make it rain,' persisted Mrs. Surely; 'and you know, too, that the farmers here will be wanting rain very often when there is none for them. You will be disgraced.'

'I will learn them a lesson,' quietly returned the pastor.

'Aye—that you cannot be as good as your word; and when you have learned it to them, they will turn you off.'

'We shall see,' was Mr. Surely's reply, as he took up a book and commenced reading.

This was a signal for his wife to desist from further conversation on the subject, and she at once obeyed.

Time flew on, and at length the hot days of summer were at hand. For three weeks it had not rained, and the young corn was beginning to curl up beneath the effects of the drought. In this extremity the people bethought themselves of the promise of their pastor, and some of them hastened to his dwelling.

'Certainly,' returned Mr. Surely. 'If you will call a meeting of the members of the parish, I will be with you this evening.'

With this the applicants were perfectly satisfied, and forthwith they hastened to call the flock together.

'Now you'll see the hour of your disgrace,' said Mrs. Surley, after the visitors had gone. 'O I am very sorry that you ever undertook to deceive them so.'

'I did not deceive them.'

'Yes, you surely did.'

'We shall see,' responded the pastor.

'So we shall see,' added the lady.

The hour for the meeting came around, and Parson Surely met his people at the church. They were all there—most of them anxious, and the remainder curious.

'Now, my friends,' said the pastor, arising upon the platform, 'I have come to hear your request. What is it?'

'Ay—rain—rain,' repeated half a dozen voices.

'Very well. Now when will you have it?'

'This very night. Let it rain all night long,' said Sharp, to which several others immediately assented.

'No, no, not to night,' cried Deacon Smith. 'I have six or seven tons of well made hay in the field and I would not have it wet for anything.'

'So I have hay out,' added Mr. Peck. 'We wont have it rain tonight.'

'Then let it be to morrow.'

'It will take me all day to-morrow to get my hay in,' said Smith.

Thus the objections came up for the two succeeding days, and at length, by way of compromise Mr. Sharp proposed that they should have it rain in just four days. 'For' said he, 'by that time, all the hay which is now out can be got in, and we need not cut any—'

'Stop, stop,' uttered Mrs. Sharp, pulling her worthy husband smartly by the sleeve. 'That is the day we set to go to Snowhill. It musn't rain then!'

This was law for Mr. Sharp, so he proposed that the rain should come in one week, and then resumed his seat. But this would not do. Many of the people would not have it put off so long. 'If we can't have rain before then, we'd better not have it at all,' said they.

In short, the meeting resulted in just no conclusion at all, for the good people found it utterly impossible to agree upon a time when it should rain.

'Until you can make up your minds upon this point,' said the pastor, as he was about leaving the church, 'we must all trust in the Lord.' And after this the people followed him from the place.

Both Deacon Smith and Mr. Peck got their hay safely in, but on the very day Mr. Sharp and his wife were to have started for Snowhill, it began to rain in right good earnest. Sharp lost his visit, but he met the disappointment with good grace, for his crops smiled at the rain.

Ere another month had rolled by, another meeting was called for a petition for rain, but this time the result was the same as before. Many of the people had their muck to dig, and rain would prevent them. Some wanted the rain immediately—some in one, some in two, and some in three days, while others wanted it put off longer. So Mr. Surely had not yet occasion to call for rain.

One year rolled by, and up to that time the people of Fallowdale had never once been able to agree upon the exact kind of weather they would have, and the result was, they began to open their eyes to the fact that this world would be a strange place, if its inhabitants could govern it. While they had been longing for a power they did not possess, they had not seen its absurdity, but now that they had, in good faith, tried to apply that power, under the belief that it was theirs, they saw clearly that they were getting beyond their sphere. They saw that Nature's laws were safer in the hands of Nature's God than in the hands of Nature's children.

On the last Sabbath in the first year of Mr. Surely's settlement, at Fallowdale, he offered to give up his connexion with the parish; but the people would not listen to it. They had become attached to him and the meetings, and they wished him to stay.

'But I can no longer rest under our former contract in regard to the weather,' said the pastor.

'Nor do we wish you to,' returned Sharp. 'Only preach to us and teach us and our children how to live, and help us to be social and happy.'

'And,' added the pastor, while a tear of pride stood in his eye, as he looked for an instant into the face of his now happy wife, 'All things above our proper sphere we will leave with God, for 'He doeth all things well.'

Jenny Wade the Heroine of Gettysburg.

The country has already heard of John Burns, the hero of Gettysburg—of how the old man sallied forth, a host within himself, 'to fight on his own hook,' and how he fell wounded after having delivered many shots from his trusty rifle into the faces and hearts of his country's foes. John Burns' name is already recorded among the immortal, to live there with American valor and patriotism, have an admirer and an emulator. But there was a heroine as well as a hero of Gettysburg. The old hero, Burns, still lives—the heroine, sweet Jenny Wade perished in the din of that awful fray and she now sleeps where the flowers once bloomed, and the perfume-ladened air waited lovingly over Cemetry Hill. Before the battle and while the national hosts were awaiting the assault of the traitor foe Jenny Wade was busily engaged in baking bread for the national troops. She occupied a house in range of the guns of both armies, and the rebels had sternly ordered her to leave the premises but this she as sternly refused to do. While she was busily engaged in her patriotic work a minie ball pierced her pure heart, and she fell a holy sacrifice in her country's cause. Almost at the same time a rebel officer of high rank fell near where Jenny Wade had perished. The rebels at once proceeded to prepare a coffin for their fallen leader, but about the time that was finished the surging of the conflict had changed the position of the armies, and Jenny Wade's body was placed in the coffin designed for her country's enemy. The incidents of the heroine and the hero of Gettysburg are beautifully touching, noble, and sublime. Old John Burns was the only man of Gettysburg participated in the struggle to save the North invasion, while innocent Jenny Wade was the only sacrifice which the people of that locality had to offer on the shrine of their country. Let a monument be erected on the ground which covers her, before which the pilgrims to the holy tombs of the heroes of Gettysburg can bow and bless the memory of Jenny Wade. If the people of Gettysburg are not able alone to raise the funds to pay for a suitable monument for Jenny Wade, let them send a committee to Harrisburg, and our little boys and girls will asist in soliciting subscriptions for this holy purpose.

Before the summer sunshine again kiss the grave of Jenny Wade; before the summer birds once more carol where she sleeps in glory; before the flowers again deck the plain made famous by gallant deeds, let a monument rise to greet the skies in tokens of virtue, daring, and nobleness.—Harrisburg Telegrabh.

The obliging disposition of the Yankee stage-driver, is aptly illustrated in the following bit of satire:

As Mr. J———, the driver, was proceeding from Boston, not long since, a woman called him to take a bedsted on the top without uncording it. He told her he would oblige her the next time he came along, but he could not then, as he had engaged to take on a windmill a little ways ahead; and as he had a large cradle on the top at the time, he was afraid he should not have room. Proceeding a little further he was requested by a woman to wait till she had finished her washing and ironing. He told her he often had to wait for the women to do their ironing, but he could not stand washing and ironing both!

FROM GRANT'S DEPARTMENT.

Summary Justice for Guerilla Murderers.

HEADQUARTERS DEP'T OF THE CUMBERLAND,
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 6, 1864.
General Orders, No. 6.]

It having been reported to these headquarters that, between seven and eight o'clock on the evening of the 23d ultimo, within one and a half miles of the village of Mulberry, Lincoln county, Tenn. a wagon which had become detached from a foraging train belonging to the United States was attacked by guerillas, and the officer in command of the foraging party, 1st Lieut. Porter, company A. 27th Indiana volunters, the teamster, wagon-master, and two other soldiers who had been sent to load the train, [the latter four unarmed,] captured. They were immediately mounted and hurried off, the guerillas avoiding the roads until their party was halted about one o'clock in the morning, on the bank of Elk River, where the rebels stated they were going into camp for the night. The hands of the prisoners were tied behind them, and they were robbed of everything of value about their persons. They were next drawn up in line, about five paces in front of their captors, and one of the latter, who acted as leader, commanded, 'ready,' and the whole party immediately fired upon them. One of the prisoners was shot through the head and killed instantly, and three were wounded. Lieut. Porter was not hit. He immediately ran was followed and fired upon three times by one of the party, and finding he was about to be overtaken, threw himself over a precipice into the river, and succeeding in getting his hands loose swam to the opposite side, and although pursued to that side and several times fired upon, he, after twenty-four hours of extraordinary exertions and great exposure, reached a house, whence he was taken to Tallahoma, where he now lies in a critical situation. The others, after being shot, were immediately thrown into the river. Thus the murder of three men, Newell E. Orcutt, 9th Independent Battery Ohio Volunteer Artillery, John W. Brought company H. 22d Wisconsin Volunteers, and George W. Jacobs, company D, 22d Wisconsin Volunteers, was accomplished by shooting and drowning. The fourth, James W. Foley, 9th Independent Battery Ohio Volunteer artillery, is now lying in hospital, having escaped by getting his hands free while in the water.

For the atrocious and cold blooded murders, equaling in savage ferocity any ever committed by the most barbarous tribes on the continent, committed by rebel citizens of Tennessee, it is ordered that the property of all other rebel citizens living within a circuit of ten miles of the place where these men were captured be assessed, each in his due proportion, according to his wealth to make up the sum of thirty thousand dollars, to be divided among the families who were dependent upon the murdered men for support, as follows:

Ten thousand dollars to be paid to the widow of John W. Drought, of North Cape, Racine county, Wisconsin for the support of herself and two children.

Ten thousand dollars to be paid the widow of George W. Jacobs, of Delevan, Walworth county, Wisconsin, for the support of herself and one child.

Ten thousand dollars to be divided between the aged mother and sister of Newell E. Orcutt, of Burton, Geauga county Ohio.

Should the person assessed fail within one week after the notice shall have been served upon them, to pay in the amount of their tax in money sufficient of the personal property shall be seized and sold at public auction to make up the amount.

Major Gen. H. W. Slocum, United States Volunteers, commanding 12th Army Corps, is charged with the execution of this order.

The men who committed these murders if caught will be summarily executed and any person executing them will be held guiltlss, and will receive the protection of this army, and all persons suspected of having aided abetted or harbored these guerillas will be immediately arrested by military commission;

By command of Maj. Gen. Thomas.

Gail Hamilton thus discribes a woman on a rainy day. 'See how she is forced to concentrate all the energies of mind and body on herself and her casing. One delicate hand clings desperately to the unwieldy umbrella; the other is ceaselessly struggling to keep a firm hold of the multitudinous draperies; and if book basket, or bundle claim a share of her attention, her case is pitiable indeed. Down goes one fold upon the wet flagstone, detected only by an ominous flapping against the ankles when the garment has become saturated—a loosened hold of the umbrella at which it takes advantage, and immediately sways imminent over the gutter—a convulsive and random clutch at the petticoats. The umbrella righ en, a sudden gust of wind threatens to bear it away and one hand not being sufficient to detain it, the other involuntarily comes to the rescue—sweep go the draperies down on the pavement; then an others clutch another adjustment—forward! march! and so on, to the dreary, draggled end.'

Soldiers' Wives.

Fanny Fern never wrote two paragraphs which contained more touching truth than those which follow.

What an immense amount of heroism among this class passes unnoticed, or is taken as a matter of course; not only in this most righteous war we are waging, but in those of all past time. For the soldier has his comrades about him shoulder to shoulder; he has praise if he do well he has honorable mention and pitying tears if he falls nobly striving. But, alas, for the soldiers wife? Even an officer's wife, who has sympathizing friends, who has comforts and many of the luxuries of life, whose children's future is provided for if their father falls, what hours of dreadful suspense and agony must she pass, even in these favorable circumstances? How hard for her. But for the wife of the poor soldier, who, in giving her husband to her country has given everything, who knows not whether the meal she and her little ones are eating may not be the last for many a desolate day;—who has no friend to say, 'well done' as the lagging weeks of suspense creep on and she stands brave at her post, keeping want and starvation from the door; imagination busy among the heaps of dead and wounded or traversing the wretched prison dens and shuddering at the though of their demoniac keepers; keeping down her sobs as her little daughter trustfully offers nightly prayers 'for dear papa to come home' or when her little son, just old enough to read, traces slowly the long list of killed and wounded, 'to see if father's name is there;' shrouding her eyes from the possible future of her children, should her health give out under the pressure and want and anxiety; no friend to turn to when her hand is palsied with labor, no waving banners, nor martial music, nor one procession to chronicle her valorous deeds, none but God and her own brave heart to witness her noble unaided struggle; when I think of these solitary women scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land my heart warms towards them, and I would fain hold them up in their silent struggle, for all the world to admire.

When the history of this war shall be writen [and that cannot be now] let the historian, what else soever he may forget, forget not to chronicle this sublime valor of the hearth-stone, all over this struggling land.

A GOOD 'UN.—We heard that a young man a stranger who hails from the rural districts, visited this city a few days since in pursuit of work. On arriving at Middlesex street depot he accosted the first he met with: 'I say friend can you tell me where I can get a job?' 'Yes,' replied he, 'I konw of a first rate chance one where you can get $400 and $13 a month,' In ecstacy the young man immediately replied, 'By golly, you don't say so do you? Where is the place?' The gentlemen directed him to the church corner of Central and Merimac streets, and inquire for Capt. Weymouth, and he could learn all the particulars. So the young man started down Middlesex street at the rate of 2:40 with his coat tail flying in the air bound not to miss this fine opportunity. Arriving at the church he inquired for the captain and wished to know if he had a job for him 'Certainly, sir,' replied the Captain, 'a good one.' 'How long a time do you want to hire me for?' 'Three years.' 'By gracious, how much do you pay?' 'Four hundred dollars down and $13 a month.' The young man could not stand this any longer so he inquired 'what is it you want me to do?' 'O,' replied the Captain shoulder a musket and fight for your country.' Then came the reply. I'll do it,' Down went his name upon the roll, and no doubt he will make a fine soldier.—Lowell Citizen.

TIMELY.—An exchange has the following, which we commend to everybody:

The danger from fire increases as the cold weather comes on. An ounce in timely precaution against negligence is worth a pound of cure—or words to that effect—as the saying goes. An investigation into the causes of the numerous conflagration shows 'how great a matter a little fire kindleth,' and should be a sufficient warning against carelessness. A shovel full of ashes in a wooden vessel, a foul chimney, a broken stove the neglect to place brick or zinc under a stove, or a few matches left exposed, may be the means of destruction of a building or a block. In these days, when a roaring fire in a grate is a comfort, it would be exceedingly disagreeable to stand in the street in the middle of the night en dishabille to see your domicile and household goods converted into ashes.

A Genuine Topsy.

A lady who has had long experience as a hospital attendant in the South-west writes:

People have often laughingly wondered if "Topsy" was not a creature of Mrs Stowe's prolific fancy. Could they have enjoyed a brief season in Corinth, I think they would scarcely have questioned the truthfulness of the character. Topsies might be found here by the hundred.

I had one in my room, a bright, quiet little creature, with a tiny round face as black as the ace of spades. I dressed her up and kept her to do little errands for me, while the chambermaids in the house found her as much a source of amusement as usefulness. She would dance, sing, and act quite as comically as Topsy ever did.

"Please give me a bandage for this, Mrs. S——," he said laughingly, his tones at the same time full of vexation. "That Nell is a perfect little imp! See what she has done for me!"

"How? Why your hand looks full of little pricks, as if from teeth."

"Pins, you mean! I declare it's too rich. She's a little smart one, you may rest assured. It happened this way; we boys love to tease her, and often get her into the store down stairs to hear her make droll remarks. I got into the habit of tapping her on the head, pretending to be vexed, just to see her roll up her eyes at me in her most deprecating way. Her wool is thick, and I guess I tapped her pretty hard sometimes, relying upon its softness to protect her.

"Well, the little imp, what does she do but stick about forty pins along under the hair through the edge of the turban, the points out. They formed a circle around her droll head, and just now I tapped her on the side of the head so hard as to get a dozen right through my hand. The smart vexed me, and I tapped the other side, then the top—you see the result."

By this time I had finished binding up the lacerated hand, and indulged in a convulsive burst of merriment at his expense. He went away laughing, and a few moments later, when Nell came in, I examined her head, finding at least half an ounce of pins deposited in the curly locks crimped up tightly over her head.

She stood demurely, with her hands folded, during the examination, and in answer to my question as to why she did it, said gravely:

"Why, Miss, he was allus spattin' o' me."

How to Make a Foot-Muff.

Those who take long rides in winter, are often obliged to restore to artificial means to keep their feet warm—hence hot bricks, heated blocks of wood and jugs filled with hot water are variously used. The foot-muff is a great improvement on all these, It may be made in different ways, one of the cheapest and most simple of which is as follows; Let the tinman make a square box, about one foot square and two inches thick, so as to hold water. A screw, turned by a button, is inserted into one of the narrow sides—the screw-hole should be large enough to admit a funnel. The box should be perfectly water-tight, the screw-hole being the only place for the admission and egress of the water. If a suitable screw cannot be procured, sodder in a short tin tube about an inch long to receive a cork, which is to be tightly pressed in. This box when filled with hot water, which may be done in a few seconds, will retain heat a long time; but its efficiency may be greatly increased by encasing it with the muff. The box itself may be first covered with a piece of coarse carpeting, and then a sheep-skin, tanned with the wool on, sewed on the upper large flat side of the box, somewhat in the form of a board shoe, with the wool inwards, and large enough to receive both feet. The more expensive ones are covered with furs instead of sheep skin; and if the skin extends around the whole box the heat of the water will retain a longer time. A well made muff of this kind, filled with hot water and placed in the bottom of a sleigh, will continue warm for half a day.—Country Gentleman.

A good anecdote is told of a Federal officer who had been largely engaged in cotton speculations. Falling sick, and becoming half delirious from fever, the Chaplain, fearing he might die was urging him to repentance and a preparation for Heaven. 'Dear General' 'you will perhaps receive your marching orders soon, and you should have your armor on, ready to obey the order.' Turning over with a sigh, the General responded: 'I am always ready to act when the orders come, but how much cotton can I get there?'

The rebels have given up the idea of aggressive war, and will act only on the defensive.

THE DRAFT.

President Lincoln has issued a call for two hundred thousand men, to which every loyal man in the country will say amen. The Government is determined to close out this great struggle the coming spring, and is making such provisions as will effectually accomplish it. And we trust the return of spring will find our army fully equiped, and able to overwhelm and crush out any force that the rebels can bing against it.

We publish below, this last call of the President :

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, Jan. 29, 1864.

It is hereby ordered that a draft for five hundred thousand (500,000) men to serve for three years or during the war be made on the tenth (10th) day of March next, for the military service of the United States, crediting and deducting therefrom so many as may have been enlisted or drafted into the service prior to the 1st day of March and not heretofore credited.

(Signed) ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

EXPLANATORY NOTE OF COL. FRY,

WAR DEPARTMENT,
PROVOST GENERALS OFFICE,
Febuary 1, 1864.

To Major A. D. Nelson:

The President's order of this date for a draft on the 10th of March, for 500,000 men after deducting all who may be raised prior to March 1st and not heretofore credited, is equivalent to a call for 200,000 men in addition to the 300,000 called for October 17.

(Signed) JAMES B. FRY, P. M. G.

"It will be remembered that in October a call for three hundred thousand men was made. This number has been about half filled by volunteering and re-enlistments. The call now made for 500,000 is interpreted by gentlemen acquainted with military affairs to include the above 300,000, being in effect, an additional call for 200,000. The volunteering is supposed to furnish an average of twenty thousand per day. The order of the President makes a credit or deduction of so many who have enlisted or been drafted prior to March 1st, at which time the $400 premium expires. When these arrangements are completed the total in the army will be half a million.

According to our figures but few of the towns in the county will be liable to draft. Mankato, West Mankato, and Winnebago Agency have thirty men to their credit, and can stand a draft of 250,000 and yet be clear. It will fall heaviest on Danville, unless the work of enlistment is actively carried on.

Volunteers will be received until the 1st of March, giving us twenty-two days in which to fill the quota of the county. The Press says the number to be drafted in the State after all credits are given is thirty-eight hundred, and that the draft will take place on the 10th of March.

Let every man go to work, and labor faithfully in procuring enlistments. There is no fear of our armies being too large. The more men the quicker will the work be done.

Literary Notices.

The Continental for February is a most excellent number. Its pages are filled with productions from the pens of able writers, and one which especially attracts the eye of every reader is written by Hon. F. P. Stanton, entitled "The Treasury report and Mr. Secretary Chase." The February number contains another installment of "Was he Successful." Single copies, per year, $3,00. John F. Trow, publisher, New York.

The Atlantic, for February, as regular as ever, has been received. Among the many articles of interest we notice "Genius," "My Brother and I" "A Half Life and Half a Life," and part second of "House and Home Papers." All of these are worthy of a careful perusal, and we advise our readers who may wish to subscribe for a monthly journal of real merit to take the Atlantic. It is published at New York by Ticknor & Fields at $3,00, per year.

The February number of Harper is before us, and is a very entertaining number. The first article in this book is "Simon Kenton," and is of thrilling interest. "Monomoy," "Four days at Gettysburg," and other papers are worthy of perusal. The editor's easy chair is particularly spicy, in fact every department of this monthly is well sustained, making it the best magazine published. Harper & Brothers, New York, publishers.

In the proceedings of our State Legislature, we notice the following, relative to this county :

H. F. 41, authorizing school district No. 1, of Blue Earth County, to isue bonds not exceeding $10,000, to raise money to build a school house.

Mr. Wiswell offered an additional section authorizing district No. 16, of the same county, to issue bonds not exceeding 1,600 for the same purpose, which was adopted, and the bill as amended was passed, and the title amended.

INDIAN NEWS.—A correspondent of the Press gives the details of the capture of two of the principle leaders of the Sioux outbreak, Little Six and Medicine Bottle. It was accomplished by Mr. McKenzie, formerly of Hutchinson, through the assistance of some friends, Mr. McKenzie invited them to visit him, and then got them drunk and administered chloriform. They are now safe at the Pembina Stockades.

Railroad Sale.

On the 7th inst., the Kenosha Rockford & Rock Island, Railroad, seventy three miles in length and extending from Kenosha, Wisconsin to Rockford, Illinois was sold by its trustee to A. C. Coventry, Esq., of this city for $250,000. This sale is understood to be made for the benefit of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Co., who will at once take possession and operate the road.

This Kenosha road has been a valuable feeder to the Lake shore road, and to Milwaukee, and offered the only opportunity by which Milwaukee could reach behind the business of Chicago and repay the Northwestern for its favor of the same character.

Thus another of the links, by which the Chicago & North-western Company, is foreclosing upon the business of Milwaukee, is secured. Whether the result is to be attributed to the want of funds, the want of enterprise, or the want of management of our neighbor down the Lake, is now immaterial, the fact, remains, that the area from which she derives her business is step by step being narrowed.—Chicago Real Estate Record.

A SHORT PRAYER.—The Rev. Mr. Shine, chaplain of the House of Representatives in the Iowa Legislature, on the opening of the recent session, prayed thus :

"Bless Thou the young and growing State of Iowa, her Senators and Representatives, the Governor and State officers. Give us a sound currency, pure water, and undefiled religion—for Christ's sake. Amen."

The Ladies North-Western Fair.

The Ladies Sanitary Fair, of Chicago, has been doing a noble work in providing for wounded and convalesing soldiers More than eighty thousand dollars has been raised, and expended in making the soldiers comfortable, and the question has been asked "how has this large sum been expended?" The President of the Society, in a recent circular, thus answers the question ;

The great difficulty and labor of obtaining accurate and complete lists of the donations to the Fair, added to the fact that the sales of articles on hand at its close, are hardly yet ended, has prevented the history of the Fair from being published as early as was anticipated. Its main feature of interest to the public is, that nearly $80,000 in money has been announced as its result. We feel that it is due to those who so liberally sustained it, that they should know something about the disposition of this magnificent sum. Eighty thousand dollars seems a large sum ; but amounts are large or small, in proportion to the uses to which they are to be applied.

The Sanitary Commission has 75,000 sick, wounded and convalesing soldiers, to provide for, perhaps a larger number in the western hospitals. In order to do this, a continual stream of relief must go down. As may be seen $80,000 is little more than an average of $1,00 to each man. Edibles and clothing are extremely high. The main articles of purchase, are, condensed milk, the sick soldiers' nectar, which costs $3,50 per dozen, for small one pound boxes. Crushed sugar $36,00 per barrel. Tea, 50 cents per pound. Crackers, five cents per pound. Condensed beef, 50 cents per pound. Codfish, 6¼ cents per pound. Dried fruit, from 8 to 30 cents per pound. Sour krout, 11 per barrel. Pickles, 4 per dozen bottles. Butter, 21 cents per pound. Onions, 1,75 per bushel Potatoes, 75 cents per bushel. The average cost of shirts and drawers, 1, 50 each; Comforts, 3,50 each We will no longer specify prices, but state what has been done by the N. W. Commission, since the Fair, November 1st—one week before the close of the Fair. They have sent to the Western Hospitals, 7,450 boxes and barrels including 8,000 pounds codfish, 11,595 pounds butter, 317 pounds tea, 5,000 bushels onions, 5,000 bushels potatoes, 500 pounds condensed beef, 347 barrels and 80 boxes pickles, 3,620 shirts, 1,683 pairs drawers, 8,000 pounds crushed sugar, 2, 688 pounds condensed milk, 783 comforts. Average them at 8, they will amount to 59,600. When we tell you that a box of 150 shirts is not very large, 100 sheets not very large, you will think we do not overate the estimate. A lady whose whole soul is full of benevolence, said to us yesterday, that she was constantly asked 'why don't the Commission buy 1,000 comforts and send the soldiers? What has been done with the Fair money? This statement is to answer the question, no doubt honestly asked. The best answer to that question, is they cannot afford it, for the reasons above given. With such enormous outlays, and the requisitions increasing, from inclemency of the weather below, which stood January 2nd, at Corinth, 10 degrees below zero, and at Bridgeport, so low that several soldiers were frozen to death, they dare not empty their treasury faster than they are now doing to furnish all the material to make those comforts, if our noble-hearted ladies will make them, as they are doing at the rate of fifty per day. Gen. Grant, noble man that he is, gave the Commission five bales of contraband cotton, to make into comforts for soldiers. It would be unwise, as well as impossible, for the Commision to purchase ready-made comforts, with this assistance towards making them, in their hands. When it is stated that nearly 1,000 worth of material has been purchased by the Commission within a few days, to supply the ladies here at the War Committe Room, it may be conceived that it will take thousands more, to furnish material for 1,000 comforts which the ladies propose to make. The Commission is always glad to give satisfactory explanation, and happy to have this opportunity, to show their friends in the city and country, that large as the receipts of the Fair were, they must soon be exhausted by the demand ; and to urge them, not to think their work done, but to continue sending supplies and money when they are shown how tremendous is the demand from those whose heroism and sufferings, no tongue can relate, nor pen decribe.

So our country friends, we would say, pray be up and doing. Don't feel satisfied with the results of the Sanitary Fair, as the winter's work. The Commission is now, for the first time, in a condition to send all the boys need, and ask for, Don't force us to stop. Not one of you thinks they get to much The supply must be continued, if their wants are as fully met. Women of the Prairies, you who have inaugurated the great system, of Sanitary Fairs, the joy of the soldiers, the pride of the West, the astonishment of the world, falter not nor grow weary. The boys are blessing you, the country looking to you to be steadfast, as you are magnificent and energetic in your benevolence. Let every farmer, whose barns are filled with plenty, send to the Commission what he can spare. Let every Aid Society buckle on the armor anew. Let our young people have profitable good times, for the brave sufferers. Let every family that can spare a comfort, send it here. Let us all keep on working, as the boys keep on suffering and fighting. Then will the Commission continue to meet all demands.

We call attention to the report of the County Commissioners in another column.

John F. Loring, of Mankato, has been appointed Deputy Sheriff,

Uncle Tom offers a rare bargain in the sale of his building and stock, on Front Street, opposite City Hall,

This county will have to raise nearly a full company in order to avoid the draft. Let every town see to it that her quota is full.

FINE FLOUR.—Finch & Thurston have another batch of flour—a choice lot—which they sell at the lowest cash rates.

Rev. J. O. Rich, Presiding Elder of this District, preached two excellent sermons to a crowded house on Sunday morning and evening last

At the old military headquarters Kyte has choice brands of family flour for sale at $2,50 per sack. The sack not included.

The weather has moderated considerably during the past week, and what little sleighing we had is now gone. In the country it is somewhat better.

A large amount of wheat has been brought into town during the week. The ruling price is 73 cents. Mr. Harrington has in store nearly 20,000 bushels purchased this winter.

The firm of E. H. Smith & Co., has been dissolved, and Mr. Smith and J. R. Tinkcom have formed a copartnership, and will hereafter, do a general banking business.

FOR MEDICAL PURPOSES.—Messrs Lewis & Frisbie call attention to the fact that they keep on hand a choice lot of pure liquors designed especially for medical purposes.

Randall pays no attention to the advance of prices in the Eastern markets, but continues to sell his stock of clothing at his usual low rates. He has recently received a fresh supply of business coats.

We are the authorized agent for the St Paul Daily and Weekly Press. Any one wishing to transact business with that office can do so by calling on us. We furnish the daily by the week or quarter.

The officers and men of the second Regiment will rendezvous at Winona instead of Fort Snelling so as to leave for the South on the 1st day of March.

The name of Wm. W Kimball has been sent to the Senate for Confirmation as Assistant Quartermaster.

The American Agriculturist for February is at hand. We know of no agricultural journal in the country that has a larger circulation, or is more generally liked. The club which we commenced some time ago is not yet full, and there is still a chance for others to join at eighty cents each.

THE DEATH OF A. H. GROFF.—The many friends and acquaintances of A. H. Groff will be pained to hear that after a short illness, he died at his residence in Minneapolis Jan. 29th. Mr. Groff was the Marshal of the Sioux Commission, and was with them during their session at this place last summer. By his uniform kindness and his gentlemanly deportment he pleased all with whom he came in contact in his official or private capacity. There are many here who will long remember him as a genial, warm-hearted man and friend. He was much esteemed and beloved by his townsmen, and as a mark of respect to a deceased brother, the Masonic fraternity of Minneapolis and St. Paul attended his funeral, and he was buried with the appropriate Masonic honors given to a Knight Templar, of which order he was a worthy Knight.

Hons. M. S. Wilkinson and Wm. Windom will accept our thanks for valuable public documents recently received.

Mrs. Oglesby requests us to say that she has secured the services of Mrs Elizabeth Perry, an experienced milliner, who will take charge of that department of her business hereafter. She guarantees all work.

APPORTIONMENT OF SCHOOL MONEY.—David Blakely, Secretary of State, and ex officio Superintendent of Public Instruction has made the annual apportionment of School monies for the counties in this State. In the list we notice that there are 1,750 persons in Blue Earth county between the ages of five and twenty-one, and the amount of School money apportioned is $787,50. In Faribault county the number of persons between five and twenty-one years, is 872. School money apportioned $392,40.

PERSONAL.—Capt. Geo. A. Clark of Co. H. 4th Minnesota, and Capt. McKusick returned as far as St. Peter, Wednesday evening, and will probably arrive in town to-day, Thursday.

A number of the officers of the noble Second have arrived in town during the week. Among them we notice Captain J. R. Beatty, First Lieut. Holmes of Co. H, and Lieut. S. D. Parsons, Quartermaster of the Second, now acting as brigade quartermaster. Captain Beatty is now acting Adjutant of the Brigade in the 14th army corps.

Billings P. Sibley, Milton G. Hanna, and others of the boys, of Company H, with whom we are not acquainted have also arrived in town. They have met a warm and hearty welcome on every hand. These brave men, both officers and privates have endured great hardships and suffering, fought many battles, during their absence of over two years, and we needed no other evidence to convince us of their patriotism, but their re-enlisting for another term of service is indisputable proof of their love of country. They are heroes, every one of them, and have already done enough to entitle them to the gratitude, love and respect of their countrymen for all time. We trust our citizens will not be wanting in attention to them during their brief stay in the State, and that some fitting demonstration will be made before their return, showing them how well we remember the true and tried heroes of our country.

Capt Jerome Dane of Co E. 9th Regiment, returned home Tuesday evening last on recruiting service. He has been visiting his family in Tivoli ever since, and we have not been able to see him.

NEW ULM MATTERS.—From one of our townsmen, who was in New Ulm last week, we learn that town is beginning to recover considerably from the effects of the Sioux outbreak. Already one of the saw mills has been rebuilt and is in full operation, and cannot supply all the cash demands for lumber. Over 40,000 feet of lumber have been sent from this mill this winter to Fort Ridgely, A flour mill is also in operation.

Real estate has changed hands considerably the past few months in the county, and the Register of Deeds has plenty to do in the way of recording instruments.

Considerable emigration to the county is expected in the spring, and if Congress, at this session, appropriates for them the amount which the Sioux Commissioners awarded them last fall, New Ulm will very probably be rebuilt in the spring.

The two persons found frozen to death on the Cottonwood during the cold snap about the 12th of last month, were taken to New Ulm and buried there. On the person of one of them was found papers showing that he had disposed of over $50,000 of property just before leaving the old country, the most of which it was his intention to have invested in Brown County,

A German paper has been recently established called the New Ulm Post the first number of which will be published about a week hence.

Occasionally during the winter, the inhabitants have had some amateur theatricals, and a good time generally.

The merchants seem to be doing well, and the community at large are very confident that good times are in store for them

AN OFFICER IN THE ARMY WRITES: 'At inspection I noticed that a large portion of the mens knapsacks contained a box of Troches, being generally used by them for colds, etc." 'Browns Bronchial Troches' should be in every soldiers knapsack or pocket to be used upon the first appearance of a cold or cough.

SUCCESS UPON MERIT.—If there is an instance upon the records of our country where an article of American manufacture has made its way to universal favor solely upon its own merits and without extraneous aid, it is that of Chemical Saleratus. It has only to be sold in one place, and it is demanded in another; and so it has gone on increasing in favor until the products of the extensive Chemical works of D. B. De Land & Co., at Fairport, Monroe County, N. Y., are now immense.

This article is made only at these works by a process known only to the proprietors, and is better for all purposes than soda. Try it.

Condition of the South

From the Raleigh Daily Progress.

Peace alone can prevent starvation It is folly to talk to us about there being enough supplies in the country. Such is not the fact, and those who adhere to such a proposition, will find out, when it is too late, that they have been mistaken. The Confederate money is bad enough, we know; but the dearth of provisions in the market is not caused by a want of confidence in the currency, but because the producers have nothing to bring in. Men who can command means are gathering up gold, silver, bank notes and treasury notes, with which to buy pork in adjoining counties, and be thankful to get it upon the terms and for the hard substance offered.

We tell the people and the authorities that the present condition of things cannot and will not last. The masses of the honest hard-working people have been deceived and misled long enough, and they will not suffer and endure always. Peace they want and peace they will have, if not upon such terms as the leaders who have betrayed them desire upon such terms as they themselves shall prescribe. The rich may house meat and bread, but we tell them it will not remain with them unless the poor can be provided for. The muscle of the country will not starve while there is bread in the land.

There is not another man to spare from the farms or other industrial pursuits of the country, and a further draft on this class will be fraught with the most disastrous consequences. If more men are wanted in the line, let the thousands of able-bodied men already in the pay of the Government be placed there, and the drones and non producers who loaf in home t toil by their constant swagger and who have been shielded by the corruptions of the office-holders since the war commenced be gathered up and compelled to fight for that liberty for which they ever profess to be so ready to pour out their precious blood.

Congress, we fear, is disposed to run into extremes, especially those members whose States are largely or entirely in the hands of the enemy. If this war is to be fought out to the last man and the last dollar, if we are really battling for independence, we must husband our resources. We must have men to fight, and we must have something to feed them on. Beware of destroying the seed corn.

From the Richmond Examiner.

There is but one mode by which five millions of people, with arms in their hands and superior courage, can be subdued; and that is by the failure of subsistence. The essential question of all military operations is that of commissariat. Without bread and meat, no army can be kept in the field. Upon a supply of rations depends not merely the question of an army's existence, but also the equally important question of discipline. The best order and discipline of the most perfectly organized army are lost in a fortnight under the failure of rations. From invincible veterans, the best soldiers degenerate into howling wolves.

In another article of the same date the Examiner says: We regret to learn that there is very little prospect of there being any considerable crops made this year in several of the fertile counties in the south western part of Virginia. The largest farmers in that portion of the State—Campbell; Roanoke, Charlotte, Bedford &c.—have pretty generally furnished substitutes and devoted their time to the production of large quantities of meat, breadstuffs and forage. In view of the late enactment rendering them again liable to military duty and the consequent impossibility of attending to their plantations, these men have, as a rule, hired out their field hands to railroad or manufacturing companies, or sent them to the cities and towns to be there employed. No corn crop will consequently be made, and but comparatively a small extent of land has been put in to oats or wheat. What little will be raised this year in these productive regions will principally be under the superintendence of the few old or disabled men, unfit for military service, and will hardly suffice for home consumption, leaving nothing for the support of the army, which has heretofore drawn abundant supplies of provisions and forage from these counties,

In regard to the meat supplies of the Confederacy the Inquirer of the 13th inst. has the following:

We learn that the commissary agents in different parts of the South are taking a census of stock, not as a demand for all pork in excess of 150 pounds to each head in the family but rather to ascertain the probable quantity of pork which can be secured for the present use of the army and to form an estimate from the number of stock hogs and cattle of the future resources of the country The delivery of hogs on foot is now demanded by the government agents. The loss of our beef-raising territory west of the Mississippi, by the fall of Vicksburg and Port Hudson, reduced the supply of this article, and vigorous measures are needed to keep the troops in meat. The offal of the hogs which is fit for food, such as the heads, backbones, and spareribs goes to supply the sufficiency, and shipped to the soldiers; such of the refuse from the slaughter houses as cannot be used by the troops is necessary for soap grease, soap being indispensable to the cleanliness, and hence to the health, comfort and self respect of soldiers, the lard is used as a substitute for bacon, and no portion of the hog is lost to the service. The slaughtering is not being done by contract but is under the charge of an officer of the government especially assigned to this duty. Great economy is necessary in the use of our meat supplies.

From the Raleigh Standard.

We are now reaping the bitter fruits of 'Peacable Secession,' in forcing from their once happy and peaceful homes into the army all from eighteen to forty-five years of age, to be driven to the slaughter like oxen to the shambles. And to fill up the thinned ranks, the present Congress now has before it the monstrous proposition to conscript all from sixteen to fifty-five years of age, and make them subject to military law, which the Richmond Examiner boldly denounces as nothing less than an attempt to make Mr. Davis dictator.

Is it not an outrage on every principle of free government, for men of desperate fortunes, professing to represent other States on whose soil they dare not set their foot to make and enforce odious and oppressive laws on our people! Are we prepared to submit to this? If not, then let every man arouse himself before it is too late, and denounce these attempts to betray our liberties under a military despotism Let every man that can speak or write denounce these outrages on civil liberties until their denunciations are heard and heeded in Congress.

But if Congress in a spirit of desperation should act the tyrant, and impose such crushing burdens on the people of North Carolina as are unsupportable, then they should demand of the Governor that he forthwith convene the Legislature in order to call a State convention of the sovereign people to take into consideration what is best to be done to relieve our people from the grievous burdens imposed upon them.

The same paper, in commenting on Mr. Brown's proposition to impress into the army every man capable of bearing arms says: 'We tell Mr. Brown, and those who think with him, once for all, that if the desperate revolutionary measures which he advocates shall be attempted to be carried out—if the civil law is to be trampled under foot by the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, and every able-bodied man placed in the army from sixteen to sixty five—if no man is to have a hearing before a State judge as to the right of the enrolling officer to seize him, and if the rights of the State are to be ignored and swept away by the mere creature of the State, the common government, the people of North Carolina will take their own affairs into their own hands, and will proceed, in convention assembled to vindicate their liberties and privileges They will not submit to the destruction of their rights, personal and civil in this or any other war. We say what we know to be so. A vast majority of our people are restless and excited on account of the threatened encroachments upon their liberties by the Congress at Richmond, and we must respectfully and earnestly warn the members of that body not to kindle a flame which no effort can extinguish.'

The Macon, Ga., Telegraph comments upon this measure with considerable bitterness because it leaves no one to till the soil and casts the whole power of the Government into the hands of Jeff. Davis. The Mobile Register says: 'In addition to two hundred thousand stragglers, it is demanded that nine-tenths of the producers be put in the field and women children and dotards be left alone to clothe and feed the army. In other words we want everybody to go into the army already naked hungry and ill-equipped and nobody to support them Again as to the size of armies Is it the number of men or the handling of them that wins battles? But we are now called upon to believe that by mobs of raw recruits half starved and poorly equiped we are to do next spring what veterans have not been able to do after three years of hard and repeated trials. What we want is the genius to conceive and the courage to dare—not unwieldy hordes and awkward squads with nobody at home to support them."

DIED.

In Byron, Fond Du Lac Co. Wis. January 20th 1864, of consumption Mrs. AMELIA J., wife of F. F. PARSONS, and daughter of Riley and Mary Shepard, aged 27 years.

Her illness was long and painful, but she suffered patiently, trusting in God, whom she had served for many years, and died in the triumphs of a living faith, loved by all who knew her. The husband has lost a faithful wife, the parents an affectionate daughter, and the Church a devoted Christian.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY
OF THE
STAR PAPER OF AMERICA
JANUARY 1, 1864.
The New York Mercury
FOR THE COMING YEAR.

After more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literary Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry: but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvelous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old World, will be placed the cheif d'œuvres of the most eminent story-writers of the New,

Miss A. E Braddon, Authoress of 'Aurora Floyd,' 'Lady Audell's Secret,' 'John Marchmont's Legacy,' etc, etc,' who has suddenly risen, like a star of the first magnitude in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply the New York mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the Star Weekly of merica, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H. Robinson, Margret Blount Ned Buntline, Arthur M. Grainger, Grace Gardner, Felix O. C. Darley, Miss M. E Baraldon, Cousin May Carleton W. O. Eaton George Martial, Julia S. Ingraham, Edward Willett, Mary Chief, George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various noms de plume, contribute to its columns, while its pictorial illustrations from the inimitable pencil of Felix O C. Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has giving the coup de grace to so many pretentious publication, and half destroyed those that still survive, has added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart stirring short stories, its military historietts, its machless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its genial wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigerous editorials, the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to all classes of sociey. Containg, as it does Forty Columns of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carlton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for the New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be that the most effective story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the New Year's Number of the great Representative Weekly of the Western World.

The New York mercury is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $2 a year; three copies for $5; six copies for $9 eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club Six month's subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post Office, county and State. We take the notes of all solvent banks at par, Payment must invariably be made in advance.

MME. DEMOREST'S, MIRROR OF FASHIONS.—The special object and aim in the publication of this magazine, is to present Judicious, Reliable, and Practical Information in all matters pertaining to ladies' and children's dress.

Information of the greatest possible importance to Milliners, Dress-makers, and every lady who wish to know the prevailing modes in New York and Paris.

To all enterprising ladies and industrious mothers, we shall endeavor to furnish many useful and practical suggestions in relation to the proper combination of colors, choosing materials, including cutting and making dresses, and children's clothes which of necessity must occupy a much larger portion of a woman's time, when no reliable authority is at hand to be consulted—suggestions which cannot fail to prove a source of much gratification, economy, personal refinement, and home comfort.

Do not fail to bear in mind that we furnish, in value, during the year, more than $3 in full-size patterns alone; while in plates, engravings, reliable information on fashions, more than can be secured in any or all the other fashion magazines put together, and yet the yearly subscriptions being $1 with the extra fifty cents worth of full size patterns sent as a premium, makes the yearly subscription to cost really only fifty cents, independent of the Carte de Visite. Do not fail to subscribe for the Mirror, if you wish to secure it promptly as it is sent in advance to subscribers.

THE

Singer Sewing Machines.

Our LETTER A FAMILY SEWING MACHINE is fast gaining a world wide reputation. It is beyond doubt the cheapest and best and most beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Guaging, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable, and most durable, and most certain in action at all rates of speed. It makes the interlock-stitch, which is the best stitch known. Any one of the most ordinary capacity can see at a glance, how to use the letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work.—While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest woods, are finished in the simplest and chastest manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family sewing as our Manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

CLIFTON HOUSE,

Mankato, Minnesota.

THE proprietor would announce to the traveling public that his house is now completed and furnished throughout in the best style and he is now prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their patronage. From long experience in the hotel business in eastern cities he flatters himself that he understands the wants of the traveling public and will spare no pains to make the Clifton an agreeable stopping place. All who may be visiting Mankato, either for business or pleasure, especially those from the surrounding counties are invited to call and satisfy themselves. Attached to the premises are stables not excelled in the State either for capacity or convenience. The proprietor thankful for the very liberal patronage bestowed upon his house, would say to all stopping at the Clifton you will meet the same cordial and welcome reception as heretofore Farmers sustain the Clifton House and by so doing promote your own interest. A word to the wise is sufficient.

FINKLE & LYON'S

SEWING MACHINES.

These Machines make the lock stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and are better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of Machaine whatever!!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

PLEASE CALL AND EXAMINE, OR SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

Just published in a sealed envelope. Price 6cts

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhea, induced by Self Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By Rob. J. Culverwell, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequence of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

HOSTETTER'S

CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, Cures, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes. Nothing that is not wholesome genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetters Stomach Bitters. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants. It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, Hostetters Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard. In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehensions of an attack, escape the scourge, and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health, within a few days by the use of Hostetter's Bitters. The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic and hence it works wonders in cases of Dyspepsia and in less confirmed forms of Indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless aperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs: Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous attacks, Lowness of spirits and fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes. The agony of bilious colic, is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally restoring to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented. As a general tonic, Hostetter's Bitters produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay, and debility and decrepitude arising from old age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-inforce and reestablish them. Last but not least, it is the only safe stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements, present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day. No family medicine has been so universally, and it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as Hostetter's Bitters. Prepared by Hostetter and Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere. 23

HELMBOLD'S.

Genuine Preparations.

COMPOUND Fluid Extract Buchu, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and Excites the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Watery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflamation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, of abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,

Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face Pallid Countenance These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits, in one of which the Patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases"

"Insanity and Consumption." Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess the records of the insane asylums. And melancholly deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The Constitution once affected with organic Weakness, requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which Helmbold's Extract Buchu invariably does.

A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females—Females—Females —In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequaled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or suppression of customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion Habits of Dissipation, or in the decline or change of life. Take no more Balsam, Mercurey, or unpleasant medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases Helmbold's Extract Buchu and improved Rose wash cures secret diseases in all their stages, at little expense. Little or no change in diet, no inconvenience, and no exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and inflamation, so frequent in the class of diseases, and expelling all poisonous diseased and wornout matter. Thousands upon thousands who have been the victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the poison has, by the use of powerful astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage. Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu for all affections and diseases of the urinary organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause originating and no matter of how long standing. Diseases of these organs requires the aid of diuretic Helmbold's extract Buchu is the great diuretic, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is recommended. Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

Price $1,00 per bottle, or six for $5 00.—Delivered to any Address, securely packed from observation. Describe symptoms in all communications, cures guaranteed! Advice gratis! address letters for information to H. B. Helmbold, Chemist, 104 South Tenth-st., bel. chestnut, Phil.

Helmbold's medical depot, Drug and chemical warehouse, 594 Broadway N. Y.

Beware of counterfeit and unprincipled dealers who endeavor to dispose of their own and other articles on the reputation attained by Helmbold's genuine preparations, Extract buchu, Sarsaparilla, Improved Rose wash, sold by all druggists everywhere, ask for Helmbold's, take no other.

Cut out the advertisement and send for it. And avoid imposition and exposure

The Grave of the Year.

Be composed every toil, and each turbulent motion,
That encircles the heart in life's treacherous snares,
And the hour that invites to the calm of devotion
Undisturbed by regrets, unincumbered with cares;
How cheerless the late blooming face of creation,
Weary time seems to pause in his rapid career,
And fatigued with the work of his own desolation
Looks behind with a smile on the grave of the year.

Hark! the wind whistles; rudely the shadows are closing,
That inwrap his broad path in the mantle of night,
While pleasures gay sons are in quiet reposing,
Undismayed at the wrecks that have numbered his flight.
From yon temple where fashion's bright tapers are lighted,
Her votaries in crowds, decked in garlands appear,
And as yet their warm hopes by no spectres affrighted,
Assemble to dance round the grave of the year.

O, I hate the stale cup which the idlers have tasted,
When I think on the ills of life's comfortless day,
How the flowers of my childhood their verdure have wasted,
And the friends of my youth have been stolen away.
They think not how fruitless the warmest endeav'r
To recall the kind moments neglected when near,
When the hours which oblivion cancelled forever,
Are interr'd by her hand in the grave of the year.

Since the last solemn reign of this day of reflection,
What throngs have relinquished life's perishing breath,
How many have shed their last tear of defection,
And closed the dim eye in the darkness of death.
How many have suddenly their pilgrimage ended,
Beneath the low pall that envelops their bier,
Or to death's lonesome valley have gently descended,
And made their cold beds with the grave of the year.

'Tis the year that so late its new beauties displaying,
Rose bright on the happy, the careless, and gay,
Who now on their pillow of dust are reposing,
Where the sod presses damp on their bosoms of clay.
Then think not of bliss while her smile is expiring,
Disappointment still drowns it in misery's tear,
Reflect and be wise for the day is retiring,
And to-morrow will dawn on the grave of a year.

Yet awhile and no seasons around us will flourish
But silence for each her dark mansion prepare,
Where beauty no longer her roses will nourish,
Nor the lily o'erspread the wan cheek of despair
But the eye shall with lustre unfading be brightened,
When it wakes to true bliss in yon orient sphere
By sunbeams of pleasure immortal enlightened,
Which no more shall go down on the grave of the year.

Getting Rich—A Story for Boys.

Old Mr. Avery was going to his morning's work. He looked bent and worn and poor, Harry Eldon thought, as he lounged whistling over his fathers gate. The breakfast bell rang. Harry jumped off the gate, and turning round stuck his hands determinedly in his pockets, saying to himself as he went up the walk, 'I'll be rich when I'm a man. When I am sixty years old I won't be a carpenter, and work by day's labor, as Mr. Avery does. I don't believe he went to work right when he was a boy.' Mr. Eldon was sitting on the piazza with his paper, and heard Harry's speech, but said nothing to him about it, as he rose and walked into breakfast with his son.

Harry was deep in speculation on his way to school. Could his thoughts have been put into words, they would run something like this 'I have ten cents in my pocket, Ed. Smith will sell me his old cart for that, I know, and I have a new wheel that will fit on in the place of the one that is on it, and I can paint it up with the paint father gave me the other day and after it is done it will be worth twenty-five cents. John Wood wants a cart, for he told me so awhile ago, and I guess he'll buy it of me. There's one step towards getting rich.' The school door was reached and the session commenced. At recess time Harry rushed out full of his new plan to find Ed. Smith. All at once he observed George X———, a little friend of his, sitting on the sidewalk, digging his fingers into a wide crack, and at the same time crying bitterly.

'What's up, George?'

'Oh, Harry!' and the little fellow's grief burst out afresh, 'I've lost my new glass alleys—two of them—down this hole, and I can't get them out again, and father says that he won't buy me any more, for I've lost so many before these?'

'I'll see if I can't get 'em out for you,' and Harry knelt down on the sidewalk.

In vain he put his eye to the crevice and peered within it. In vain he poked about it with a stick. He soon found out that there was no use of trying longer. The alleys were irrevocably gone.

'Oh, Harry try just once more.' George pleaded. 'I do want them so badly.'

Harry [illegible] down.

'How much did your alleys cost, George?' Harry hardley knew what made him ask the question.

'Ten cents. They were such big ones.'

Harry bit his lip hard. He was a Christain. He remembered 'even Christ pleased not himself.'

'Well, George, you may go and buy some more and he pulled the bit of green paper out of his pocket and gave it to him. George was astonished. He stopped crying from sheer amazement that any boy would give him ten cents to buy two new alleys with. While he was recovering, Harry ran off. He hardly knew what to do with himself for the remainder of the recess. He did not care now to hunt up Ed. Smith, for he had no more money wherewith to initiate his schemees of trade. Finally he joined a group of ball players, and remained with them till the bell rang.

Noon came and passed. The afternoon session of school was over. Harry walked soberly home. Not that he felt sorry that he had given the ten cents to George. No, he was glad of it when he thought definitely about it at all, but he had a troubled sort of feeling, as though he had not accomplished quite what he had wished that day.

Mr. Eldon, too, had thought during the day of the resolution which he had heard Harry express in the morning, and resolved to have a talk with him about it at night.

So, after tea, just as the sun was setting he called him out to him upon the piazza.

'How about getting rich my boy?'

'What, sir?'

'Come and sit down here, my son. I heard you say this morning that you meant to be rich when you were a man. Have you thought anything more about it to-day, and what?,

'Yes, sir I have thought about it answered Harry, privately interrogating himself as to whether his father always heard everything.

'And have you thought how to go to work?'

'I thought of a begining, but I did not do it.'

'Why?'

'You see, father, I was going to do this—' and Harry went on with the details of his little plan up to the time he saw George X——— crying on the side walk—'and then father, I thought first I would not give it to him, but afterwards I did.'

'Why?'

'I thought it would not be right if I did not, for I should have liked it very much if I had been in his place.'

Mr. Eldon's face wore a pleased expression, but he made no comment.

'And what were you saying about Mr. Avery?'

'Only that I should not like to work as he does when I am old.'

'Mr. Avery is one of the richest men I know, Harry.'

Why, father!'

'Yes, I think so. Did you never read such a verse as this in your Bible, 'And I say unto you, make to yourself friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail, they may receive you unto everlasting habtations?'

'Yes, sir, and I never quite knew what it meant.'

'Mr. Avery was once a member of a wealthy firm in N. Y. I knew him then. One time we were walking along the street together, when we noticed a small crowd begining to collect at a corner. Our way led directly through it. When we came up, we found two men in the midst. Their faces were literally purple with passion, and they were fighting with a fierceness that showed their purposes were deadly. Mr. Avery turned to me' I know one of these men, I shall try and stop the fight.' I asked him not to, for I feared he might be hurt, and I saw a policeman coming up, and thought the matter might be settled without his inteference. But he walked coolly up to the uppermost man, and laid his hand on his shoulder, My friend won't you let this man get up and go away, and forgive him whatever he has done?

'He turned fiercely at Mr. Avery. But when he saw, who it was, he stopped short and in a minute after slowly rose.

'Yes, sir,' and her strengthened it with an oath, I will. You gave me money and work, sir, one time when my women and me was starving, and I'll quit fighting if ye like.'

'The officer came up then, but there was no work left for him to do. Nor is this a solitary instance in Mr. Avery's life. His has been the habit of benevolence.'

'What has this to do with the text you told me, father, and why is Mr. Avery poor?'

'Mr. Avery is poor now in money because his firm failed. They failed for the reason they depended on others whom they believed to be reliable and who were not. I told you the incident because here Mr. Avery had made a friend with the mammon of unrighteousness that is money. He added that to his everlasting possessions.

'And so I think, my boy, that you made a good investment this morning, when you replaced George's lost alleys. You have begun to be rich—not exactly in the way you meant, but in a better one.'

'But about the last part of the verse, father. Shall receive you into everlasting habitations?'

'I believe'—and Mr. Eldon turned a face full of very bright meaning upon his son—'that all the deeds we do for the love of Christ here, are kept in memory up above. We shall not win heaven by them. Harry hat they shall welcome us when we enter there. And it will be a glad welcome, too, for some of the souls who have lived on earth,' Mr. Eldon added in a low voice, with his eye fixed on the line of red where the sun went down.

Harry knew then that his father was through talking with him; and that his eyes, which seemed fixed on the distance, saw more than that just before them, even the glories of the New Jerusalem.

The Beauty of Marriage.

In opening an old book, the other day, the first passage that my eye fell upon was this. I copy it entire, although I do not believe every word it contains. The old writer says: "Marriage has in it less of beauty, but more of safety, than single life; it hath not more ease, but less danger; it is more merry and more sad; it is fuller of sorrows and fuller of joys; it lies under more burdnes, but is supported by all the strengths of love and charity, and those burdens are delightful. Marriage is the mother of the world, and preserves kingdoms, and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Celibacy, like the fly in the heart of the apple, dwells in perpetual sweetness, but sits alone and is confined, and dies in singularity; but marriage, like the useful bee, builds a house, and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labors and unites into societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the world with delicacies, and obeys their ruler, and keeps order, and exercises many virtues, and promotes the interests of mankind, and in that state of good to which God hath designed the present constitution of the world."

Now you will admit that this is very terse and beautiful. It is quite like Barrow for compactness, and Jeremy Taylor for sweetness. But, as I said before, it is not all to be agreed to, particularly the statement that "marriage has in it less of beauty than the single life." There is hardly anything in the world so beautiful as the union of two loving hearts, that are united because of their love, and for no unworthier reason. There is hardly an augury of promise so auspicious as an early love that looks toward marriage as its faithful seal and signet. There is hardly any festival among men so genial and happy as a wedding-day.

Our author was evidently earnest and sincere in his description; but when he thought there was more beauty in a single life, he unconciously intimated perhaps that he was the sober companion of a very excellent yet rather homely woman. But marriage has more of beauty in it than its bride. The wife may be lovely herself, but her wedded life is lovlier. What it more beautiful than the mother, when she wears the crown of many children, all as beautiful as herself. For a tree is beautiful not only in its leaves and blossoms, but in its shade and shelter. There is a sacredness in the thought of husband and wife which is more than beautiful. There is something tender in the thought of a family and a household of one's own; and what is tender is better than what is beautiful.

I cannot hold that "celibacy, like the fly in the heart of an apple, dwells in perpetual sweetness." It is rather like the fly in the heart of a tart apple, that dwells in perpetual sourness. True marriage is more "merry and more sad," but if it were not for sadness, what were merriment? Must there not be dark as well as light in a picture? "It is fuller of sorrows and of joys;" but its sorrows heightens its joys; and joys without sorrows would never be joyful. "It lies under more burdens;" say rather it stands under more burdens, for marriage is strength. It puts two backs under one load, where there was but one before. Of the many men who sink under their burdens, fewer are married than single.

It is quite surprising to find so many opinoins in the world on the subject of marriage. I do not mean in regard to its lawfulness, or propriety, or divine authority, but its beauty and happiness. Yet it is not to be doubted that most of these speculations originate with single people. There are diversities of views among the married, owing to their greater or less happiness of life; but the great majority of men who have wives, and of women who have husbands, are very well pleased with the married state; and they who stand off at a distance and laugh at it, or moralize over it, might usually be likened with propriety to the fable of the "Fox and the Grapes." The family is the most beautiful institution on earth, and marriage is the gate through which God meant it should be entered.

Curiosities of Fashions.

It is a question I think, whether the fashion influences the age, or the age moulds and shapes fashion; but it is obvious that there exists a subtle relationship between them. A high-bred courtesy, a certain elevation of manner, a loftiness of language and even a refinement of thought, seem naturally to associate themselves with the rich and stately costume of the men of the sixteenth century. look at the cavaliers in the glorious pictures of Vandyck; who can believe that from the ruffled and be-plumed gentlemen ever dropped any coarse ribaldry or vulgar slang.

Those grave and potent seigniors who glow on the splendid canvas to Titian; can you believe them capable of the deeds in which delighted the buckskin-breeches and cocked-hats of our Macaronis and Mohawks in the days of 'the second George? When I look upon the sweet and noble women of Vandyck, and compare them with the bare bosomed beauties of Italy, I trace in the distinction of costume and fashion the difference of morals and taste, and the wide gulf between the pure household life of the reign of Charles I and the social abandonment of that of Charles II. Morals and manners keep pace with the changes of costume, and are indicated by them.—London Society.

High Life Marriages in Turkey.

The marriages of Turkish princesses, on whose expenses, as the Hatti-Humayoun of 1858 stated no saving could be effected, deserves special notice. If one of the Sultan's daughters has attained the age at which Turkish girls are usually married the father seeks a husband for her among the nobles at his court. If a young man specially please her, he is given the rank of lieutenant general, nothing lower being ever selected. The chosen man recieves, in addition, a magnificent, fully furnished palace, and sixty thousand piastres a month, pocket money; and in addition, his father-in-law defrays all the housekeeping expenses. The bridegroom is not always over and above pleased at being selected. If he be married he is obliged to get a divorce—he must never have a wife or mistress in addition to the princess, and, moreover, he is regarded as the servant rather than the husband of his wife. The Sultan himself announces to him his impending good fortune, and it is his abounden duty to bow reverently, kiss the Sultan's feet, and stammer a few words about the high honor, the unexpected happiness, etc. He then proceeds with a chamberlain, who bears the imperial Hatt to the Sublime Porte A military band proceeds him, and soldiers are drawn up along the road with present arms. At the head of the stairs the bridegroom is recieved by the Grand Vizier, conducted by him into a room where all the ministers are assembled, and the Hatt is read aloud.

A Diver's Joke.

At Morris Island, S. C, Messrs, Smith & Phelps have a contract with the Government for keeping the bottoms of the Monitors clean. Their principal, diver appropriately named Waters, is so used to this work that he has become almost amphibious remaining for five or six hours under water. A man of herculean strength and proportions, when clad in his sub-marine armor, he becomes monstrous in size and appearance. Waters has his own idea of a joke, and when he has a curious audience will wave his scraper about as he "bobs around" on the water, with the air of a veritable river god.

One of the best jokes, the better for being a veritable fact, occurred last summer. Whilst he was employed scraping the hull of one of the Monitor, a negro, from one of the up river plantations came alongside with a boat load of watermelons Whilst busy selling his melons the diver came up, and rested himself on the side of the boat. The negro started at the extraordinary appearance thus suddenly coming out of the water with alarmed wonder, but when the diver seized one of the best melons in the boat and disappeared under the water, the gurgling of the air from the helmet mixing with his muffled laughter, the fright of the negro reached a climax. Hastily seizing his oars, without waiting to be paid for his melons, he put off at his best speed, and has not been seen in the viciniy of Station Creek since. He cannot be tempted beyond the bounds of the plantation, and he beleives that the Yankees have brought river devils with them to aid them in making war.

Amendments to the Conscription Law.

If the $300 clause of the Conscription Act is to be retained as now seems probable, why should it not at least be modified so that conscripts shall pay somewhat in proportion to their means? Let the lowest sum remain where it is, a $300. Make those worth more than $4,000 and less than $8,000, pay $400; over $8,000 and under $12,000, $500, and for each additional $5,000 of property possessed $100. Thus, if a man is worth $27,000 let him pay $800, and if he is worth $100,000, let him pay $2,300, if drafted, in case he declines to serve in person.

In case a graduated scale like this should be adopted, another amendment to the law ought to be made.

The age should be increased from forty five to fifty-years, and a distinction should be made in the service to be performed. Those who are unable to perform active duty in the field should be assigned to the invalid corps to serve as stationary troops, to hold forts and towns, and to guard prisoners and the like. Thousands of consripts, who under the present imperfect law escape entirely, would make excellent soldiers for garrison purposes, and thereby release a more active and able bodied man for open field work. Men between 45 and 55 years are generally in comfortable circumstances, and would be able to pay if they did not want to serve. They have a large pecuniary interest in puting down the rebellion and saving the Union thereby preserving the value and enjoyment of their property in peace and security. Why should they not be called to put their shoulders to the wheel, and take the same risks and bear some burdens as well as younger men.? The money thus procured for commutation would furnish the War Department a fund with which to pay liberal bounties to those not drafted who volunteer to fight in the place of those who are. It seems to us that the law thus modified would be far more popular, just and efficient than in its present shape.—Chicago Tribune

Death from Chloroform.

Mrs. Jane E. Ward, a widow lady residing on One Hundred and Eighteenth street, between Second and Third avenues, died on Tuesday night under singular circumstances. Coroner Ranney was called and held an inquest, at which a large amount of testimony was taken. From this evidence it appears that the deceased came to her death from the accidental inhalation of an overdose of chloroform. For some time past she had been suffering great pain with a carbuncle on her finger, and on Tuesday night, in order to obtain some rest sent her daughter, Minnie Ward, to the drug store of James Wood to purchase an ounce of chloroform, with which to bathe her finger. While engaged in this she allowed the bottle to sit near her uncorked, and unconsciously to herself inhaled the fumes arising from it until she suddenly became insensible. She was discovered shortly afterwards in a kneeling posture on the floor with her face resting on a pillow and breathing very heavily. A physician was immediately sent for, but before he arrived life was extinct.

The jury rendered a verdict of censure in the case as follows:

That deceased came to her death by inhaling chloroform; and we furthur believe that James Wood, the druggist, is censurable in selling the chloroform and not labelling it "poison," or taking the name and residence of the purchaser, in accordance with the law.—New York World.

TELEGRAPH TO ST. CLOUD.—The telegraph line up the Mississippi river cannot be constructed this winter, as the ground is found to be frozen too hard to work to much advantage. As soon as spring opens, the work of setting the poles which are being got out now, will commence. The line will be completed to Anoka about May 1st. The balance of the line to St. Cloud is under contract to be completed by June 15th, and will thereafter be steadily constructed to Fort Abercrombie and Pembina. Four thousand poles are being cut and delivered now.

From La Crosse to Milwaukee a new line is to be built and finished by July 15th with new poles and two wires throughout.

The construction of these lines will give our merchants additional business facilities. One line more needed than any other, however—that up the Minnesota Valley—does not seem to be progressing very fast. It should be built at an early day. The enterprising communities up the Minnesota cannot do without a line much longer.—St. Paul Press.

The Responsibility

Said the wife of a merchant not blessed with children, 'O I think so much of my birds. Mrs F. makes a pet of her dog, wouldn't take a hundred dollars for it, but I choose birds I must have pets something to love, or life would be too dreary.'

A friend responded, 'Why not, then, take some motherless infant, something with human feelings, that can return your love and sympathy, and give you at the same time the consciousness that you are doing good?'

'O, the responsibility is to great. I would certainly do so but for this one consideration.

But which is the greater responsibility doing or refusing to feed or pet a bird, for nature has provided a full supply for its wants. It would never pine for human care, has no immortal powers to culture and train for endless life. But there are hundreds of little children bereft desolate making silent appeals for love and pity—that sympathy, given to soulless objects, or selfishly pent up in hearts made to be expended and happified by its legitimate exercise. Let maternal love be given to these dear children made in the image of God, and you may polish gems for the Savior's crown, perform work for which He will surely pay thee thy wages.—Let it be withheld and sin and satan claim the victim you refuse to succor, then space if you can, cycles of woe in which the last spirit shall move to endless ages lost through your neglect, and when you have summed up the aggregate of its sorrows and measured the results of its influence for evil, look back to the point where you might have rescued it from all this, and tell us then and there by which act taking or refusing to take a friendless child, cast in its helplessness upon a wicked world to be trained up or to come up to bless or blight while ages roll along? Such were our cogitations as we thought of the lady and her pet and her dread of the responsibilty.

SHUTTING UP A COPPERHEAD.—Coming to the city the other morning upon a river boat, ex-Gov. Pollock was put in communication with a noisy copperhead. The man was rather turbulently seeking to convince some gentlemen present that the draft is unconstitutional. He was taken down by the ex-Governor in good style.

'The draft is unconstitutional is it asked the Governor.

'Of course it is.'

'Well is volunteering unconstitutional?'

'Certainly not, Volunteering is all right enough. That is the way our army should be formed.'

'Well have you volunteered to do service?'

'No.'

'Have you given any of your sons or your household to the cause of liberty— have you endeavored to get any of them to volunteer?'

'No I have not."

'Have you given anything towards bounty to those who volunteered, or to the aid of sick and wounded soldiers?'

'I shall answer no such impertinent questions' said the man.

'Very well.' said the ex-Governor 'You are a very fair specimen of the class of men who cry out that the draft is unconstitutional. You don't volunteer yourself; you give nothing to the invalid soldiers in the hospital or the families of those who are absent on the field of battle; you don't seek to inspire others with patriotism, for you have none yourself, and I believe that so far from doing this you have rather sought to discourage men from serving the country.'

'He has he has,' said several voices together. 'You've drawn his portrait Governor, as well as though you had known him all his life. He's a fair specimen of the men who blather about the unconstitutionality of the draft. They do all they can against the cause without getting behind a prison door, and are meaner than any rebel to be found in arms.'

The man, lividly pale, turned away.—He was in to large a minority to resent the evidence against him. He had nothing more to say at that moment about the unconstitutionality of the draft.

The Grave of the Year,

Be composed every toll, and each turbulent motion,
That encircles the heart in life's treacherous snares,
And the hour that invites to the calm of devotion
Undisturbed by regrets, unincumbered with cares;
How cheerless the late blooming face of creation,
Weary time seems to pass in his rapid career,
And fatigued with the work of his own desolation
Looks behind with a smile on the grave of the year.

Hark! the wind whistles; rudely the shadows are closing,
That inwrap his broad path in the mantle of night,
While pleasures gay sons are in quiet reposing,
Undismayed at the wrecks that have numbered his flight,
From yon temple where fashion's bright tapers are lighted,
Her votaries in crowds, decked in garlands appear,
And as yet their warm hopes by no spectres affrighted,
Assemble to dance round the grave of the year.

O, I hate the stale cup which the idlers have tasted,
When I think on the ills of life's comfortless day,
How the flowers of my childhood their verdure have wasted,
And the friends of my youth have been stolen away.
They think not how fruitless the warmest endeav'r
To recall the kind moments neglected when near,
When the hours with oblivion cancelled forever,
Are interr'd by her hand in the grave of the year.

Since the last solemn reign of this day of reflection,
What throngs have relinquished life's perishing breath,
How many have shed their last tear of dejection,
And closed the dim eye in the darkness of death,
How many have sudden, their pilgrimage ended,
Beneath the low pall that envelops their bier,
Or to death's lonesome valley have gently descended,
And made their cold beds with the grave of the year.

'Tis the year that so late its new beauties disclosing,
Rose bright on the happy, the careless, and gay,
Who now on their pillow of dust are reposing,
Where the sod presses damp on their bosoms of clay.
Then talk not of bliss while her smile is expiring,
Disappointment still drowns it in misery's tear,
Reflect and be wise for the day is retiring,
And to-morrow will dawn on the grave of a year.

Yet awhile and no seasons around us will flourish
But silence for each her dark mansion prepare,
Where beauty no longer her roses will nourish,
Nor the lily o'erspread the wan cheek of despair
But the eye shall with lustre undying be bright ened,
When it wakes to true bliss in yon orient sphere
By sunbeams of pleasure immortal enlightened,
Which no more shall go down on the grave of the year.

Getting Rich—A Story for Boys.

Old Mr. Avery was going to his morning's work. He looked bent and worn and poor, Harry Eldon thought, as he lounged whistling over his fathers gate. The breakfast bell rang. Harry jumped off the gate, and turning round stuck his hands determinedly in his pockets, savi

'How much did your alleys cost, George?' Harry hardley knew what made him ask the question.

'Ten cents. They were such big ones.'

Harry bit his lip hard. He was a Christain. He remembered 'even Christ pleased not himself.'

'Well, George, you may go and buy some more and he pulled the bit of green paper out of his pocket and gave it to him. George was astonished. He stopped crying from sheer amazement that any boy would give him ten cents to buy two new alleys with. While he was recovering, Harry ran off. He hardly knew what to do with himself for the remainder of the recess. He did not care now to hunt up Ed. Smith, for he had no more money wherewith to initiate his schemes of trade. Finally he joined a group of ball players, and remained with them till the bell rang.

Noon came and passed. The afternoon session of school was over. Harry walked soberly home. Not that he felt sorry that he had given the ten cents to George. No, he was glad of it when he thought definitely about it at all, but he had a troubled sort of feeling, as though he had not accomplished quite what he had wished that day.

Mr. Eldon, too, had thought during the day of the resolution which he had heard Harry express in the morning, and resolved to have a talk with him about it at night.

So, after tea, just as the sun was setting he called him out to him upon the piazza.

'How about getting rich my boy?'

'What, sir?'

'Come and sit down here, my son. I heard you say this morning that you meant to be rich when you were a man. Have you thought anything more about it to-day, and what?'

'Yes, sir I have thought about it answered Harry, privately interrogating himself as to whether his father always heard everything.

'And have you thought how to go to work?'

'I thought of a begining, but I did not do it.'

'Why?'

'You see, father, I was going to do this—' and Harry went on with the details of his little plan up to the time he saw George X—— crying on the side walk—'and then father, I thought first I would not give it to him, but afterwards I did.'

'Why?'

'I thought it would not be right if I did not, for I should have liked it very much if I had been in his place.'

Mr. Eldon's face wore a pleased expression, but he made no comment.

'And what were you saying about Mr. Avery?'

'Only that I should not like to work as he does when I am old.'

'Mr. Avery is one of the richest men I know, Harry.'

Why, father!'

'Yes, I think so. Did you never read such a verse as this in your Bible, 'And I say unto you, make to yourself friends of the mammon of made a good investment this morning, when you replaced George's lost alleys. You have begun to be rich—not exactly in the way you meant, but in a better one.'

'But about the last part of the verse, father. Shall receive you into everlasting habitations?'

'I believe'—and Mr. Eldon turned a face full of very bright meaning upon his son—'that all the deeds we do for the love of Christ here, are kept in memory up above. We shall not win heaven by them. Harry but they shall welcome us when we enter there. And it will be a glad welcome, too, for some of the souls who have lived on earth,' Mr. Eldon added in a low voice, with his eye fixed on the line of red where the sun went down.

Harry knew then that his father was through talking with him; and that his eyes, which seemed fixed on the distance, saw more than that just before them, even the glories of the New Jerusalem.

The Beauty of Marriage.

In opening an old book, the other day, the first passage that my eye fell upon was this. I copy it entire, although I do not believe every word it contains. The old writer says: "Marriage has in it less of beauty, but more of safety, than single life; it hath not more ease, but less danger; it is more merry and more sad; it is fuller of sorrows and fuller of joys; it lies under more burdues, but is supported by all the strengths of love and charity, and those burdens are delightful. Marriage is the mother of the world, and preserves kingdoms, and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Celibacy, like the fly in the heart of the apple, dwells in perpetual sweetness, but sits alone and is confined, and dies in singularity; but marriage, like the useful bee, builds a house, and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labors and unites into societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the world with delicacies, and obeys their ruler, and keeps order, and exercises many virtues, and promotes the interests of mankind, and in that state of good to which God hath designed the present constitution of the world."

Now you will admit that this is very terse and beautiful. It is quite like Barrow for compactness, and Jeremy Taylor for sweetness. But, as I said before, it is not all to be agreed to, particularly the statement that "marriage has in it less of beauty than the single life." There is hardly anything in the world so beautiful as the union of two loving hearts, that are united because of their love, and for no unworthier reason. There is hardly an augury of promise so auspicious as an early love that looks toward marriage as its faithful seal and signet. There is hardly any festival among men so genial and happy as a wedding-day.

Our author was evidently earnest and sincere in his description; but when he thought there was more beauty in a single life, he unconscious-of the "Fox and the Grapes." The family is the most beautiful institution on earth, and marriage is the gate through which God meant it should be entered.

Curiosities of Fashions.

It is a question I think, whether the fashion influences the age, or the age moulds and shapes fashion; but it is obvious that there exists a subtle relationship between them. A high-bred courtesy, a certain elevation of manner, a loftiness of language and even a refinement of thought, seem naturally to associate themselves with the rich and stately costume of the men of the sixteenth century. look at the cavaliers in the glorious pictures of Vandyck; who can believe that from the ruffled and beplumed gentlemen ever dropped any coarse ribaldry or vulgar slang.

Those grave and potent seigniors who glow on the splendid canvas to Titian; can you believe them capable of the deeds in which delighted the buckskin-breeches and cocked-hats of our Macaronis and Mohawks in the days of "the second George? When I look upon the sweet and noble women of Vandyck, and compare them with the bare bosomed beauties of Italy, I trace in the distinction of costume and fashion the difference of morals and taste, and the wide gulf between the pure household life of the reign of Charles I and the social abandonment of that of Charles 11. Morals and manners keep pace with the changes of costume, and are indicated by them.—London Society.

High Life Marriages in Turkey.

The marriages of Turkish princesses, on whose expenses, as the Hatti-Humayoun of 1858 stated no saving could be effected, deserves special notice. If one of the Sultan's daughters has attained the age at which Turkish girls are usually married the father seeks a husband for her among the nobles at his court. If a young man specially please her, he is given the rank of lieutenant general, nothing lower being ever selected. The chosen man recieves, in addition, a magnificent, fully furnished palace, and sixty thousand piastres a month, pocket money; and in addition, his father-in-law defrays all the housekeeping expenses. The bridegroom is not always over and above pleased at being selected. If he be married he is obliged to get a divorce—he must never have a wife or mistress in addition to the princess, and, moreover, he is regarded as the servant rather than the husband of his wife. The Sultan himself announces to him his impending good fortune, and it is his abounden duty to bow reverently, kiss the Sultan's feet, and stammer a few words about the high honor, the unexpected happiness, etc. He then proceeds with a chamberlain, who bears the imperial Hatt to the Sublime Porte A military band proceeds him, and soldiers are drawn up along the road with present arms. At the head of the stairs the bridegroom is recieved by the Grand Vizier, conducted by him into a room where all the minis-

Amendments to the Conscription Law.

If the $300 clause of the Conscription Act is to be retained as now seems probable, why should it not at least be modified so that conscripts shall pay somewhat in proportion to their means? Let the lowest sum remain where it is, a $300. Make those worth more than $4,000 and less than $8,000, pay $400; over $8,000 and under $12,000, $500, and for each additional $5,000 of property possessed $100. Thus, if a man is worth $27,000 let him pay $800, and if he is worth $100,000, let him pay $2,300, if drafted, in case he declines to serve in person.

In case a graduated scale like this should be adopted, another amendment to the law ought to be made. The age should be increased from forty five to fifty-years, and a distinction should be made in the service to be performed. Those who are unable to perform active duty in the field should be assigned to the invalid corps to serve as stationary troops, to hold forts and towns, and to guard prisoners and the like. Thousands of consripts, who under the present imperfect law escape entirely, would make excellent soldiers for garrison purposes, and thereby release a more active and able bodied man for open field work. Men between 45 and 55 years are generally in comfortable circumstances, and would be able to pay if they did not want to serve. They have a large pecuniary interest in puting down the rebellion and saving the Union thereby preserving the value and enjoyment of their property in peace and security. Why should they not be called to put their shoulders to the wheel, and take the same risks and bear some burdens as well as younger men? The money thus procured for commutation would furnish the War Department a fund with which to pay liberal bounties to those not drafted who volunteer to fight in the place of those who are. It seems to us that the law thus medified would be far more popular, just and efficient than in its present shape.—Chicago Tribune

Death from Chloroform.

Mrs. Jane E. Ward, a widow lady residing on One Hundred and Eighteenth street, between Second and Third avenues, died on Tuesday night under singular circumstances. Coroner Ranney was called and held an inquest, at which a large amount of testimony was taken. From this evidence it appears that the deceased came to her death from the accidental inhalation of an overdose of chloroform. For some time past she had been suffering great pain with a carbuncle on her finger, and on Tuesday night, in order to obtain some rest sent her daughter, Minnie Ward, to the drug store of James Wood to purchase an ounce of chloroform, with which to bathe her finger. While engaged in this she allowed the bottle to sit near her uncorked, and unconsciously to herself inhaled the fumes arising from it until she suddenly became insensible. She

The Responsibility

Said the wife of a merchant not blessed with children, 'O I think so much of my birds. Mrs F. makes a pet of her dog, wouldn't take a hundred dollars for it, but I choose birds I must have pets something to love, or life would be too dreary.'

A friend responded, 'Why not, then, take some motherless infant, something with human feelings, that can return your love and sympathy, and give you at the same time the consciousness that you are doing good?'

'O, the responsibility is to great. I would certainly do so but for this one consideration.

But which is the greater responsibility doing or refusing to feed or pet a bird, for nature has provided a full supply for its wants. It would never pine for human care, has no immortal powers to culture and train for endless life. But there are hundreds of little children bereft desolate making silent appeals for love and pity—that sympathy, given to soulless objects, or selfieshly pent up in hearts made to be expended and happified by its legitimate exercise. Let maternal love be given to these dear children made in the image of God, and you may polish gems for the Savior's crown, perform work for which He will surely pay thee thy wages.—Let it be withheld and sin and satan claim the victim you refuse to succor, then space if you can, cycles of woe in which the last spirit shall move to endless ages lost through your neglect, and when you have summed up the aggregate of its sorrows and measured the results of its influence for evil, look back to the point where you might have rescued it from all this, and tell us then and there by which act taking or refusing to take a friendless child, cast in its helplessness upon a wicked world to be trained up or to come up to bless or blight while ages roll along? Such were our cogitations as we thought of the lady and her pet and her dread of the responsibilty. Advocate and Guardian.

Shutting up a Copperhead.—Coming to the city the other morning upon a river boat, ex-Gov. Pollock was put in communication with a noisy copperhead. The man was rather turbulently seeking to convince some gentlemen present that the draft is unconstitutional. He was taken down by the ex-Governor in good style.

'The draft is unconstitutional is it asked the Governor.

'Of course it is.'

'Well is volunteering unconstitutional?'

'Certainly not, Volunteering is all right enough. That is the way our army should be formed.'

Well have you volunteered to do service?'

'No.'

'Have you given any of your sons or your household to the cause of liberty—have you endeavored to get any of them to volunteer?'

'No I have not.'

'Have you given anything towards bounty to those who volunteered, or to the aid of sick and wounded soldiers?'

'I shall answer no such impertinent questions' said the man.

'Very well.' said the ex-Governor 'You are a very fair specimen of the class of men who cry out that the draft is unconstitutional. You don't volunteer yourself; you give nothing to the invalid soldiers in the hospital or the families of those who are absent on the field of battle; you don't seek to inspire others with patriotism, for you have none yourself, and I believe that so far from doing this you have rather sought to discourage men from serving the country.'

'He has he has,' said several voices together. 'You've drawn his portrait Governor, as well as though you had known him all his life. He's a fair specimen of the men who blather about the unconstitutionality of the draft. They do all they can against the cause without getting behind a prison door, and are meaner than any rebel to be found in arms.'

The man, lividly pale, turned away.—He was in to large a minority to resent the evidence against him. He had nothing more to say at that moment about the unconstitutionality of the draft.

Diptheria is said to be speedily arrested and cured by swallowing lumps of ice, continuously until relief is afforded: let them as much as possible melt in the throat. Common sore-throat is cured in the same way, sometimes. We have tested the remedy in our own family, and believe it to be an excellent thing in that disease.

Little Daisy's mamma was trying to explain to her the meaning of a smile. 'O yes! I know,' said the child, 'itis a whisper of a laugh.'

Getting Rich—A Story for Boys.

Old Mr. Avery was going to his morning's work. He looked bent and worn and poor, Harry Eldon thought, as he lounged whistling over his fathers gate. The breakfast bell rang. Harry jumped off the gate, and turning round stuck his hands determinedly in his pockets, saying to himself as he went up the walk, 'I'll be rich when I'm a man. When I am sixty years old I won't be a carpenter, and work by day's labor, as Mr. Avery does. I don,t believe he went to work right when he was a boy.' Mr. Eldon was sitting on the piazza with his paper, and heard Harry's speech, but said nothing to him about it, as he rose and walked into breakfast with his son.

'Harry was deep in speculation on his way to school. Could his thoughts have been put into words, they would run something like this I have ten cents in my pocket, Ed. Smith will sell me his old cart for that, I know, and I have a new wheel that will fit on in the place of the one that is on it, and I can paint it up with the paint father gave me the other day and after it is done it will be worth twenty-five cents. John Wood wants a cart, for he told me so awhile ago, and I guess he'll buy it of me. There's one step towards getting rich.' The school door was reached and the session commenced. At recess time Harry rushed out full of his new plan to find Ed. Smith. All at once he observed George X——, a little friend of his, sitting on the sidewalk, digging his fingers into a wide crack, and at the same time crying bitterly.

'What's up, George?'

'Oh, Harry!' and the little fellow's grief burst out afresh. 'I've lost my new glass alleys—two of them—down this hole, and I can't get them out again, and father says that he won't buy me any more, for I've lost so many before these?'

'I'll see if I can,t get ,em out for you,' and Harry knelt down on the sidewalk.

In vain he put his eye to the crevice and peered within it. In vain he poked about it with a stick. He soon found out that there was no use of trying longer. The alleys were irrevocably gone.

'Oh, Harry try just once more.' George pleaded. 'I do want them so badly.'

[illegible] down.

'How much did your alleys cost, George?' Harry hardley knew what made him ask the question.

'Ten cents. They were such big ones.'

Harry bit his lip hard. He was a Christain. He remembered 'even Christ pleased not himself.'

'Well, George, you may go and buy some more and he pulled the bit of green paper out of his pocket and gave it to him. George was astonished. He stopped crying from sheer amazement that any boy would give him ten cents to buy two new alleys with. While he was recovering, Harry ran off. He hardly knew what to do with himself for the remainder of the recess. He did not care now to hunt up Ed. Smith, for he had no more money wherewith to initiate his schemees of trade. Finally he joined a group of ball players, and remained with them till the bell rang.

No, he was glad of it when he thought definitely about it at all, but he had a troubled sort of feeling, as though he had not accomplished quite what he had wished that day.

Mr. Eldon, too, had thought during the day of the resolution which he had heard Harry express in the morning, and resolved to have a talk with him about it at night.

So, after tea, just as the sun was setting he called him out to him upon the piazza.

'How about getting rich my boy?'

'What, sir?'

'Come and sit down here. my son. I heard you say this morning that you meant to be rich when you were a man. Have you thought anything more about it to-day, and what?,

'Yes. sir I have thought about it answered Harry, privately interrogating himself as to whether his father always heard everything.

'And have you thought how to go to work?'

'I thought of a begining, but I did not do it.'

'Why?'

'You see, father, I was going to do this—' and Harry went on with the details of his little plan up to the time he saw George X—— crying on the side walk—'and then father, I thought first I would not give it to him, but afterwards I did.'

'Why?'

'I thought it would not be right if I did not, for I should have liked it very much if I had been in his place.'

Mr. Eldon's face wore a pleased expression, but he made no comment.

'And what were you saying about Mr. Avery?'

'Only that I should not like to work as he does when I am old.'

'Mr. Avery is one of the richest men I know, Harry.'

Why, father!'

'Yes, I think so. Did you never read such a verse as this in your Bible, 'And I say unto you, make to yourself friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail, they may receive you unto everlasting habetations?'

'Yes, sir, and I never quite knew what it meant.'

Mr. Avery was once a member of a wealthy firm in N. Y. I knew him then. One time we were walking along the street together, when we noticed a small crowd begining to collect at a corner. Our way led directly through it. When we came up, we found two men in the midst. Their faces were literally purple with passion, and they were fighting with a fierceness that showed their purposes were deadly. Mr. Avery turned to me' I know one of these men, I shall try and stop the fight.' I asked him not to, for I feared he might be hurt, and I saw a policeman coming up, and thought the matter might be settled without his inteferance. But he walked coolly up to the uppermost man, and laid his hand on his shoulder, My friend won't you let this man get up and go away, and forgive him whatever he has done?

'He turned fiercely at Mr. Avery. But when he saw, who it was, he stopped short and in a minute after slowly rose.

'Yes, sir,' and her strengthened it with an oath, I will. You gave me money and work, sir, one time when my women and me was starving, and I'll quit fighting if ye like.'

'The officer came up then, but there was no work left for him to do. Nor is this a solitary instance in Mr. Avery's life. His has been the habit of benevolence.'

'What has this to do with the text you told me, father, and why is Mr. Avery poor?'

'Mr. Avery is poor now in money because his firm failed. They failed for the reason they depended on others whom they believed to be reliable and who were not. I told you the incident because here Mr. Avery had made a friend with the mammon of unrighteousness that is money. He added that to his everlasting possessions.

'And so I think, my boy, that you made a good investment this morning, when you replaced George's lost alleys. You have begun to be rich—not exactly in the way you meant, but in a better one.'

'But about the last part of the verse, father. Shall receive you into everlasting habitations?'

'I believe'—and Mr. Eldon turned a face full of very bright meaning upon his son—'that all the deeds we do for the love of Christ here, are kept in memory up above. We shall not win heaven by them. Harry but they shall welcome us when we enter there And it will be a glad welcome, too, for some of the souls who have lived on earth,' Mr. Eldon added in a low voice, with his eye fixed on the line of red where the sun went down.

Harry knew then that his father was through talking with him; and that his eyes, which seemed fixed on the distance, saw more than that just before them, even the glories of the New Jerusalem.

The Beauty of Marriage.

In opening an old book, the other day, the first passage that my eye fell upon was this. I copy it entire, although I do not believe every word it contains. The old writer says: "Marriage has in it less of beauty, but more of safety, than single life; it hath not more ease, but less danger; it is more merry and more sad; it is fuller of sorrows and fuller of joys; it lies under more burdnes, but is supported by all the strengths of love and charity, and those burdens are delightful. Marriage is the mother of the world, and preserves kingdoms, and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Celibacy, like the fly in the heart of the apple, dwells in perpetual sweetness, but sits alone and is confined, and dies in singularity; but marriage, like the useful bee, builds a house, and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labors and unites into societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the world with delicacies, and obeys their ruler, and keeps order, and exercises many virtues, and promotes the interests of mankind, and in that state of good to which God hath designed the present constitution of the world."

Now you will admit that this is very terse and beautiful. It is quite like Barrow for compactness, and Jeremy Taylor for sweetness. But, as I said before, it is not all to be agreed to, particularly the statement that "marriage has in it less of beauty than the single life." There is hardly anything in the world so beautiful as the union of two loving hearts, that are united because of their love, and for no unworthier reason. There is hardly an augury of promise so auspicious as an early love that looks toward marriage as its faithful seal and signet. There is hardly any festival among men so genial and happy as a wedding-day.

Our author was evidently earnest and sincere in his description; but when he thought there was more beauty in a single life, he unconciously intimated perhaps that he was the sober companion of a very excellent yet rather homely woman. But marriage has more of beauty in it than its bride. The wife may be lovely herself, but her wedded life is lovlier. What it more beautiful than the mother, when she wears the crown of many children, all as beautiful as herself. For a tree is beautiful not only in its leaves and blossoms, but in its shade and shelter. There is a sacredness in the thought of husband and wife which is more than beautiful. There is something tender in the thought of a family and a household of one's own; and what is tender is better than what is beautiful.

I cannot hold that "celibacy, like the fly in the heart of an apple, dwells in perpetual sweetness." It is rather like the fly in the heart of a tart apple, that dwells in perpetual sourness. True marriage is more "merry and more sad," but if it were not for sadness, what were merriment? Must there not be dark as well as light in a picture? "It is fuller of sorrows and of joys;" but its sorrows heightens its joys; and joys without sorrows would never be joyful. "It lies under more burdens;" say rather it stands under more burdens, for marriage is strength. It puts two backs under one load, where there was but one before. Of the many men who sink under their burdens, fewer are married than single.

It is quite surprising to find so many opinoins in the world on the subject of marriage. I do not mean in regard to its lawfulness, or propriety, or divine authority, but its beauty and happiness. Yet it is not to be doubted that most of these speculations originate with single people. There are diversities of views among the married, owing to their greater or less happiness of life; but the great majority of men who have wives, and of women who have husbands, are very well pleased with the married state; and they who stand off at a distance and laugh at it, or moralize over it, might usually be likened with propriety to the fable of the "Fox and the Grapes." The family is the most beautiful institution on earth, and marriage is the gate through which God meant it should be entered.

Curiosities of Fashions.

It is a question I think, whether the fashion influences the age, or the age moulds and shapes fashion; but it is obvious that there exists a subtle relationship between them. A high-bred courtesy, a certain elevation of manner, a loftiness of language and even a refinement of thought, seem naturally to associate themselves with the rich and stately costume of the men of the sixteenth century. look at the cavaliers in the glorious pictures of Vandyck; who can believe that from the ruffled and beplumed gentlemen ever dropped any coarse ribaldry or vulgar slang.

Those grave and potent seigniors who glow on the splendid canvas to Titian; can you believe them capable of the deeds in which delighted the buckskin-breeches and cocked-hats of our Macaronis and Mohawks in the days of the second George? When I look upon the sweet and noble women of Vandyck, and compare them with the bare bosomed beauties of Italy, I trace in the distinction of costume and fashion the difference of morals and taste, and the wide gulf between the pure household life of the reign of Charles I and the social abandonment of that of Charles 11. Morals and manners keep pace with the changes of costume, and are indicated by them.—London Society.

High Life Marriages in Turkey.

The marriages of Turkish princesses, on whose expenses, as the Hatti-Humayoun of 1858 stated no saving could be effected, deserves special notice. If one of the Sultan's daughters has attained the age at which Turkish girls are usually married the father seeks a husband for her among the nobles at his court. If a young man specially please her, he is given the rank of lieutenant general, nothing lower being ever selected. The chosen man recieves, in addition, a magnificent, fully furnished palace, and sixty thousand piastres a month, pocket money; and in addition, his father-in-law defrays all the housekeepin expenses. The bridegroom is not always over and above pleased at being selected. If he be married he is obliged to get a divorce—he must never have a wife or mistress in addition to the princess, and, moreover, he is regarded as the servant rather than the husband of his wife. The Sultan himself announces to him his impending good fortune, and it is his abounden duty to bow reverently, kiss the Sultan's feet, and stammer a few words about the high honor, the unexpected happiness, etc. He then proceeds with a chamberlain, who bears the imperial Hatt to the Sublime Porte A military band proceeds him, and soldiers are drawn up along the road with present arms. At the head of the stairs the bridegroom is recieved by the Grand Vizier, conducted by him into a room where all the ministers are assembled, and the Hatt is read aloud.

A Diver's Joke.

At Morris Island, S. C, Messrs, Smith & Phelps have a contract with the Government for keeping the bottoms of the Monitors clean. Their principal, diver appropriately named Waters, is so used to this work that he has become almost amphibious remaining for five or six hours under water. A man of herculean strength and proportions, when clad in his sub-marine armor, he becomes monstrous in size and appearance. Waters has his own idea of a joke, and when he has a curious audience will wave his scraper about as he "bobs around" on the water, with the air of a veritable river god.

One of the best jokes, the better for being a veritable fact, occurred last summer. Whilst he was employed scraping the hull of one of the Monitor, a negro, from one of the up river plantations came alongside with a boat load of watermelons Whilst busy selling his melons the diver came up, and rested himself on the side of the boat. The negro started at the extraordinary appearance thus suddenly coming out of the water with alarmed wonder, but when the diver seized one of the best melons in the boat and disappeared under the water, the gargling of the air from the helmet mixing with his muffled laughter, the fright of the negro reached a climax. Hastily seizing his oars, without waiting to be paid for his melons, he put off at his best speed, and has not been seen in the vicinity of Station Creek since. He cannot be tempted beyond the bounds of the plantation, and he beleives that the Yankees have brought river devils with them to aid them in making war.

Amendments to the Conscription Law.

If the $300 clause of the Conscription Act is to be retained as now seems probable, why should it not at least be modified so that conscripts shall pay somewhat in proportion to their means? Let the lowest sum remain where it is, a $300. Make those worth more than $4,000 and less than $8,000, pay $400; over $8,000 and under $12,000, $500, and for each additional $5,000 of property possessed $100. Thus, if a man is worth $27,000 let him pay $800, and if he is worth $100,000, let him pay $2,300, if drafted, in case he declines to serve in person.

In case a graduated scale like this should be adopted, another amendment to the law ought to be made.

The age should be increased from forty five to fifty-years, and a distinction should be made in the service to be performed. Those who are unable to perform active duty in the field should be assigned to the invalid corps to serve as stationary troops, to hold forts and towns, and to guard prisoners and the like. Thousands of conscripts, who under the present imperfect law escape entirely, would make excellent soldiers for garrison purposes, and thereby release a more active and able bodied man for open field work. Men between 45 and 55 years are generally in comfortable circumstances, and would be able to pay if they did not want to serve. They have a large pecuniary interest in puting down the rebellion and saving the Union thereby preserving the value and enjoyment of their property in peace and security. Why should they not be called to put their shoulders to the wheel, and take the same risks and bear some burdens as well as younger men? The money thus procured for commutation would furnish the War Department a fund with which to pay liberal bounties to those not drafted who volunteer to fight in the place of those who are. It seems to us that the law thus modified would be far more popular, just and efficient than in its present shape..—Chicago Tribune

Death from Chloroform.

Mrs. Jane E. Ward, a widow lady residing on One Hundred and Eighteenth street, between Second and Third avenues, died on Tuesday night under singular circumstances. Coroner Ranney was called and held an inquest, at which a large amount of testimony was taken. From this evidence it appears that the deceased came to her death from the accidental inhalation of an overdose of chloroform. For some time past she had been suffering great pain with a carbuncle on her finger, and on Tuesday night, in order to obtain some rest sent her daughter, Minnie Ward, to the drug store of James Wood to purchase an ounce of chloroform, with which to bathe her finger. While engaged in this she allowed the bottle to sit near her uncorked, and unconsciously to herself inhaled the fumes arising from it until she suddenly became insensible. She was discovered shortly afterwards in a kneeling posture on the floor with her face resting on a pillow and breathing very heavily. A physician was immediately sent for, but before he arrived life was extinct.

The jury rendered a verdict of censure in the case as follows:

That deceased came to her death by inhaling chloroform; and we furthur believe that James Wood, the druggist, is censurable in selling the chloroform and not labelling it "poison," or taking the name and residence of the purchaser, in accordance with the law.—New York World.

TELEGRAPH TO ST. CLOUD.—The telegraph line up the Mississippi river cannot be constructed this winter, as the ground is found to be frozen too hard to work to much advantage. As soon as spring opens, the work of setting the poles which are being got out now, will commence. The line will be completed to Anoka about May 1st. The balance of the line to St. Cloud is under contract to be completed by June 15th, and will thereafter be steadily constructed to Fort Abercrombie and Pembina. Four thousand poles are being cut and delivered now.

From La Crosse to Milwaukee a new line is to be built and finished by July 15th with new poles and two wires throughout.

The construction of these lines will give our merchants additional business facilities. One line more needed than any other, however—that up the Minnesota Valley—does not seem to be progressing very fast. It should be built at an early day. The enterprising communities up the Minnesota cannot do without a line much longer.—St. Paul Press.

The Responsibility

Said the wife of a merchant not blessed with children, 'O I think so much of my birds. Mrs F. makes a pet of her dog, wouldn't take a hundred dollars for it, but I choose birds I must have pets something to love, or life would be too dreary.'

A friend responded, 'Why not, then, take some motherless infant, something with human feelings, that can return your love and sympathy, and give you at the same time the consciousness that you are doing good?'

'O, the responsibility is to great. I would certainly do so but for this one consideration.

But which is the greater responsibility doing or refusing to feed or pet a bird, for nature has provided a full supply for its wants. It would never pine for human care, has no immortal powers to culture and train for endless life. But there are hundreds of little children bereft desolate making silent appeals for love and pity—that sympathy, given to soulless objects, or selfishly pent up in hearts made to be expended and happified by its legitimate exercise. Let maternal love be given to these dear children made in the image of God, and you may polish gems for the Savior's crown, perform work for which He will surely pay thee thy wages.—Let it be withheld and sin and satan claim the victim you refuse to succor, then space if you can, cycles of woe in which the last spirit shall move to endless ages lost through your neglect, and when you have summed up the aggregate of its sorrows and measured the results of its influence for evil, look back to the point where you might have rescued it from all this, and tell us then and there by which act taking or refusing to take a friendless child, cast in its helplessness upon a wicked world to be trained up or to come up to bless or blight while ages roll along? Such were our cogitations as we thought of the lady and her pet and her dread of the re sponsibilty. Advocate and Guardian.

SHUTTING UP A COPPERHEAD.—Coming to the city the other morning upon a river boat, ex-Gov. Pollock was put in communication with a noisy copperhead. The man was rather turbulently seeking to convince some gentlemen present that the draft is unconstitutional. He was taken down by the ex-Governor in good style.

'The draft is unconsti tutional is it asked the Governor.

'Of course it is.'

'Well is volunteering unconstitutional?'

'Certainly not, Volunteering is all right enough. That is the way our army should be formed.'

Well have you volunteered to do service?'

'No.'

'Have you given any of your sons or your household to the cause of liberty— have you endeavored to get any of them to volunteer?'

'No I have not.''

'Have you given anything towards bounty to those who volunteered, or to the aid of sick and wounded soldiers?'

'I shall answer no such impertinent questions' said the man.

'Very well.' said the ex-Governor 'You are a very fair specimen of the class of men who cry out that the draft is unconstitutional. You don't volunteer yourself; you give nothing to the invalid soldiers in the hospital or the families of those who are absent on the field of battle; you don't seek to inspire others with patriotism, for you have none yourself, and I believe that so far from doing this you have rather sought to discourage men from serving the country.'

'He has he has,' said several voices together. 'You've drawn his portrait Governor, as well as though you had known him all his life. He's a fair specimen of the men who blather about the unconstitutionality of the draft. They do all they can against the cause without getting behind a prison door, and are meaner than any rebel to be found in arms.'

The man, lividly pale, turned away.—He was in to large a minority to resent the evidence against him. He had nothing more to say at that moment about the unconstitutionality of the draft.

The Weekly Union.

United States Official Paper.

Mankato, Friday, Feb. 12, 1864.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1864,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Legislative Matters.

Mr. Porter has introduced into the Senate a bill authorizing the Commissioners of Blue Earth County to issue bonds to the amount of $10,000 for building Bridges in the County.

The State has passed a series of resolutions endorsing the President and his acts. Senator Porter from this district voted against them.

The House has decided to enlist in the military service at the close of the present session.

A bill to tax dogs for the protection of sheep owners has been introduced in the Senate. After a long debate it was referred back to the Committee

Mr. Wiswell has introduced a bill to provide for the support of families of volunteers. It allows $3 a month to wife and $1 a month each child under twelve.

Mr. Latimer has introduced a bill to change the Western boundary line of Faribault County and the Eastern boundary of Martin County, subject to a vote of the people.

The First Regiment coming Home.

Goveror Miller has received a dispatch from Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, stating that the noble first Minnesota would start for home on the 7th inst. They will probably arrive in St. Paul to-morrow. Preparations are being made there to give them a brilliant reception.

The Post Office at Silver Creek, Wright county, Minnesota, has been discontinued.

The following Postmasters have been appointed:

Michael Donahue, Faxon, Sibley county, Minn., vice W. Cutring, declined.

Henry Hillman, Watab, Benton county, Minn., vice D. Oilliman, resigned.

The Test Oath.

The following is the test oath adopted in the Senate, about which there has been so much debate:

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof; that I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel or encouragement to to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have neither sought nor accepted nor attempted to xercise the functions of any officee whatever under any authority or pretended authority in hostility to the United States; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended government, authority, power or constitution within the United States' hostile or inimical thereto.

And I do further swear (or affirm) that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will defend and support the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegeiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion: and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God.

The above oath was adopted by act of Congress a year ago, and has been administered ever since to Federal officers. No loyal man can object to it.

Another Regiment of Infantry.

Gov Miller has received a dispatch stating that the Government has granted authority to raise another regiment of infantry in this State.

The same bounty will be paid as to former regiments.

The State Central Committee has issued a call for a state Convention to be held in St Paul March 2d, for the purpose of selecting delegates to represent Minnesota in the National Convention. We shall publish the call next week.

We understand that Senator Wilkinson has introduced a bill making Mankato the terminus of the Winona Railroad. We shall know more of it soon.

Red Wing is the banner town of the State. She has furnished one hundred and twelve men more than her quota.

Magor Hatch has at Pembina ninety-three Sioux prisoners, men women and children.

THE NEW YORK Observer says that Rev. Mr. Milburn, the blind Methodist preacher, whose lectures in this State last season will be remembered, has announced to his congregation that he had become a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

No More Small Pox at Blue Earth City.

The following communication we received last week just after our paper was issued. We insert it with pleasure.

BLUE EARTH CITY, Feb. 3d, 1864.

EDITOR UNION.—As attending physician to Mrs. Neville and child of this city, who have lately been afflicted with the Small Pox, I have the pleasure to state that they are now convalescent. There are no more cases of this disease in the neighborhood, and there is no probability of there being any more very soon, as there are now no indications of any one having caught the infection from these persons, and the whole community, almost, having taken the wise precaution of being vaccinated.

Judicious nursing is usually of more importance in such cases, than the administration of much medicine. Mrs. Winn, who kindly attended Mrs. Neville and child during their sickness, is deserving of much praise and gratitude for her valuable services.

You will please publish this statement, so as to correct any misapprehension that may exist in the mind of the public, in reference to the prevalence of this dreadful disorder in this community, which might have resulted from an article relating thereto, which appeared in your columns sometime since.

Respectfully Yours,
R. R. FOSTER.

Literary Notices.

The February number of the Lady's Friend is on our table, and we take pleasure in commending it to the favor of the public. The present number is the second issue of volume first, and its typographical appearance and plates are such as will gain it friends in every home circle. We copy the publishers notice as follows:

The Februrary number leads off with a beautiful steel plate, engraved in the highest style of art, called "THE SYLVAN RETREAT." Then follows a splendid DOUBLE richly colored Fashion Plate. Then a new and popular piece of music, "Kind friends are near her," being an answer to "Who will care for Mother now." This piece of music, itself, is worth the price of the number. Then a striking engraving of the "Rescue of Arthur Steele," illustrative of an interesting story called "Olive's Trial." Then, in the body of the book, fifteen pages of engravings, devoted to the Fashions, Work Table, Novelties, Flowers, &c.

As to the literary matter, we may simply note the following among other articles: "Olive's Trial; "The Coquett's Fate." by Mrs. Spencer; "Mabel's Mission;" "Woman's Noblest Rights; "The Maid of Minnehaha," with a handsome illustration; "The Snow-Flake's Story," by Sarah T. Bolton; "The Sorrows of Estelle La Maye," an original story by the distinguished English authoress, Mary Howitt; "Euthanasia," by Annie F. Kent; "How they do it," (a plea for widowers, and first rate,) by Marion Harland; The Secret Room," by Arthur Hampton; "Our Love," by J. A. Dorgan; &c &c &c. Making a collection, artistic and literary, of the greatest interest to every lady—to say nothing of the sterner sex. Price $2 a year; two copies for $3. Deacon & Peterson, Publishers. 319 Walnut Street Philadelphia.

THE LITERARY COMPANION.—Every week we have the pleasure of perusing Gleasons Literary Companion, which has just entered upon its fifth volume with a reputation surpassed by none of the literary papers of the land. Its editorials have the true ring and shows the editor to be possessed with a fund of good sound sense. Every family ought to have it as a parlor Companion.

The Horticulturalist for February is at hand, and we find in it a great deal of interesting matter pertaining to the farm and garden. This monthly treats upon Horticulture, especially, and is more valuable than any of its kind ever published. "Hints upon garden culture," "Ice Houses;" "An Ornamental Fruit and vegetable garden," "Wayside thoughts upon Architecture," will well repay perusal, and are worth the subscription price of two dollars.

The Postmaster General has issued instructions to the P. M. at St. Paul to put up all mail for Pembina and places beyond in through bags, not to be opened on the way.

A Dictator for the South.

The Winona Republican has the following pungent remarks on the appointing of a military dictator for the South.

The rebels have come to such straits as to be seriously talking of the propriety of appointing a military dictator, in accordance with the practice of the Roman republic in times of great perplexity and peril. Mr. Foote wants Gen. Lee appointed and if such a measure is adopted Gen. Lee will undoubtedly receive the appointment. The accounts from all quarters of the Confederacy of demoralization and disaffection seem to be pressing the government on to this last resort. At the North it may be difficult to understand what a dictator could do more than the present Richmond authorities have already done to bolster up the failing fortunes of the Confederacy. They have taken all the people's money; they have forced into the service all the able-bodied men; they have forcibly detained the veterans whose time is about to expire; they have enforced military discipline by carrying out to the letter all the severities of military law; they have hunted up stragglers from their armies with bloodhounds, as they used to hunt their slaves; they have forcibly taken food and provisions from their people to feed their armies and if there is any other act which the most despotic counsels can suggest we venture to say they have tried it. If a dictator is the last hope of the Confederacy, that hope is a very slim one.

Raising the Wages of Privates.

W. G. Brownslow, editor of the Knoxville Whig, says he was in a large war meeting in Cincinnati, three weeks ago, in which resolutions were adopted by acclamation, calling on Congress to increase the pay of privates in the Federal army to twenty dollars per month!

We hope and believe it will be done. Our Government has money and credit, and the brave men in the ranks, who do the fighting and hard service, deserve better pay. Let the brave volunteers in the ranks of the privates and all non commissioned officers have increased pay. Let them have $20 per month, and that at once. They earn it, and their families need it,

The Evening Post says a lady in New York, remarkable for the acuteness and accuracy of her observation of life and society bears her testimony to a remarkable physiological fact, owing to moral causes, which is worth stating for the purpose of its being verified. She affirms that of the births taking place in that city, those which occur in families whose attachment to the Union is decided and zealous, are mostly boys, while in families in which there is a decided sympathy for the secession cause they are girls. The observation of our readers may help them to instances confirming the fact, or showing it to be a mistake. It has often been said that in countries wasted by long wars which carry off the male population, the male births largely predominate.

Congress has under consideration, the question of establishing a money order system in connection with the Post Office. If we understand the matter, it contemplates that any persons desiring to send money by mail, can deposit it in the Post Office, and take an order or draft on the Post Office where it is desired to be sent. Its chief advantage will be the speed, safety and cheapness with which money can be transmitted. It is not so important, however, as it would have been before the excellent system of expressage which prevails was established. The Post Office money order system has existed in England for a long time.

We are frequently in receipt of inquiries as to where and how copies of the monthly report may be obtained. You should be able to obtain them from the officers of your County Agricultural Society. If he fails to send it apply to Isaac Newton, commissioner of Agriculture Washington, D. C., stating your case

A dishonest Quartermaster, named Samuel Black, just tried by courtmartial at Louisville, has been sentenced to be dismissed the service with the loss of all pay that is due him to be fined $10,000, and be imprisoned for two years—and if the fine is not paid, five thousand days are to be added to his imprisonment, being at the rate of two dollars per day.

NEWS IEMS.

THE whole number of National, banks organized on the 12th of January was two hundred and eight having an aggregate capital of $92,234,200, divided among twenty-three States and the District of Columbia. Since the 12th a dozen banks have been added to the above, with capital of nearly $2,500,000.

Robert Grignon perished in a snow drift near his own house on New Year's day, about eight miles from Oshkosh, Wisconsin. He was widely known as the warrior who captured Black Hawk.

Quantrell is reported in the vicinity of Gaines Landing. He recently visited a house at that point carried off the owner, and took out goods with the intention of burning them. The lady gave them $20 to desist the undertaking, which they agreed to do. She went off to get assistance and next morning they burned the house, The owner was consequently released. Quantrell declares that it makes no difference with him whether the war ends or not as he is not connected with the Confederate army. His men have burned some cotton but no boats have been fired into of late.

The total vote polled in the recent Territorial election in Idaho was 7,912, of which Governor Wallace, the Union candidate, received 4,389, and Judge Cannady, opposition, received 3,523, giving the former a clear majority of 866 votes. In the Council there are six Unionists and one opposition and in the House ten Unionists and three opposition.

A gentleman just arrived in St. Louis from the Idaho country, with $30,000 in gold coin, dust, and nuggets, gives a glowing account of the mines there, which are said to be "turning out immense wealth," He says:

In Idaho nothing goes as a circulating medium but gold dust. Every man carries his little buckskin pouch and no matter what his purchase is, he pays for it in the precious legal tender of the realm, which is weighed out on scales kept for the purpose, whether the article bought be a cigar a horn of whiskey or something of more utility and value. The minimum of values is a quarter of a dollar and the weights are graduated from that sum up. In the region of Sinking Water and Bannock the population is about 7,000.

VALUABLE FOR THE SOLDIERS. Browns Bronchial Troches will be found valuable to the Soldiers in camp exposed to sudden changes,—affording prompt relief in cases of coughs, colds, etc. For officers and those who over-tax the voice, they are useful in relieving Irritated Throats, and will render articulation easy, As there are imitations, be sure to OBTAIN the genuine.

General Grant in addition to his military abilities, has a decided talent for silence. He arrived at Louisville, Ky., on the 11th, and was cordially received but refused to make a speech getting Gen. Leslie Coombs to say for him that he new nothing about speech-making, and had no disposition to learn.

A LUDICROUS INCIDENT.—A ludicrous incident occurred in the House to-day, Mr. Kinney, of Utah, rose to an explanation. He called Fernando Wood to account for his remarks in his speech of yesterday in reference to the Mormon rebellion.

'Would not any man rebel,' said the honorable Mormon, 'If his wives and children were attacked? Would that be treason?' This brought down the House and perceiving he had put his foot in it he made the matter worse by saying: 'I meant wife and children.' How many wives has Kinney, gentlemen!'

TREMBLING AT BEAST BUTLER,—The Rebels are disgusted with Butter. They call him 'Beast.' They proclaim him outlawed. They offer a price for his head, yet are terribly frightened whenever he comes near enough to give them a chance to take him. Just now they are shaking in their boots at Wilmington in anticipation of a visit from him. The Richmond Whig smells mischief there. Butler is coming it says and if he takes Wilmington, Charleston falls by a rear attack. Why does Butler persist in making himself so very disagreeable to the Richmond gentry?

A convention of Plow makers in the western States recently held a meeting in Chicago, and issued a circular notifying the public that the price of Plows has been largely advanced from the present rates made necessary by the heavy advance in iron and steel, and that hereafter all sales will be for cash.

An Abortive Raid Towards Richmond—Alarm in the City.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Gen. Butler's forces under command of Brig. Gen. Wistar, marched from Yorktown via New Kent Court House. The Cavalry arrived at 2:30 yesterday morning at Bottom's Bridge across the Chickahominy ten miles from Richmond, for the purpose of making a raid into Richmond and endeavoring by surprise to liberate our prisoners there. The cavalry reached the bridge at the time appointed, marching in sixteen hours and a half a distance of forty-seven miles. A force of infantry followed in their rear for the purpose of supporting them. It was expected to surprise the enemy at Bottom's Bridge, who had for some time only a small force there. The surprise failed because, as the Richmond Examiner today says, a Yankee deserter gave information in Richmond of the intended movement.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 9.—A special dispatch from Fortress Monroe to the American, from Mr C. C. Fulton, who is at City Point, says the rebel flag of truce, with Commissioner Ould and Capt. Hatch and three officers arrived at City Point on Sunday. Two citizens, prisoners, were brought down. They were both Maryland men. They brought exciting news from Richmond, which they represented was in a state of most feverish excitement from midnight on Saturday the bells of the city were rung, and men were rushing through the streets, crying, 'To arms! To arms! The Yankees are coming! The Yankees are coming!' During the remainder of the night, there was intense commotion everywhere visible. The Home Guard was called, and the tramp of armed men could be heard in all directions. Cannon were hauled through the streets, women and children were hurrying to and fro, and there were all the evidences of such a panic as has seldom been witnessed in Richmond.

The 1st Alabama regiment of colored infantry was recruited at Corinth, where they are at present located, in May last. On the first of January, instant, there were present in camp for duty 952 men, thirty-nine commissioned and fourteen non commissioned white officers. J. M. Alexander is the Colonel; J. M. Irvin Lieut, Col,' and E. M. Low, Major. Not one private or officer in the regiment is under arrest, and only four men are in the hospital.

One very good feature in this regiment is the organization of schools. Each company is organized into a separate school, which is taught by teachers hired for that purpose from the North. They are paid by a voluntary contribution from the soldiers of from fifty to one dollar per capital each month. The soldiers evince great interest in their books, which they take out on picket with them and they appear to acquire knowledge as readily as white children. They are under excellent discipline, and like military service very much.

The Galena Democrat tells of a man, who, in a buggy, was slowly passing a farmhouse, in the neighborhood of Warren one of the cold days last week. The good women of the house thinking that he must be very cold called to him to come in and warm himself. He made no reply but turning neither to the right or left kept slowly on his way. The lady fearing that the man would freeze—knowing that there was no house for five miles in the direction he was going—requested her husband to follow him and induce him to stop and warm himself. He did so, and coming up, found him frozen stiff, dead with whip in one hand and lines in the other.

The Chicago Tribune of Thursday says:

Capt. Clayton, of the 1st Minnesota Battery, arrived in the city last evening, with seventy-seven recruits for his Battery, and all were comfortably entertained at the Sailor's Home. The entire Battery has re-enlisted, and will pass through Chicago, in a few days en route for St. Paul. This is an excellent organization, and in the operations in Tennessee and Mississippi has made for itself and its gallant young State an enduring record.

DESERTERS ARRESTED.—Saturday evening upon the arrival of the Milwaukee train, two men named William Walton and Gustav Jellerdt were arrested on the charge of having deserted from a squad of troops sent from Baltimore to join Gen. Pope's command. These men had been in the rebel service, and were captured by the Federals—one at Berlin a few days after the battle of Gettysburg, and the other with a schooner that attempted to run the blockade at Charleston. After being captured they took the oath of allegiance to the United States, and joined the army. On Thursday last in company with a large squad, they left Baltimore to join Pope, and proceeded as far as Milwaukee, where they saw an opportunity to discharge themselves from service without the aid of red tape. They took the cars for Chicago, and on arrival were arrested through information received by telegraph. They will be returned to Milwaukee on Monday or Tuesday, if their identity is established. —Chicago Tribune.

Lieut. Jas. B. Rodgers, Quartermaster 109th Pennsylvania volunteers, has been tried by court-martial and sentenced to be dismissed, for absence without leave. Sentence commuted to forfeiture of pay for the whole period of absence, and a reprimand in general orders. Lieut. Rodgers had the authority of Col. Hopkins, his immediate commander, and two Surgeon's certificates of sickness. The general order publishing the case says: 'His example should be a warning to officers not to leave their command upon a mere Surgeon's certificate, or other insufficient authority.'

IN LUCK FOR A LOCAL ITEM.—The editor of the Chatfield Democrat says the Manterville Express, was so unfortunate as to get burned out of his house last week. The house was saved, but most of the editor's library and his families' wearing apparel was destroyed. We sympathize with McKinney in the loss he has sustained, but almost feel like congratulaitng him on the good fortune of so interesting a local item for his paper. Locals these times are as scarce as hen's teeth.

OUR TERMS.—Many persons apply for this paper and importune us to take less than our regular rates of subscription for the current year.

'I'll take your paper if you'll let me have it for a dollar a year, just as you used to,' says an old 400 acres and money at interest. We suppose so; and we will take what butter you have to sell at a shilling a pound, just as you used to; and your surplus potatoes, if you will let us have them at two shillings a bushel, just as you used to. Friend two years ago we could buy more and better paper for $50 than you can now for $100. Two years ago you were glad to get $2.50 per cord for wood; now you won't sell a stick for less than $4. Two years ago you sold potatoes for two or three shillings; now they are worth six, and you expect to sell some for a dollar before spring. In fact everything you have to sell has doubled in price within two years. Our paper was furnished too low then, and at the low price of $1,50 now it is much cheaper in proportion than the price of anything else,—Rochester Post.

Accouchment of the Princess of Wales.

The Morning Post of January 9th announced this event as follows:

The country will be glad to learn the subjoined announcement notifying that her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales gave birth to a Prince last evening at Frogmore, and that her Royal Highness has passed through the perils of maternity safely and well. It will be noticed by our account of the proceedings on the lake at Frogmore yesterday that the Princess of Wales was enabled to take part in the sports and witness the animated scene in which the Prince played so conspicuous a part and did not return to the royal residence till a late period of the afternoon. The joyful intelligence was received in town late last night by telegram, when information of the event was conveyed to all the Ministers at present resident in the metropolis.

In a paragraph immediately subjoined the Post says that during the afternoon of this memorable Friday the Prince of Wales spent the afternoon on the Virginia Water, his wife regarding his movements with great interest. The Post adds.

His Royal Highness proved himself, a firstrate skater and player, being as active with his hickory stick as he was on his skates, and puzzled many of the most expert players. She Princess left Virginia Water at 4 o'clock.

We learn, on the best authority, says the London Times of the 12th, that the infant Prince though only a seven month's child, is in excellent health. For the information of the gentler portion of our readers, who are curious in these matters, it is stated that the exact weight of the infant Prince after his birth was nine pounds, Her Majesty again visited the Princess and her infant son at Frogmore on Tuesday afternoon and stayed till a late hour after which her majesty returned to the Castle. The late interesting event was expected to have taken place in March, at Marlborough House, where every preparation had been made for the advent of the 'little stranger,' and no provision had been made for the sudden accession to the Prince's family at Frogmore. Flannel and a few other things absolutely necessary were however, hastily procured from the establishment of Messrs. Caley, High street, Windsor, and on Sunday the whole of the articles at Marlborough House were received at Frogmore.

On Tuesday addresses of congratulation were voted by the Court of Common Council to the Queen and Prince and Princess of Wales. The Town Council of Wakefield has voted similar addresses.

On the 16th of November last seven persons, former residents of Canada, were drowned in the Fraser River, British Columbia. A large party of miners on their way down from Williams' Creek to Victoria, having arrived at the mouth of Quesnello River, there engaged two boats in which to run the Faser, thirty of them going in one boat and thirteen in the other. About three and a half miles below the mouth an island divides the river into two channels, through the smaller the current of the Faser rushes forming an exceedingly dangerous 'riffle.' Owing to the ignorance of the steersman of the small boat, they unfortunately took the channel, and the violence of the torrent almost immediately filled the boat with water, the steersman lost control of the craft, and she turned broadside to the stream; the force of the current rolling her over and over, and plunging the whole party into the foaming rapids. Three of the party managed to reach the capsized craft and retained their hold till they were succoured by the following party and three more succeeded although with great difficulty, in swimming to the island from which they also were rescued by the other boat. One of the three, who had $2,500 in gold on his person, finding when within a few feet of the bank, that it was dragging him down, severed the strap which supported the precious burden, and thus succeeded in reaching the shore in safety. The amount of treasure lost was $32,000 of which $4,018 belonged to a miner named Sanderson, who was saved.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY virtue of an execution issued out of the District Court in and for the county of Waseca, state of Minnesota, upon a judgment rendered January 9th, 1859, and docketed January 17th, 1859, in said county, in an action wherein John Hunter and David F. McLauren are plaintiffs, and Benjamin F. Hopewell and George W. Turner, known as Hopewell & Turner, are defendants, and against said defendants for the sum of $174.65, and upon which there now remains due and unpaid the sum of $227,00 and interest, I have levied upon all the right, title and interest which the said John Hunter and David McLauren had on the 9th day of January, 1864, or at any time thereafter, of, in and to the following described lands and real estate in the county of Blue Earth, State of Minnesota, to-wit: South-west quarter of north-east quarter of section number thirty-four, in township one hundred and five, north of range twenty-five west.

Notice is hereby given that I will sell the above described lands and real estate to the highest bidder on Saturday the 26th day of March 1864 at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day at the front door of the office of Register of Deeds in and for the County of Blue Earth in Mankato to satisfy the execution together with costs and intersets thereon. Dated Mankato, Feb. 12th 1864.

E. MIDDLEBROOK,

31 Sheriff of Blue Earth County.

STATE OF MINNESOT, County of Blue Earth In Probate Court, Special Term, Feb. 16th, 1864.

In the matter of the proof and probate of the last will and testament of Frederick Brehr, deceased, late of the county of Blue Earth.

Whereas, an instrument in writing representing to be the last will and testament of Frederick Brehr, deceased, late of the County of Blue Earth, has been filed in this office, and whereas application has been made by William Bierbauer, praying that the same be proven and admitted to probate according to the laws of this State.

Therefore, it is ordered that said application be heard before me, at the Probate office in the village of Mankato, in said county, on the 7th day of March, 1864, at 10 o'clock A. M. And it is further ordered that notice shall be given to all persons interested in said will, of the time and place of said hearing by publication of a copy of this order in the Mankato Weekly Union, a news paper published in said county, once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing. Dated, Feb. 12th 1864.

31 DAVID WILCOX, Judge.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the condition of an Indenture of Mortgage executed by Servais Tonner of the County of Blue Earth, State of Minnesota to Charles Thompson & George W. Whittelsey then of the same County, bearing date the 12th day of December 1860, and recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds of said County on the same day at 12 o'clock M in Book "D," of Mortgages, on pages 490, 491 and 492. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are therein described as, Lot No. One (1) in section No. One (1) Township number one hundred and eight (108) North of Range number Twenty-seven (27) west, according to the government survey, and containing Forty-five 80-100th acres of land, be the same more or less, and also Lot number Two (2) and the south west quarter of the north west quarter of section number six (6) in Township number one hundred and eight (108) north of range twenty-six (26) west—containing seventy-seven 32-100th acres, be the same more or less—and also the north west quarter of section No. twenty seven (27) in township No, one hundred and five (105) north of range No. twenty-five (25) west, according to the Government survey containing one hundred and sixty acres of land be the same more or less—all situated in the county of Blue Earth and State of Minnesota, together with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging.

And whereas accompanying said mortgage is a waiver of all right of redemption by said mortgagor pursuant to an act of the Legislature of Minnesota entitled, "An act to regulate foreclosure of real estate," approved March 10th, 1860, which said waiver was executed acknowledged and recorded at the same time of said mortgage.

There is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of One Thousand Four hundred eighty-eight 24-100th dollars, ($ 1488:24) and no part thereof has been paid and no suit at law has been commenced for the recovery thereof

Therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, the above described premises will be sold at public vendue at the Office of the Register of Deeds in said County of Blue Earth on the 19th day of March in the year 1864 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to satisfy the amount then due and unpaid on said mortgage at that time together with the taxes, costs and expenses allowed by law.—Dated Feb 5th, 1864

Capt Skaro of Co. D. 9th Regiment, has returned to his home in St. Peter.

Three men were sworn into the Third Regiment last Saturday, at Le Sueur, by Lieut. Taylor, of this place.

Next week we shall publish the remarks of Senator Wilkinson, on the bill he introduced giving the 1st Regiment $100 bounty.

But little wheat has been brought into town during the week. The ruling price is 66 cents.

The sleighing on the Winona route between the Agency and Owatonna is excellent. From this place to the Agency the mail and passengers are conveyed in a lumber wagon.

Last week all the recruiting officers in the State were ordered to join their Regiments without delay. They have since been ordered back to their places of rendezvous, and will probably remain until after the draft.

DISCHARGED.—Wm. H. Thompson of Co. E. 9th Regiment, has been discharged from the service on account of ill-health. Will is a fine fellow, and we hope to see him in Mankato ere long.

St Valentine's day comes on Sunday. Already the young folks are purchasing missives to send their sweethearts and lovers. Mrs Oglesby has a good supply of them for sale; so also, have Messrs Lewis & Frisbie.

Dr McMahan, Examining Pension Surgeon, has received all the blanks and instructions pertaining to his office, and is now ready to examine all applicants for pensions. Office and residence in rear of Post Office.

Capt. Dane and family have taken up their quarters at the Clifton House during his stay in the state. He has been quite successful in getting recruits since his return, having secured, we believe six.

We notice that Captain Fisk is lecturing in different towns in the State on the Idaho gold mines, Would it not be well to get him to visit Mankato and deliver a lecture here? It would be interesting.

ATTENTION, BOYS.—Since writing an article in another column, we are glad to learn that Mr. Flower of the Clifton House will give a free supper and dance to the boys of Co. H. of the 2nd and Co. I. of the Fifth Iowa Cavalry, next Thursday evening. Those of the boys who are up country will please be on hand.

The Whig of 76 says that the town of Lura, heretofore organized with the townships of Marples and Dunbar, was recently separately constituted a township of Faribault County. The people of the new town feel very grateful to the County Board for this action in their favor. It is a great convenience to its loyal people in the transaction of all town business, elections, &c.

We notice that Mr. Stine's old reliable picture gallery is again in running operation over J. J. Shaubhut's store. He is prepared to accommodate his old customers, and all new ones, desiring good pictures at reasonable rates. Give him a call.

The bill authorizing the County Commissioners to issue $10,000 bonds for bridge purposes, contains no provision that it should be submitted to a vote of the people. The Commissioners will not care to shoulder the responsibility of issuing these bonds, without first letting the people vote upon it.

SOME time ago, a bill was introduced in the Legislature authorizing the town of Mankato to issue bonds for an amount not to exceed $10,000 for the purpose of building a graded school house,—a desideratum that has long been felt in this place. The provisions of the bill do not oblige the board of Trustees to expend the entire amount for such purpose, but to issue bonds for such amount as may be necessary in the construction of a suitable school building. It has passed the House, and will soon be brought before the Senate for their action. One or two of our citizens, who are always opposed to every ten cent enterprise that looks to the prosperity of our town, or that will increase their tax, have taken the matter in hand, and have become the self-constituted champions of the monied and educational interests of the place. According to their view, if the bill is passed as first drawn, it will prove disastrous to the town, and the profligate school authorities will expend the whole amount in erecting a school house that could be built for less than half that amount. They have therefore circulated quite freely a petition to the Legislature urging that body to change the amount in the bill, and fix it at $4,000. Many of our merchants not fairly understanding the matter were induced to sign it, but have since written to Senator Porter, stating the facts, and their disapproval of the petition.

We hope the bill will pass in its present form. A school house can be built for $6,000 or $7,000, and one creditable to the town cannot be built for much less than that. We have confidence enough in the school authorities to believe that they will be just and liberal, and at the same time economical.

If, after the bill becomes a law, and the proper steps are taken, any one can build a house that will answer the purpose, for $4,000, let us have such a house; but if it takes six, seven or eight thousand dollars, then, by all means let bonds be issued for that amount. But don't limit the issue of these bonds to $4,000, and exhibit a parsimony that will be a lasting disgrace to the town.

Before any of these bonds can be issued the School directors are required to call a meeting by posting up notices, and publishing the same in the town papers, so that the electors of the district can vote upon it.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—Mr. Betz of Vernon Center, has sold his farm of 160 acres of improved land to J. L. Buchwalter, for $1,600 cash. Mr. Betz will return to his former home in New York.

G. G. Young, of Vernon, sold 107 acres of unimproved land to Mr. Buchwalter for $1,000. He paid $750 for it last fall Mr. Buchwalter, we understand, is from Ohio, and intends to reside on his farm. Young is one of the most enterprising geniuses we have met in a long while. During the last six months he has made $1,550 clear gain from two farms that he has sold, and now says that he is going to buy another. If Young isn't a yankee then you don't spell it with a Y. Long may he wave.

SUPPER TO COMPANY H.—But a few more days will elapse before the boys belonging to Co. H. who reside in this vicinity, will have to start for Winona, on their way South. When they first returned, it was proposed by some that a supper should be given them, and other demonstrations of respect made, to show that their services in upholding our glorious flag were appreciated. No efforts to that end have yet been made. We think it proper that they should be thus honored. It is due them. Their services demand it, and no mark of respect which our citizens can show will be a sufficient testimonial of our appreciation of the gallant services they have rendered the country.

ROBBERY.—On Tuesday night, James Eaton, a soldier belonging to the Battery stationed at Fort Ridgely stole from the Clifton House two overcoats, one of them the property of Henry Liscom of Co. H. He also stole from the Mankato House a large buffalo overcoat, belonging to one of the drivers on the Winona route. He was intoxicated shortly before, and had pawned his own coat and one of those he stole at the Clifton for whiskey in a saloon The stolen property was worth about $60, He started for the Fort about twelve o'clock the same night No effort has been made to pursue or arrest him, that we know of.

Randall still meets with success as a dealer in ready made clothing, because he sells cheap and always suits customers.
